GAME PREVIEW

The Oakland Raiders begin a stretch of back-to-back games in Oakland this weekend as they host the Carolina Panthers at Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum on Sunday, Nov. 27 at 1:25 p.m. PT. Including the Silver and Black's contest in Mexico City last week, the game marks the third of four consecutive home games for the team. The game also marks the final game of the year for the Raiders against NFC opponents, as the team has beaten the New Orleans Saints and Tampa Bay Buccaneers, while losing to the Atlanta Falcons. Last week, the Raiders made an international trip to play the Houston Texans in Mexico City on Monday Night Football and pulled out a 27-20, comeback victory. The Panthers played on Thursday Night Football last week, beating the New Orleans Saints, 23-20.

Playing in the first Monday Night Football game outside of the United States, the Raiders overcame a seven-point, fourth-quarter deficit to earn the win over Houston. QB Derek Carr led the way in the final frame, throwing for 186 yards and two touchdowns in the fourth quarter. FB/RB Jamize Olawale led all receivers with 90 yards, including a 75-yard touchdown reception to level the game in the fourth. WR Amari Cooper recorded the game-winning score with 4:43 remaining on a 35-yard catch-and-run. On defense, LB Malcolm Smith had a big game, tying for the team lead with 10 tackles (nine solo), one interception and a key stop on a fourth-and-1 play late in the fourth quarter, giving the ball back to the Oakland offense. DE Khalil Mack and LB Bruce Irvin each recorded a sack in the game, and S Karl Joseph was active all night, racking up 10 tackles.

The Raiders will host the Buffalo Bills next Sunday before getting ready for the division-rival Kansas City Chiefs on Thursday Night Football on Dec. 8. The Panthers will play another game on the West Coast next week, making a visit to the Seattle Seahawks.

NOTABLE CONNECTIONS

Pro Connections

- Raiders Head Coach Jack Del Rio (defensive coordinator) spent one season with the Panthers as defensive coordinator in 2002. During his lone season, he led the Panthers' defense to an NFL best in rushing average against (3.7 yard avg.). That same year, Raiders linebackers coach Sal Sunseri served as a defensive assistant to Coach Del Rio.

- Raiders offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave served as quarterbacks coach and offensive coordinator during his two seasons with Carolina (1999-2000). The Panthers ranked second in the NFL in passing yards per game (260.1 yard avg.) and fourth in scoring in 1999. Musgrave (offensive coordinator) also mentored Panthers QB Joe Webb during their three seasons (2011-2013) together with the Minnesota Vikings.

- Raiders special teams coordinator Brad Seely spent four seasons coaching the special teams unit of the Panthers, earning Special Teams Coach of the Year honors in 1996 for his efforts. That year, Seely's unit led the NFL in opponents average punt return (5.4 yard avg.) and fifth in opponents average kickoff return (20.1).

- Panthers Head Coach Ron Rivera is a native of Fort Ord, Calif., before his family settled in Marina, Calif. He attended Seaside High School in Seaside, Calif., and was a three-sport star in football, basketball and baseball. Coach Rivera is also just the third Latino head coach in NFL history, joining Tom Flores with the Raiders (1979-1987) and Seattle Seahawks (1992-1994) and Tom Fears with the New Orleans Saints (1967-1970).

- Panthers assistant defensive backs/nickels coach Curtis Fuller began his coaching career as a special teams assistant with the Raiders in 2007.

- Panthers assistant defensive backs coach Richard Rodgers participated in the NFL's Minority Internship Program with the Raiders during the 1996 training camp.

- Panthers college scout Joel Patten was a former player for the Los Angeles Raiders from 1991-1992.

College Connections

- Raiders first-round pick S Karl Joseph and Panthers third-round pick CB Daryl Worley patrolled the secondary for West Virginia's defense from 2013-2015 before entering the 2016 NFL Draft together.

- Raiders seventh-round draft pick G Vadal Alexander blocked on the same offensive line at LSU as Panthers G Trai Turner from 2012-2013. The two helped the team rush for a 2,630 yards and a school-record 37 touchdowns on the ground.

- Raiders starting C Rodney Hudson played two seasons (2007-2008) with Panthers K Graham Gano during their time with the Seminoles of Florida State. Additionally, Raiders T Menelik Watson and Panthers WR Kelvin Benjamin spent the 2012 season together on the Seminoles' offense.

- Raiders LB Daren Bates and Panthers QB Cam Newton spent one season together (2010) with the Auburn Tigers, winning the BCS National Championship that year.

Hometown Connections

- Raiders CB David Amerson is a native of Greensboro, N.C., where he grew up and played for Dudley High School. Amerson went on to attend North Carolina State.

PANTHERS SNAPSHOT

Overview: The Panthers entered their 2016 campaign as the reigning NFC champions and appeared in their first Super Bowl since 2003 last season. The team, led by two-time NFL Coach of the Year Head Coach Ron Rivera, got off to a 1-6 start in 2016. Since then, the Panthers have won three of their last four and are coming off a divisional victory against the Saints.

Offense: Arguably the NFL's most dynamic quarterback, QB Cam Newton, a three-time Pro Bowler and the 2015 Most Valuable Player, leads his 15th ranked offense (352.3 yards per game) while recording 11 passing touchdowns and scoring four more on the ground. Although missing three games with an injury, RB Jonathan Stewart leads the team in rushing scores (five), attempts (110) and yards (365). Newton's weapons in the passing game consist of the franchise record holder in yards by a tight end, TE Greg Olsen, and third-year WR Kelvin Benjamin. Olsen, a Pro Bowler the last two seasons, leads the Panthers in both receptions (54) and receiving yards (745), while Benjamin owns the team's lead in receiving touchdowns (four).

Defense: The unquestioned leader of the Panthers' defense, LB Luke Kuechly leads both his team and the NFL in solo tackles this season with 71. Kuechly, manning the middle for the Carolina ball club, has contributed to the league's number two ranked rush defense, holding opponents to just 81.8 yards per game on the ground through 10 games. Twelve-year veteran LB Thomas Davis leads the team and is tied for an NFC South best in takeaways (three) with two interceptions and one fumble recovery on the year. Getting to the quarterback has been a theme for their club this season, posting 30.0 sacks in 10 games, tied for third most in the NFL, with DE Mario Addison's 6.5 leading the way.

2016 HONORS AND AWARDS

QB Derek Carr

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week for his Week 1 game-winning drive against the New Orleans Saints, leading Oakland to a 35-34 victory. After throwing a 10-yard TD pass to WR Seth Roberts with less than a minute left in the game, Carr then found WR Michael Crabtree for a two-point conversion to take the lead for good.

- Named the Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week in Week 4 at Baltimore, leading Oakland to a 28-27 win. Carr led the Raiders on a 6-play, 66-yard drive in 1:24, culminating with a 23-yard, game-winning TD pass to WR Michael Crabtree.

- Named the AFC Offensive Player of the Week, Castrol Edge Clutch Performer of the Week and FedEx Air Player of the Week for his record-setting performance at Tampa Bay in Week 8, lifting the Raiders to a 30-24 win. Carr threw for a franchise-record 513 yards, including a 41-yard TD pass to WR Seth Roberts with 1:45 remaining in overtime, completing 40-of-59 passes with four TDs for a 117.4 passer rating

P Marquette King

- Named the AFC Special Teams Player of the Week for his Week 7 effort in the win against the Jacksonville Jaguars. King punted 5 times for 273 yards (54.6 gross avg. and 50.6 net avg.) with a 60-yard long and four punts placed inside the opponents' 20-yard line and one inside the 10-yard line, and one rush for 27 yards.

DE Khalil Mack

- Named the AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his Week 9 performance in the Raiders' 30-20 victory over the Denver Broncos. Mack recorded three tackles (two solo), two sacks (-17 yards), one tackle for loss, one quarterback hit, one forced fumble, one fumble recovery and one pass defended.

RB Latavius Murray

- Named the FedEx Ground Player of the Week in Week 9 against the Denver Broncos, leading the run game in the 30-20 win. Murray rushed for 114 yards on 20 carries (5.7 avg.) and tied a franchise record with three TDs.

RAIDERS VS. PANTHERS

WHAT TO WATCH FOR VS. CAROLINA

- The Raiders' defense pitching a scoreless first-quarter frame for the sixth time this season. The Silver and Black have allowed a league-low 19 points in first-quarter play this season.
- The Raiders' offensive line registering a sack-free day for the fifth time this season. The Raiders' offense ranks first in the NFL in sacks per pass attempts (2.9 percent) and also in total sacks allowed (11).
- QB Derek Carr passing for 300 yards for the 11th time in his career, moving into a tie for second most in franchise history with Daryle Lamonica.
- Carr posting a passer rating of at least 100 points for the 12th time in his career, moving him into sole possession for eighth most in franchise history. Carr has posted ratings of at least 130 in three games, the most of any Raider through his first two seasons.
- Carr recording four touchdowns for the sixth time in his career, moving him into a tie with Ken Stabler for second most in team history.
- WR Amari Cooper recording 100-plus receiving yards for the 10th time, making him just the third NFL player with 10 100-yard games at 22-years-old or younger. Randy Moss holds the record with 11 such games.
- Cooper recording 30 receiving yards to reach 2,000 career yards, becoming just the seventh player in NFL history with 2,000 yards at 22-years-old or younger.
- Cooper recording 100 receiving yards to bring his season total to 1,000, becoming just the fourth Raider to reach 1,000 receiving yards by Week 12 and the first Raider to do so in the first 12 games of his second season.
- Cooper hauling in eight receptions becoming the eighth NFL player with two 70-catch seasons in his first two seasons
- WR Michael Crabtree improving upon his team-leading six touchdown receptions. His six scores are tied for second most in the AFC this season and also mark the most he has hauled in through the first 10 games of any season in his eight-year career.
- Cooper and Crabtree each eclipsing 100 receiving yards in the same game for the second time this season and the third time in their career.
- P Marquette King improving upon his league-leading 23 punts of 50-yards-or-more this season. He's currently on pace for 37 such punts which would tie a career high set during his rookie campaign in 2013.
- King gaining the outright AFC lead for punts downed inside the 20-yard line. His 22 are currently tied for first in the conference. King is also tied for first in the NFL with punts downed inside the 10-yard line (11). Since the start of 2015, no punter has more punts pinned inside the 10-yard line than King (29).
- DE Khalil Mack recording a sack in six consecutive weeks for the first time in his career. Mack's seven sacks in his last five games are currently the third most in the league over that span.
- Mack recording his third multi-sack game of the season, bringing his career total to eight and tying him for the most such games by a Raider through his first three years.
- Mack recording one sack in the fourth quarter to bring his career total to 13, the second most fourth quarter sacks by a Raider since 1991.
- Mack forcing a fumble, bringing his season total to three after forcing a fumble in consecutive games (Weeks 8 and 9) for the first time in his career. His three this season would be a career best and bring his career total to six, good for the second most by a Raider through their first three seasons.
- RB Latavius Murray recording his third multi-touchdown performance of the season. His eight touchdowns on the ground this season are a career high and are tied for third most in the AFC. His three-touchdown performance in Week 9 is also tied for the most scrimmage touchdowns in a game by any player this season.
- Murray recording his second 100-yard performance of the season and first time recording at least 100 yards on the ground in back-to-back games during his four-year career with the Silver and Black.
- S Reggie Nelson recording his 34th career interception. His 33 are currently tied for a NFL best among active safeties since 2007.
- Nelson recording his sixth takeaway of the season. His five takeaways currently leads the team, while tied for second most in the NFL.
- T Donald Penn extending his streak of 150 consecutive starts, the second longest streak among active offensive linemen.

A WIN WOULD...

...give the Raiders a record of 9-2 on the season, the first time starting 9-2 since 2000 when they posted a 12-4 record and advanced to the AFC Championship game.

...be the first win against Carolina since 2004 and tie the all-time series record at 3 apiece. The Panthers have won the last two matchups both by a score of 17-6.

...give the Raiders a five-game win streak, marking their longest since 2002 when the Silver and Black advanced to Super Bowl XXXVII with an 11-5 record.

...maintain Oakland's possession of first place in the AFC while holding the tiebreaker over the Patriots and ensure the Raiders first winning record since they finished the 2002 season with a record of 11-5.

...improve Oakland's home record to 4-2. The Raiders are 5-0 away from home, their best start on the road since 1977 when the Raiders finished with an 11-3 record and advanced to the AFC Championship game.

- The Raiders won 27-20 in Mexico City to bring their record to 8-2, their first such start since 2001 when they advanced to the AFC Divisional Round of the playoffs and the Silver and Black's first regular season victory during international play.
- The Silver and Black have now recorded their first four-game winning streak since the 2002 season when the club made their last Super Bowl appearance.
- The win marks the third win in the last four games against Houston, and brings the all-time series record to 4-6.
- The Raiders improve their record against AFC opponents this season to 3-1, and now are in possession of first place in the AFC while holding the tiebreaker over the Patriots.
- Oakland improves its all-time Monday Night Football record to 38-27-1, while earning the first ever international Monday Night Football victory in NFL history.

Game Themes

- The Raiders, who gave up just three points in the opening quarter against the Texans, have allowed a league-low 19 points in the first quarter play this season. Oakland has allowed just six points in the last four games.
- The Raiders offensive line registered a sack-free day for the fourth time this season. Oakland's pass protectors lead the NFL in total sacks allowed (11).
- The running backs led the way for the Raiders' receiving game, hauling in 11 receptions for 199 yards on the evening.

QB Derek Carr

- The first touchdown of the game came on a 17-yard connection, QB Derek Carr to RB Jalen Richard, on the opening drive of the second quarter.
- With his ninth completion of the game (941st of his career), Carr moved into third all-time for most completions in a player's first 42 career games.
- Carr tied the game at 20 apiece early in the second quarter with a 75-yard touchdown pass to FB/RB Jamize Olawale, the sixth touchdown pass of 50-yards-or-more of his career to tie him for eighth most by a Raider with Jim Plunkett.
- On his third touchdown of the game, a 35-yard pass to WR Amari Cooper with 4:51 left in the game, Carr surpassed 10,000 passing yards to become the 12th player in NFL history to do so in 42 games or less. Carr is just the eighth Raider to eclipse 10,000 passing yards.
- Carr recorded three touchdowns to become just the third Raider with 20 passing touchdowns in three straight seasons, joining Rich Gannon and Daryle Lamonica, who are both tied for first with four consecutive seasons.
- Carr's three-touchdown game marked the 11th of his career, tying Tom Flores for fourth most in team history.
- Carr's touchdown to Cooper marked his eighth game-winning drive in the fourth quarter/overtime since 2015, the second most in the NFL.
- Carr finished the game with 295 passing yards on 21-of-31 attempts (67.7 percent) with three touchdowns and one interception for a passer rating of 117.0, marking the 11th time Carr has eclipsed a passer rating of 100.0.

RB Jalen Richard

- On the opening play of the second quarter, RB Jalen Richard hauled in a QB Derek Carr pass for a 17-yard touchdown.
- Richard's first career receiving touchdown capped off an eight-play, 75-yard drive that lasted 4:35.
- Richard totaled three catches for 50 yards with one touchdown and a long of 29 yards.

WR Amari Cooper

- With the game tied at 20, WR Amari Cooper took a first-down pass 35 yards to the end zone with 4:51 remaining in the game. The touchdown gave the Raiders their fourth, fourth-quarter comeback of the year.
- Cooper finished with four receptions for 57 yards and a touchdown.

FB/RB Jamize Olawale

- With 10:57 left in the game, FB/RB Jamize Olawale set a new career high, grabbing a 75-yard touchdown reception from QB Derek Carr to even the score at 20 apiece. Olawale's touchdown reception was the longest by a Raiders running back since 1995.
- Olawale owns the two of the three longest passing plays of the season for Raiders with tonight's 75-yard touchdown reception and a 68-yard catch-and-run in Week 8 against the Buccaneers, his previous career long.
- Olawale led both teams with 90 yards receiving on three catches.

DE Khalil Mack

- For the first time in his career, DE Khalil Mack recorded a sack in five consecutive weeks when he took down Brock Osweiler on the final play of the first half for a 9-yard loss. Mack now has seven sacks in his last five games, the third most in the league during that span.
- Mack finished the night with three total tackles and one sack.

LB Malcolm Smith

- LB Malcolm Smith recorded the first interception of the game and second Raiders takeaway when he picked off Brock Osweiler with 1:38 left in the first half.
- The interception marked Smith's first of the season, with his last pick coming against the Chargers on Oct. 25, 2015.
- Smith finished the night tying a game-high 10 total tackles (nine solo) with one interception and one pass defensed.
- The 10 tackles notched by Smith are a 2016 best.

LB Bruce Irvin

- LB Bruce Irvin recorded his third sack of the season, taking down Brock Osweiler for a 4-yard loss with 3:25 remaining in the fourth quarter.
- Irvin tied a game-high 10 total tackles (nine solo), adding two tackles for loss and one sack.
- Irvin's 10 tackles doubled his previous season high of five recorded on Oct. 16 against the Chiefs.

P Marquette King

- With a punt of 51 yards in the first quarter and a 59-yarder in the second quarter, P Marquette King extended his league-leading punts of 50-yards-or-more to 23.
- King punted three times for 159 yards (53.0 avg.) with 59-yard long and pinned the Texans inside the 20-yard line once.

K Sebastian Janikowski

- After the Raiders recorded the first touchdown of the game, RB Taiwan Jones recovered a muffed catch on the ensuing kickoff to give the Silver and Black the ball back at the Texans 19-yard line. Jones' recovery resulted in a 19-yard field goal by K Sebastian Janikowski, giving the Raiders a 10-3 advantage.
- Janikowski recorded his second field goal of the night, a 20-yarder with 2:42 left in the third, to cap off a 12-yard, 73-yard drive lasting 5:53.
- Janikowski finished with two field goals and three PATs, totaling nine points on the evening.

HEAD COACHING MATCHUP

JACK DEL RIO

Jack Del Rio was named the 19th head coach in the 56-year history of the Oakland Raiders franchise on Jan. 15, 2015. The appointment marked a homecoming for Del Rio, who was raised in nearby Hayward, Calif.

In his first season with the Raiders, Del Rio oversaw significant improvements as the Raiders more than doubled the previous year's win total. Oakland moved up 15 spots in the NFL rankings in turnover ratio, finishing 17th in the league (+1) after ranking 32nd in 2014 (-15). The team improved in five major statistical categories on offense alone, making gains in total offense, rushing, passing, points per game and third-down efficiency. On defense, the Raiders improved in rushing defense, points per game allowed and third-down defense. Six Raiders were selected for the Pro Bowl, matching a franchise record set in 1994.

As defensive coordinator with the Denver Broncos from 2012-14, Del Rio was part of three-straight AFC West titles and helped lead Denver to an AFC Championship and appearance in Super Bowl XLVIII following the 2013 campaign. It marked his second stint under Head Coach John Fox, as the two also spent the 2002 season together in Carolina. In all, he has coached 24 players to a total of 33 Pro Bowl selections.

Prior to joining the Broncos in 2012, Del Rio spent nine seasons at the helm in Jacksonville. During his head coaching tenure (2003 to 2011) with the Jaguars, the club ranked sixth in the NFL in yards per game allowed (317.3) and eighth in points per game allowed (20.3).

Under Del Rio, the Jaguars made two playoff appearances in 2005 and 2007, highlighted by the club's first postseason win in eight seasons with a 31-29 road victory against the Pittsburgh Steelers in a 2007 AFC Wild Card Game.

During his lone season as a defensive coordinator with Carolina in 2002, he inherited the NFL's worst defense statistically (371.4 yards per game allowed) and turned it into the league's second-ranked unit (290.4 yards per game allowed).

As linebackers coach for the Baltimore Ravens from 1999-2001, Del Rio tutored a talented group that included Peter Boulware, Ray Lewis and Jamie Sharper. Baltimore's 2000 team set the NFL 16-game record by allowing only 165 points while recording four shutouts and forcing a league-best 49 turnovers.

A veteran of 11 seasons as an NFL linebacker, he was selected in the third round (68th overall) of the 1985 NFL Draft by New Orleans and went on to make the NFL's All-Rookie Team and earn the Saints' Rookie of the Year award. For his career, he played 160 games in the regular season and totaled 1,078 tackles, 12 sacks and 13 interceptions.

Del Rio was a four-year starter at the University of Southern California, where he earned consensus All-American honors as a senior and was runner-up for the Lombardi Award, given to the nation's best lineman or linebacker. Named co-MVP of the 1985 Rose Bowl, Del Rio recorded 340 career defensive stops, including 58 tackles for a loss. A standout catcher on the USC baseball team, Del Rio was drafted by the Toronto Blue Jays in 1981. He was inducted into the USC Athletic Hall of Fame in May 2015.

Del Rio was a three-sport star in football, baseball and basketball at Hayward High School in Hayward, Calif. He earned a degree in political science from the University of Kansas while playing for the Chiefs.

Born on April 4, 1963, in Castro Valley, Calif., Del Rio and his wife, Linda, have three daughters, Lauren, Hope and Aubrey, and a son, Luke, who is a quarterback at the University of Florida.

RON RIVERA

In his sixth season in Carolina, Ron Rivera is known around the league as a teacher with an innate ability to build his team around the strengths of his players. A two-time NFL Coach of the Year, Rivera inherited a 2-14 Carolina team as a rookie head coach in 2011 and guided them back to relevance in 2015 as Carolina won their second NFC Championship in franchise history, third consecutive NFC South division title and appeared in Super Bowl 50. Carolina finished the season with a franchise-best 17-2 record, including home playoff victories over Seattle in the Divisional round and Arizona in the NFC Championship game, before losing to Denver in Super Bowl 50. Carolina is one of four teams to reach the Divisional round in each of the last three seasons.

Brought to Carolina for his defensive expertise, Rivera has not disappointed as the Panthers have put together four consecutive top 10 finishes in yards allowed, joining Seattle as the only teams to accomplish the feat. Like Rivera, the Panthers' rebound has been steady and solid, starting with six wins his first season in 2011 and seven victories in 2012 before registering three consecutive division championships starting in 2013 when he earned his first Associated Press NFL Coach of the Year award. Laying a foundation that includes back-to-back rookies of the year in quarterback Cam Newton and linebacker Luke Kuechly, Rivera has blended veteran and young talent into productive units on both sides of the ball.

Carolina earned its third consecutive NFC South title and claimed the top seed in the NFC for the first time in franchise history in 2015, a season that ended with Rivera being named NFL Coach of the Year for the second time in three seasons. The Panthers became just the seventh team in the Super Bowl era to post a 15-1 or better record in the regular season.

Rivera worked with the San Diego Chargers from 2007-10. He coached inside linebackers before taking over as the team's defensive coordinator midway through the 2008 season.

From 2004-06, Rivera oversaw the Chicago Bears defense, engineering the unit to two top-five finishes in the league. During Rivera's last season with the Bears in 2006, the defense paced the NFL with 44 takeaways and finished fifth in the league in total defense and third in scoring defense, helping propel Chicago to the NFC Championship and an appearance in Super Bowl XLI.

Prior to becoming a defensive coordinator, Rivera spent five seasons from 1999-2003 as the linebackers coach for the Philadelphia Eagles, who advanced to the NFC Championship game in each of his final three seasons.

Rivera gained his first coaching experience with the Bears as defensive quality control coach from 1997-98. He is just the third Latino head coach in NFL history, joining Tom Flores with the Raiders from 1979-87 and Seattle Seahawks from 1992-94 and Tom Fears with the New Orleans Saints from 1967-70.

Selected in the second round of the 1984 NFL Draft by Chicago, Rivera played all nine of his pro seasons with the Bears. Primarily an outside linebacker, he appeared in 149 games with 62 starts (including 12 postseason contests with six starts) and posted 392 tackles, 7.5 sacks, five forced fumbles, four fumble recoveries, nine interceptions and 15 passes defended. Rivera was a member of six NFC Central division title teams and a Super Bowl XX championship team in 1985.

Rivera and his wife, Stephanie, have two children, Christopher and Courtney.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The Raiders — who began play in the American Football League in 1960 — enter their 57th year of professional football competition, including the last 46 as a member of the National Football League.

In five memorable decades — the 1960s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the 2000s — the Raiders have been dominant in professional football since Al Davis first pledged in 1963 to build the finest organization in pro sports.

During these decades of dominance, the Raiders have won an AFL championship, four American Football Conference championships, and three world championships of professional football, participated in five Super Bowls, played in 14 championship games, won or tied for 17 division championships, had 21 playoff seasons, finished 34 seasons at .500 or better and played in 40 postseason games.

Pro football's dynamic organization placed first in the AFC West in 2000, 2001 and 2002 despite playing among the toughest schedules in the NFL in each of those seasons. With their appearance in Super Bowl XXXVII, the Raiders became the first NFL team to have had a season end in the Super Bowl in four different decades.

The Raiders are the only team to have been in Super Bowls in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s and the 2000s.

The Silver and Black are the only AFC team — and one of just two NFL teams (Minnesota) — to have a season that advanced to the conference championship game in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s, the '90s and the 2000s.

The Raiders are one of only three original AFL teams to have captured three world championships of professional football with Super Bowl victories. The Raiders are one of only four AFC teams to have won more than one Super Bowl since 1980.

In their five Super Bowl appearances, the Raiders have been led by four head coaches and started four quarterbacks.

With four postseason victories, the Raiders were the first of the AFC West teams to win multiple postseason contests in the new millennium by six years.

Since 1963, when Al Davis first took over the failing Oakland franchise that had struggled to win only nine of 42 league games in the initial three seasons of the new AFL and pledged to build the finest organization in sports, the Raiders have dominated professional football in terms of consistent victory. During those memorable 56 years in Oakland and Los Angeles, the Raiders have won 444 league games, tied 11 and lost 397.

"Commitment to Excellence" has never been an idle phrase to those who have proudly represented the Raiders organization during the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium as shown by their domination of pro football.

More than 20 of the great players who proudly wore the Silver and Black, as well as Owner-Leader Al Davis and legendary Head Coach John Madden, have been enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. The Raiders have also produced five Coaches of the Year.

In addition, 66 Pro Bowl players have made 188 Pro Bowl appearances representing the Silver and Black. In 1970, as the Raiders began their second decade of play, the merger between the AFL and NFL became a reality on the field. In the 1970 through 2012 period of interconference play, the Raiders have compiled a remarkable 92-77-1 record against present National Football Conference rivals.

Another innovation came to professional football in 1970 — "Monday Night Football." The Raiders' domination of this prime-time television series has seen the Silver and Black build an incredible 37-27-1 record in Monday night play. In the 43 years of this series, the Raiders are 15-8-0 in "Monday Night Football" games at home.

Through the decades — the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and now the 2000s — the Raiders have had the greatest players, the greatest coaches, the greatest plays and participated in the greatest games in the annals of professional sports.

Challengers to Raider domination of professional football will arise as they have in the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium. The Raider organization will continue to meet these challenges.

REGGIE MCKENZIE

THE GENERAL MANAGER

Reggie McKenzie, a former draft pick by Raiders Owner Al Davis as a player, enters his 30th season in the National Football League and his fourth as General Manager of the Silver and Black. McKenzie was named to the position by Owner Mark Davis on Jan. 10, 2012, becoming the first General Manager of the franchise since Al Davis was hired as Head Coach and General Manager in 1963. Owner Mark Davis rewarded McKenzie with a four-year contract extension in July 2016.

Now in his his fifth season as General Manager, McKenzie has overseen significant changes in the organization's scouting, player personnel and football operations departments, while bringing refined football acumen to the Silver and Black. Adhering to a strategy of building a competitive roster through the draft while making strategic acquisitions via free agency and trades, McKenzie enters his fifth season at the helm having already earned plaudits from some of the most respected voices in football.

UNDRAFTED GEMS

Every preseason, hundreds of undrafted free agents vie for a spot on their team's 53-man roster. Reggie McKenzie has brought in numerous players that were not drafted, developing them into significant contributors for the Silver and Black.

- WR Andre Holmes, originally an undrafted free agent with the Minnesota Vikings in 2011, is just the third undrafted player to record at least 10 touchdown receptions for the Raiders.

- In 2015, P Marquette King set a franchise record by placing 40 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. In 2014, King set Raider franchise records in punts (109) and punting yards (4,930).

- On RB Jalen Richard's first career carry, he rushed 75 yards for a touchdown. With his 75-yard touchdown, Richard became just the fourth player ever to record a 75-or-more-yard rushing touchdown in his NFL debut, joining Oran Pape (1930), Alan Ameche (1955) and Ottis Anderson (1979).

- WR Seth Roberts has totaled four game-winning touchdowns in his career (Week 2 of 2015 vs. Baltimore, Week 12 of 2015 at Tennessee and Week 1 of 2016 at New Orleans). The Raiders are 9-0 in games when he records a touchdown receptions.

Below are some of the notable current Raiders who entered the NFL as undrafted free agents:

Player	School	Year	Team
DL Denico Autry	Mississippi State	2014	Oakland
LS Jon Condo	Maryland	2005	Dallas
WR Andre Holmes	Hillsdale	2011	Minnesota
WR Johnny Holton	Cincinnati	2016	Oakland
G/T Austin Howard	Northern Iowa	2010	Philadelphia
P Marquette King	Fort Valley State	2012	Oakland
DT Darius Latham	Indiana	2016	Oakland
QB Matt McGloin	Penn State	2013	Oakland
FB/RB Jamize Olawale	North Texas	2012	Dallas
T Donald Penn	Utah State	2006	Minnesota
RB Jalen Richard	Southern Mississippi	2016	Oakland
WR Seth Roberts	West Alabama	2014	Oakland

Since McKenzie took over as GM in 2012, the Raiders have had 10 undrafted free agents make the initial 53-man roster. Here is the yearly breakdown:

Year	UDFAs on Inital 53
2013	2
2014	0
2015	2

LATE-ROUND STEALS

"It definitely helps. When you play on Sunday and a guy goes down and that player that you have running on special teams now can play a position and you're not afraid to put him in, it gives you depth. They may not be the starter. These young guys, you really have to give them a couple of years to figure out what they really are. Some of them, you have to throw them in because of where you are as a team. Let's all hope that not only the guys at the top of the draft but the guys at the bottom, if we can get a couple of those guys to give us some production within the first three years, that would be great." - Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie on getting production from lower-level draft picks

GM Reggie McKenzie's philosophy of building his roster through the draft includes standout players from the top of the board like DE Khalil Mack, QB Derek Carr and WR Amari Cooper. But a good drafting team will make all of their picks count, and McKenzie has done that of late. Here is a look at some players that McKenzie has drafted in the fourth round or later since 2013 and have provided solid production:

Player	Year	Round
RB Latavius Murray^	2013	6
TE Mychal Rivera^	2013	6
DT Stacy McGee^	2013	6
DT Justin Ellis^	2014	4
CB TJ Carrie^	2014	7
G/C Jon Feliciano^	2015	4
LB Ben Heeney^	2015	5

^ - has started multiple games over career

THAT'S WHAT THEY SAID...

"My approach is old school. I'm a roll up the sleeves type of guy that wakes up early in the morning like iron workers, and comes prepared to get the job done." - Reggie McKenzie, introductory press conference, Jan. 10, 2012

"He has the courage of his convictions about players that Ron Wolf had, including blunt assessments of their talent. But Reggie also has the patience of Ted Thompson; he adheres to the draft-and-develop model of team-building. The latter means trusting scouts to constantly fill a pipeline of young talent, empowering coaches to play and develop young players, and identifying core players to secure contractually for the future." - Andrew Brandt, Monday Morning Quarterback (MMQB), March 12, 2014

"He is an exceptional evaluator of talent. Just has a great skill for it, especially for guys already in the NFL who might be flying under the radar. He was my right-hand man for all those years, a big reason why the Packers were good all those years." - Ron Wolf, April 24, 2012

"You can see this foundation starting to build there with the things Reggie [McKenzie] has done. He goes and hires Jack Del Rio, and I think that's a pretty good situation. They have a ton of cap space and an opportunity to build. All of a sudden you look at the AFC West, and they're kind of on the rise and you're very familiar with the AFC West so you know. It's very competitive." - Andy Reid, March 24, 2015

OAKLAND VS. NFC SOUTH

Oakland will face off against the NFC South this season, marking the first time since 2012 that they have played the division. Last season, the NFC South produced the NFC's participant in Super Bowl 50, the Carolina Panthers. The Raiders hold a 20-17-1 combined all-time record against Atlanta, Carolina, New Orleans and Tampa Bay.

RAIDERS VS. NFC SOUTH IN 2012

Date	Opponent	Result

11/04/12	vs. Tampa Bay	L, 32-42
11/18/12	vs. New Orleans	L, 17-38
12/23/12	at Carolina	L, 6-17

SILVER AND BLACK IN PRIME TIME

- The Raiders will play three prime-time games in 2016, an NBC Sunday Night Football matchup with the Denver Broncos on Nov. 6, an ESPN Monday Night Football contest on Nov. 21 against the Houston Texans in Mexico City and a Thursday Night Football game at the Kansas City Chiefs on Dec. 8. The Thursday Night Football contest against the Chiefs will be televised on NBC with a simulcast on NFL Network and streamed live on Twitter.
- With the Raiders hosting the Broncos on Sunday Night Football in Week 9, it marks the first time Oakland has been scheduled for a Sunday Night game since 2006. In 2013, the Raiders participated in the latest NFL game ever played when they hosted the San Diego Chargers on Oct. 6. Due to an Oakland Athletics' postseason game at Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, the Raiders moved their game to an 8:35 p.m. PT start, marking the latest start time in NFL history.
- The Raiders are 17-18 in Sunday night contests since 1978 and 1-3 against Denver. At home, Oakland is 0-1.
- The matchup vs. the Texans on Monday Night Football will mark the first Monday Night Football game ever played outside of the United States.
- This will mark the Raiders' 66th contest on Monday Night Football and first since 2013. It will also be the Raiders' first matchup with the Texans on Monday Night Football. The only Monday Night Football game the Raiders have played against one of the four current AFC South franchises was a contest against the Houston Oilers on Oct. 9, 1972 in Houston. The Raiders won that game, 34-0.
- Oakland holds a 37-27-1 all-time record in Monday Night Football contests. The Silver and Black last played on Monday Night Football on September 23, 2013 at the Denver Broncos. The Raiders lost that contest, 21-37.
- On Thursdays, the Raiders are 9-9 all-time, including a 3-4 record on Thanksgiving Days. In 11 Thursday games vs. the AFC West, Oakland is 8-3 and 2-1 against the Chiefs.
- The Raiders have won two straight games on Thursday Night Football, including 2014's 24-20 win at home over Kansas City.
- Last season, the Raiders hosted the San Diego Chargers on Thursday Night Football, beating the Chargers 23-20 in overtime. The Christmas Eve game served as Raiders S Charles Woodson's final home game and marked a season sweep over the team's AFC West rivals. P Marquette King was spectacular in the contest, earning AFC Special Teams Player of the Week honors after booting eight punts for 400 yards (50.0 gross average; 49.8 net average) with a long of 65 and six punts downed inside the opponent's 20-yard line. It marked the second straight year that a Raider had won a Player of the Week Award for a performance on Thursday Night Football, as Woodson won AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his play in Week 12 of 2014.

TEAM NOTES

MILES AND MILES

Factoring in three trips to the Eastern Time Zone and three more to the Central Time Zone, the Raiders will travel the second most miles in the NFL this season. According to CBS Sports, Oakland travels 31,580 miles in 2016, with four trips over 2,000 miles, not including a November trip to Mexico City. The Raiders trail only the Los Angeles Rams in terms of miles traveled in 2016. Here is a look at the teams that travel the most in 2016:

TEAM NOTES

'COOP' AND 'CRAB'

Carrying over their success from last year, WRs Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree have continued to give NFL secondaries trouble in their second year together. In the Silver and Black's Week 8 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the two combined for 281 receiving yards (Cooper, 173 and Crabtree, 108) on 20 receptions.

In the Raiders' Week 2 win against the Baltimore Ravens last season, Cooper (seven receptions, 109 yards and one touchdown) and Crabtree (nine receptions, 111 yards and one touchdown) became the first pair of Raiders receivers to each post 100 receiving yards in a game since Jan. 1, 2012. This also marked the first time since Dec. 31, 2005 that the Raiders had two receivers with 100 receiving yards and one touchdown each. Coupled with the duo's effort this season in Week 8, Cooper and Crabtree now have two games where they have both gone over 100 yards.

Together, "Coop" and "Crab" have averaged 11.9 receptions and 159.9 yards per game in 2016. Here is a look at their combined production:

Notes

- Between the two of them, they have 14 100-yard receiving games since 2015 (Cooper has nine and Crabtree has five).
- Both players have caught at least four passes in 18 of the team's 25 games since 2015. The Raiders are 10-4 when they have combined for at least 10 receptions in a game.

GOING FOR 2

After the Raiders scored a touchdown to pull within one point of the Saints with 47 seconds left in Week 1, Head Coach Jack Del Rio decided to go for the two-point conversion and the win. On the ensuing try, QB Derek Carr connected with WR Michael Crabtree on the game-winning two-point conversion to give the Raiders the lead that they would hold onto.

The Raiders are the fourth team to score the game-winning points on a two-point conversion in the final minute of the fourth quarter and the first to do so in a season opener. The other three teams to accomplish the feat are the 2002 Minnesota Vikings (December 15, 2002), 2005 Tampa Bay Buccaneers (November 13, 2005) and 2008 Denver Broncos (September 14, 2008).

SPREADING IT AROUND

This season, 13 different receivers have caught a pass from QB Derek Carr. Those who have caught passes for the Silver and Black this season include WR Amari Cooper, WR Michael Crabtree, WR Andre Holmes, WR Johnny Holton, RB Taiwan Jones, RB Latavius Murray, FB/RB Jamize Olawale, RB Jalen Richard, TE Mychal Rivera, WR Seth Roberts, TE Lee Smith, TE Clive Walford and RB DeAndré Washington.

Carr is the first quarterback in franchise history to complete a pass to 11 different players in a game three separate times (11/9/14 vs. Denver, 12/6/15 vs. Kansas City and 9/18/16 vs. Atlanta). Carr is also the only active quarterback with three such games. Only three other active quarterbacks that have accomplished the feat in two games are Drew Brees, Teddy Bridgewater and Carson Palmer.

RAIDERS OFF THE FIELD/INTERESTING FACTS

- General Manager Reggie McKenzie has an identical twin brother, Raleigh, who is a college scout for the team. He also has a son, Kahlil, who is a sophomore defensive lineman at Tennessee, his father's alma mater.
- Head Coach Jack Del Rio, who grew up in nearby Hayward, Calif., was a standout catcher on USC's baseball team, where he was teammates with Mark McGwire and Randy Johnson, and was drafted by the Toronto Blue Jays in 1981. Del Rio's son, Luke, is also the starting quarterback for the University of Florida.
- Assistant linebackers coach Brent Vieselmeyer coached Jack Del Rio's son, Luke, when he was the head coach at Valor Christian High School in Highlands Ranch, Colo., when Luke was the team's starting quarterback.
- QB Derek Carr is the brother of former No. 1 overall pick of the Houston Texans, David. The two brothers started a training facility for all athletes in Southern California called Carr Elite.
- CB DJ Hayden suffered a scary injury in a practice during his final year at Houston. Hayden, who collided with a teammate, tore his inferior vena cava, the major vein that flows blood from the lower body to the heart. The injury is mostly associated with high-speed vehicle accidents.
- WR Andre Holmes' brother, Jason, is a member of St. Kilda Football Club of the Australian Football League.
- K Sebastian Janikowski is a former member of the Polish national under-17 soccer team and turned down various pro soccer offers to enroll at Florida State.
- T Donald Penn was a Raider fan growing up in Inglewood, Calif., going to Raiders games as a kid in Los Angeles.
- TE Mychal Rivera's sister, Naya, was an actress on the hit TV show "Glee."
- T Menelik Watson was born in Manchester, England and was raised there before attending Marist College to play basketball.

KHALIL MACK

SILVER AND MACK

As the Raiders' first-round pick in the 2014 NFL Draft, DE Khalil Mack had lofty expectations in his rookie season and he met them all and more. Mack finished third in Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year voting, falling to St. Louis' DT Aaron Donald. Proving to be one of the NFL's best run defenders and generating pressure on quarterbacks that didn't always show up on the stat sheet, Mack was selected to the Pro Football Writers of America, Sports Illustrated and NFL.com All-Rookie Teams.

In 2015, Mack significantly surpassed the totals from his rookie year. After setting a new career high with his fifth sack in Week 10, he more than tripled his career high in sacks.

FIVE SACK GAME

Mack tied a franchise record set more than 32 years ago and set a career high with five sacks in Week 14 at Denver last year. His incredible performance matched Howie Long's five sacks on Oct. 2, 1983. Below is a look at the top single-game sack performances in franchise history:

Player	Sacks	Date
Khalil Mack	5.0	12/13/15
Howie Long	5.0	10/2/83
Kameron Wimbley	4.0	11/10/11
Anthony Smith	4.0	9/12/93
Anthony Smith	4.0	10/18/92

Mack became the first player with five sacks in a game in which his team won by three points or fewer since sacks became an official stat in 1982. All of Mack's five sacks came in the second half against Denver, tying for the most sacks in a half since 1991. Here is a look at the most sacks in a half since 1991:

Player	Sacks	Date
Khalil Mack (Oak.)	5.0	12/13/15
Vonnie Holliday (GB)	5.0	12/22/02
10 Tied	4.0	-

Since sacks became an official stat in 1982, only six other players have recorded more than five sacks in a game in NFL history. Mack is the sixth player to record five sacks and one forced fumble in a game. The last player to do so was Aldon Smith for the San Francisco 49ers in 2012. Below is a look at the six players to record five sacks and one forced fumble in game:

Player	Date	Sacks	FF
Chuck Smith (Atl.)	10/12/97	5.0	3
Derrick Thomas (KC)	9/6/98	6.0	1
Vonnie Holliday (GB)	12/22/02	5.0	3

Aldon Smith (SF)	11/19/12	5.5	2
Khalil Mack (Oak.)	12/13/15	5.0	1

SACK ATTACK

In Week 14 at Denver last year, Mack posted five sacks, the most in an NFL game this season, improving his season total to 14 sacks. With that performance, Mack jumped to the top of the NFL leaderboard in 2015 sacks. Mack added one more sack in Week 15 to finish the season with 15 sacks, good for second in the league.

2015 NFL SACK LEADERS

Player	Sacks
J.J. Watt (Hou.)	17.5
Khalil Mack (Oak.)	15.0
Ezekiel Ansah (Det.)	14.5
Carlos Dunlap (Cin.)	13.5
Chandler Jones (NE)	12.5

Mack is the 14th different Raider with 10 sacks in a season and the first to do so since 2006 (Derrick Burgess and Warren Sapp). His 15 sacks this season are the most by a Raider since 2005 and the third most in franchise history.

FRANCHISE SINGLE-SEASON SACK LEADERS

Player	Sacks	Year
Derrick Burgess	16.0	2005
Sean Jones	15.5	1986
Khalil Mack	15.0	2015

Most of Mack's production came in the second half of the season, totaling 53 tackles (39 solo) with 11 sacks since Nov. 15, including three multi-sack games in Weeks 12-14.

Mack had a sack in four straight games from Week 12-15, tying the second longest streak by a Raider since 2001. The last Raider with a sack in four straight games was Desmond Bryant in 2012.

MULTI-SACK MACK

Mack notched at least two sacks in three straight games, making him the only NFL player to do so last season. His streak tied the second longest streak in the NFL since 2001.

DEREK CARR

CARR AT THE HELM

QB Derek Carr was named the Raiders' starting quarterback heading into the 2014 season, becoming the first rookie QB in team history to start in Week 1. He has since become the first Raiders offensive player to start 32 games over his first two seasons. Praised for his poise and maturity as a young signal caller, Carr has already shown growth in a number of key areas. Here is a look at his career statistics:

DEREK CARR CAREER STATISTICS

Carr has orchestrated nine fourth-quarter/overtime comebacks and game-winning drives in his career:

- 17-play, 80-yard TD drive (7:21) vs. Kansas City on Nov. 20, 2014 (9-yard TD to James Jones).
- 9-play, 80-yard TD drive (1:44) vs. Baltimore on Sept. 20, 2015 (12-yard TD to Seth Roberts).
- 9-play, 90-yard TD drive (3:20) at Tennessee on Nov. 29, 2015 (12-yard TD to Seth Roberts).
- 3-play, 11-yard drive (0:16) at Denver on Dec. 13, 2015 (16-yard TD to Mychal Rivera).
- 15-play, 67-yard drive (6:55) in overtime vs. San Diego on Dec. 24, 2015 (31-yard Sebastian Janikowski FG).
- 11-play, 75-yard drive (5:16) at New Orleans on Sept. 11, 2016 (10-yard TD to Seth Roberts and two-point conversion to WR Michael Crabtree).
- 6-play, 66-yard drive (1:24) at Baltimore on Oct. 2, 2016 (23-yard TD to WR Michael Crabtree)
- 5-play, 60-yard drive (1:36) in overtime at Tampa Bay on Oct. 30, 2016 (41-yard TD to Seth Roberts)
- 5-play, 85-yard drive (1:32) vs. Houston on Nov. 21, 2016 (35-yard TD to Amari Cooper)

TOUCHDOWN LEADER

Carr threw a career-high 32 TD passes last season, averaging two TDs per start. Carr finished the year just two TDs shy of the Raiders franchise record, currently held by Daryle Lamonica (34 in 1969). Here is where Carr ranked in TD passes in 2015:

Rank	Player	Team	TDs
1.	Tom Brady	New England	36

MOST IMPROVED RATING

The success of a young signal caller is often measured by his improvements from Year 1 to Year 2. After posting one of the most prolific rookie campaigns in NFL history, Carr has made the fifth biggest year-to-year improvement among quarterbacks who have started at least 10 games in each of the last two seasons.

MOST IMPROVED PASSER RATING FROM 2014 TO 2015

THROWING FOR SIX

Carr has enjoyed one of the most prolific starts to a career in NFL history, especially when it comes to finding the end zone. His 53 TDs are the second most by any NFL player through his first two seasons, trailing only Dan Marino (68). His 53 TDs are also tied for the ninth most in the NFL since 1914.

5.	Carson Palmer (Cin.)	2004-05	50

- Carr is the fourth QB with 20 TD passes and 3,200 passing yards in back-to-back seasons to begin a career, joining Andy Dalton, Andrew Luck and Peyton Manning.
- He is one of seven players in NFL history with 30 passing TDs and 3,500 passing yards in either of his first two NFL seasons. Before Carr, no Raider had accomplished the feat in any year of his career.

Multi-TD Master

- Carr's 17 multi-TD games are tied with Carson Palmer for the second most by a player through his first two seasons.
- Carr's seven three-TD games are tied for fourth most by a player through his first two seasons (Daunte Culpeper, Peyton Manning and Fran Tarkenton).
- Carr's three four-TD games are tied for the third most by a player through his first two NFL seasons (Jeff Garcia and Mark Rypien).

AIR ATTACK

Carr fell short of the 4,000-yard milestone by just 13 yards, throwing for a career-high 3,987 passing yards in 2015. That total ranks Carr third in franchise history behind only Rich Gannon (4,689 in 2002) and Carson Palmer (4,018 in 2012).

AMARI COOPER

FIRST-ROUNDER

WR Amari Cooper was tabbed as the Raiders' first-round draft pick in the 2015 NFL Draft and the fourth-overall selection. He was the highest wide receiver taken in the draft and the first receiver taken by Oakland in the first round since 2009. After enjoying one of the most dominant careers a wide receiver has ever had at the college level, Cooper saw that success translate to the NFL, as he became the first Raiders rookie to ever reach 1,000 receiving yards. Cooper also holds the franchise records for receptions and 100-yard games (five) by a rookie.

Age Not a Factor

- In Week 2 of 2015, Cooper became the youngest Raiders wide receiver and second youngest player in franchise history to catch a TD pass.

NINE 100-YARD GAMES

Cooper posted five 100-yard outings as a rookie, a franchise rookie record and tied with Keenan Allen (2013) for the most by any player 21-years-old or younger.

His five 100-yard games are tied for the second most by a rookie since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger (leader: Odell Beckham Jr., seven in 2014).

Cooper became the first NFL rookie since 1961 (Mike Ditka) with three 100-yard receiving games in his team's first six games.

Cooper joins DeSean Jackson (2008) as the only NFL rookies in the past 30 years with two 100-yard receiving games in their team's first three games.

In Week 3 at Cleveland (8 rec., 134 yds), Cooper became the first Raiders rookie with 100 receiving yards in back-to-back games since James Jett (Nov. 21-28, 1993).

Cooper has gotten off to a hot start in 2016, placing third in the league with 843 receiving yards through eight games.

EXPLOSIVE AFTER CATCH

In 2015, Cooper ranked 12th among NFL WRs in yards after catch (YAC) with 386 and 18th among WRs in yards after contact with 112, according to TruMedia.

- Cooper had the most yards after catch (386) and second most yards after contact (112) of any rookie wide receiver in 2015.
- Cooper is tied for the sixth most yards after catch by a rookie WR since 2001.

21 OR YOUNGER

Cooper was 21 years old for the duration of his rookie season, making him one of the most electric receivers his age to play in the NFL. He holds the all-time record for receptions by a wide receiver 21 or younger.

- Cooper's 72 receptions are the most ever by a wide receiver 21 or younger. Only RB Reggie Bush (88) and TE Aaron Hernandez (74) posted more.

- Cooper's 1,070 receiving yards are the second most by any NFL player 21 or younger, trailing Randy Moss' 1,313 yards in 1998.

- Cooper's six receiving touchdowns are tied for the eighth most by an NFL player 21-or-younger (record: Randy Moss, 17, 1998).

RECORD RECEPTION MARKS

Cooper caught a pass in each of his first 12 games and set the franchise record for rookie receptions in just eight games, passing Zach Miller's mark of 44 in 2007 (16 games). Cooper's 70 receptions ranks tied for 14th among NFL rookies since the 1970 merger:

- Cooper is the only NFL rookie WR with at least four receptions in each of his team's first nine games, and 11 of his team's first 12 games.
- Cooper went nine straight games with at least four receptions, tied for the third longest streak by a rookie since 2001.
- Cooper is the second rookie since 1960 with eight five-reception games through his team's first 11 contests.
- Cooper had four seven-reception games, tied for third most by a rookie through 11 games since 1960.

ALL-TIME PRODUCTION

Cooper needed only 11 games to break the franchise rookie receiving record, previously held by James Jett (771) in 1993. In Week 15, he became the first rookie in team history to eclipse 1,000 receiving yards, and the first Raider since Randy Moss in 2005.

- Cooper totaled 75 receiving yards seven times, tied for fifth most by a rookie since the 1970 merger.

MICHAEL CRABTREE

'CRAB' CROSSES THE BAY

When the Raiders signed WR Michael Crabtree in April 2015, they immediately upgraded their offense with a proven performer. After being selected by the San Francisco 49ers in the first round (10th overall) of the 2009 NFL Draft, Crabtree has caught at least one pass in each of his 105 games played. Before joining the NFL ranks,

"Crab" turned in one of the most prolific receiving careers in college football history, winning the Biletnikoff Award - given to the nation's most outstanding wide receiver - in each of his two seasons at Texas Tech. He was the first and only player to win the coveted award twice.

Career Highlights

- Became the first 49ers player since WR Terrell Owens in 2003 to post a 1,000-yard receiving season, tallying a career year in 2012 with 85 receptions for 1,105 yards and nine touchdowns.
- Registered two 100-yard receiving games in the 2012 postseason with three touchdown receptions.
- Has registered at least three receptions in 90 of his 105 career games, and at least four receptions in 71 of his 104 career games.

Awards and Honors

- Named to USA Today's All-Joe Team in 2012.

'CRAB' IN 2015

2015 Highlights

- In Week 2, Crabtree (nine rec., 111 yards) and WR Amari Cooper (seven rec., 109 yards) became the first pair of Raiders receivers to each post 100 receiving yards and a touchdown in a game since 2005.
- In Week 8 (seven rec., 102 yards, 1 TD) and Week 9 (seven rec., 108 yards, two TDs), Crabtree recorded back-to-back 100-yard games within the same regular season for the first time in his career.
- From Weeks 7-9, caught four TD passes, with at least one TD reception in three straight games for the second time in his career.

85 Receptions

- His 85 receptions rank tied for 15th in the NFL and ninth in the AFC.
- He is the fifth different player and the third different wide receiver with 85 receptions in a season for the Raiders, and the first since 2002 (Jerry Rice and Charlie Garner).

Nine TDs; Six TDs of 25-Plus Yards

- Crabtree is the first Raiders player with nine receiving TDs in a season since Tim Brown (nine) in 2001.
- His six TD catches of 25-plus yards tied with Odell Beckham Jr. (NYG) and Brandin Cooks (NO) for the most in the NFL in 2015.

3 Receptions in Every Game; 4 in 15 Straight

- One of only two NFL players with at least three receptions in all 16 games in 2015. The other player is Julio Jones (Atl.).
- Is the first Raider with four catches in at least 15 games in a season. He did so in each of the team's first 15 games.
- In Week 13, Crabtree became the first Raiders player with at least four receptions in 12 straight games to begin a season.

4 Receptions in 16 Straight

- Crabtree had hauled in at least four passes in 16 straight games from Dec. 28, 2014 - Dec. 24, 2015, which was the third longest active streak in the NFL when it was snapped in Week 17 at Kansas City.

4 Receptions and 50 Yards in 7 Straight

- From Week 4 (at Chicago) to Week 11 (at Detroit), Crabtree posted four receptions and 50 receiving yards in seven straight games.
- The streak was the second longest in team history (Tim Brown). Brown did his over two seasons, making Crabtree's streak the longest within a season in team history.

50 Yards in 7 Straight

- From Week 4 (at Chicago) to Week 11 (at Detroit), Crabtree became the eighth Raider with 50 receiving yards and seven straight games. He was the first Raider to do so since Jerry Rice (nine straight) from 2001-02.
- His streak was the longest by a Raider within a single season since 1985 (Dokie Williams, eight).

SEBASTIAN JANIKOWSKI

ALL-TIME RAIDER

In Week 5 last year vs. Denver, K Sebastian Janikowski passed Hall of Famer and former Raiders WR Tim Brown and moved into first place on the Raiders' all-time games played list. Janikowski, who has played in 262 games, was originally drafted by the team in the first round (17th overall) of the 2000 NFL Draft. With 2016 being his 17th season, he became the first Raider to play 17 seasons for the Silver and Black in Week 1. Since 2000, Janikowski has missed only four games over his career (two in 2000, one in 2001 and one in 2011). Including postseason play, Janikowski has played in 269 games in Silver and Black for his career.

In Week 15 of 2015, Janikowski became the ninth NFL player and the only active player to reach 250 regular season games played with a single team.

Moving up the all-time games played list for a franchise as historic as the Raiders takes longevity, and Janikowski has it. Here is the top two Raiders on the franchise's all-time games played list heading into this week's game:

Rank	Player	Years	Games

RACKING UP THE POINTS

K Sebastian Janikowski is the Raiders' all-time scoring leader with 1,755 career points, which ranks 12th on the NFL's all-time scoring list.

Janikowski has posted nine seasons of 100-or-more points in his career, including a personal- and franchise-high 142 in 2010. He has never totaled less than 70 points in any campaign.

He has scored in at least 80 consecutive games twice in his career, tallying at least one point in 93 straight games from 2000-05 and 83 straight games from 2009-14.

As a rookie in 2000, Janikowski set the franchise's rookie scoring record with 112 points.

PINPOINT ACCURACY

K Sebastian Janikowski has been nearly automatic throughout his career, connecting on 80.0 percent of his career field goal attempts, which is the 14th best field goal percentage of any kicker with at least 400 career field goal attempts.

Including 2015, Janikowski's career boasts 10 seasons with at least an 80 percent field goal conversion rate, including a high of 91.2 percent in 2012, when he was named a first alternate for the Pro Bowl.

Janikowski connected on 225 straight extra point attempts from Dec. 14, 2008 - Dec. 6, 2015, including the 2015 season at the new extra point attempt distance. He finished 2015 with a 38-of-39 mark (97.4 percent) on extra points.

MARQUETTE KING

PUNTING KING

Since entering the NFL as an undrafted free agent, P Marquette King has put up numbers among the NFL's best in both gross average and punting yards. With 4,107 punting yards in 2013, King finished sixth in the league and led the NFL in gross punting with an average of 48.9.

King continued his punting success into 2014, ranking at the top of the league in punts, punting yards and punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. In 2014, he set Raider franchise records for punts (109) and punting yards (4,930).

In 2016, King continues to be one of the league's most elite punters, ranking tied for third in punts placed inside the opponents' 20-yard line. King also ranks fifth in the NFL in gross punting with an average of 48.4 and seventh in net average at 41.8.

PLAYER OF THE WEEK

After his impressive performance in Week 7 against the Jacksonville Jaguars, P Marquette King earned AFC Special Teams Player of the Week honors. In Week 7, King ranked first in gross average (54.6) and net average (50.6), second in punts inside the 20-yard line (four) and fourth in longest punt (60). It marked his second career Player of the Week Award for King, as he also won it in Week 16 of 2015 vs. San Diego.

King also rushed 27-yards, the longest by a punter since 2010, on fourth-and-24 off a bad snap in the fourth quarter to extend the game-winning touchdown.

LONGEST PUNT

In Week 3 against the Tennessee Titans, P Marquette King boomed a career-long 72-yard punt late in the third quarter, tying the seventh longest punt in franchise history. The punt marked just the second time King has recorded a punt of 70-plus yarder. His previous long was 70 yards which he set last year in Week 2 against the Baltimore Ravens.

INSIDE THE 20

In 2015, P Marquette King set a franchise record by placing 40 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. With just four touchbacks, King became the third NFL player since 1976 with at least 40 punts inside the 20 and four-or-fewer touchbacks.

King's 40 punts inside the 20 marked the second time he cracked the top-five on the all-time franchise list after doing so in 2014:

King continues to impress with his control in 2016, having pinned opponents inside the 20-yard line 21 times thus far.

HISTORICAL PUNTER

In 2013, P Marquette King became the third punter in franchise history to lead the league in gross punting with an average of 48.9. It was the eighth time since 1974 that a Raiders punter has led the league in the category. Shane Lechler accomplished the feat four times, and newly-inducted Hall of Famer Ray Guy did it three times. Below is a look at the seasons a Raiders punter has led the league in gross average:

Raiders rally in fourth quarter to beat Texans in Mexico City

By Jimmy Durkin

November 22, 2016

MEXICO CITY — The Raiders shook off three-plus quarters of sloppy football to rally past the Houston Texans 27-20 in a Monday Night Football thriller at Estadio Azteca.

Derek Carr threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Amari Cooper with 4:43 to play to give the Raiders the lead, and the Mexico City crowd of 76,473 got its money's worth as Oakland took back sole control of first place in the AFC West with the win.

"It wasn't maybe one of our cleaner games in terms of execution throughout, but we showed tremendous grit," Raiders coach Jack Del Rio said. "We got an opportunity at the end of the game and seized control."

The Raiders running game was non-existent with 30 yards on 20 carries, and Carr had just 74 yards passing at halftime, but the offense caught fire in the fourth quarter and Carr had his eighth career fourth-quarter comeback.

"We got punched in the mouth," said Carr, who threw for 295 yards and three touchdowns. "But there was no doubt in anybody's mind that we were going to come back."

The Raiders (8-2) looked like they were going to put forth a nationally televised stinker when they trailed 20-13 with 10:59 to play. They had been getting dominated at the line of scrimmage most of the night.

Oakland broke out a serious wrinkle to suddenly shift the game. With Cooper lined up in the backfield, Raiders fullback Jamize Olawale went deep and was left open and Carr fed it to him. Getting some downfield blocking from Mychal Rivera, Olawale showed off his wheels on a 75-yard touchdown that tied the game with 10:44 to play. Olawale now has the Raiders' two longest plays of the season along with his 68-yard touchdown reception against the Buccaneers.

"It was a huge spark for our team," Cooper said of Olawale's score. "It felt like that was the momentum shifter."

Houston got in great position to regain the lead but got aggressive and didn't get any help from the officials. The Texans were spotted short of the first down on third and 2 from the Raiders' 16 and elected to go for it on fourth down. That was again spotted short — both calls seemed to heavily favored the Raiders — and Oakland took over.

Carr and running back Latavius Murray connected for a 39-yard pass play that moved Oakland into field goal range. They didn't have to call on Sebastian Janikowski though because Carr threw a short pass to Cooper and, with Seth Roberts delivering a take out block, Cooper raced around several defenders for the go-ahead score.

After struggling on third down all night, the Raiders' defense got a stop on Houston's next drive, and the Raiders got the ball back with 3:02 to play. Defying convention, the Raiders threw deep on a second down, and Carr found Jalen Richard for 29 yards and a first down that helped put the game away.

The conclusion didn't seem possible the way this game started. Oakland's third-down defense, ranked tied for second in the NFL entering the week, took a siesta on the opening drive. Houston converted its first three opportunities, including a 24-yard pass to DeAndre Hopkins on which he was ruled to have stepped out of bounds at the Oakland 36-yard line. The play was not reviewable because it was blown dead. Oakland finally got a stop after Houston got inside the red zone and held them to a 32-yard Nick Novak field goal.

The Raiders put something together on their second possession, using a 17-yard pass to Clive Walford and a 33-yard pass interference penalty to set up Carr's 17-yard touchdown pass to Richard.

The Raiders caught their first big break on the ensuing kickoff. Janikowski purposely left the kickoff short, and Texans rookie Tyler Ervin ran up to field it but had it bounce off his chest. Taiwan Jones recovered for Oakland at the Houston 19, but the Raiders had to settle for a field goal.

Houston went right back to moving down the field and converted a couple more third downs before Braxton Miller, a former Ohio State quarterback, ran a pretty route that fooled David Amerson to catch a 12-yard touchdown pass — the first of his NFL career.

The Raiders shot themselves in the foot early with several drops, including one by Crabtree that would've picked up a first down. The worst came with inside two minutes to go in the second quarter. Roberts went deep on the left sideline and got open, but Carr's perfect pass bounced off his hands and the Raiders — despite a Malcolm Smith interception that gave them the ball back — couldn't score before halftime.

Carr had a bad start to the third quarter. Throwing under pressure, he tossed one up for grabs to a double-covered Amari Cooper that A.J. Bouye intercepted. Houston took advantage with a 13-play touchdown drive capped by a Lamar Miller 1-yard touchdown run for a 17-10 lead for its final touchdown of the night.

But the Raiders continued this breakthrough season with another comeback that clinches at least a .500 record and leaves them one win away from ending their 13-year drought of non-winning seasons.

"That's huge for us," Mack said.

Raiders rally for Mexico City victory

By Vic Tafur

November 22, 2016

MEXICO CITY — The altitude at Azteca Stadium must have been to blame — because the Raiders' offense couldn't breathe until the fourth quarter.

Outplayed by the Texans most of the night, Derek Carr and Oakland struck quickly Monday. After fullback Jamize Olawale tied the game with a long touchdown reception, Carr found Latavius Murray for a 39-yard catch and then Amari Cooper for a 35-yard game-winner with 4:43 left in the game.

Head coach Jack Del Rio put the cherry on the 27-20 victory when he went for it on 4th-and-1 with 58 seconds left. If you've been paying attention this season, obviously Murray got the first down, to the delight of a Raiders-heavy crowd of 76,473.

"We got punched in the mouth and weren't doing the things we wanted to do," Carr said. "But there was no doubt we were going to win that game. That's a testament to the character and toughness we've built the last couple of years."

The Raiders were a step slow until they weren't, when Olawale shocked the country — two countries, actually — with his 75-yard touchdown catch with 10:44 left. It's a favorite play of offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave; routes run by Raiders receivers often leave the unsuspecting defense not looking for the fullback.

A variation worked for a 68-yard touchdown against the Bucs last month, and Olawale showed his speed again Monday night when he made free safety Andre Hall miss after the catch.

Raiders running backs finished with 11 catches for 199 yards.

"All those guys can make plays," Del Rio said. "Olawale can break loose and do some damage. They all have explosive capabilities and Derek did a great job of finding him there."

And just like that, with the three big plays from the offense, all the drops, footing issues, the inability to stop Houston defensive end Jadeveon Clowney and wide-open Houston tight ends were forgotten. The Raiders are 8-2, alone in first place in the AFC West and are international conquerors.

They also still have luck going for them, as most of the fourth-quarter calls have gone their way this season. On Monday, Houston running back Akeem Hunt seemed to get the first down on 4th-and-1 with 6:15 left, but the Texans got a bad spot and Carr, Murray and Cooper were in business.

The Raiders had jumped to a 10-3 lead on a Jalen Richard 17-yard TD catch and Sebastian Janikowski's 19-yard field goal. But the Texans grabbed control of the game temporarily in the second and third quarter.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

After rookie linebacker Shilique Calhoun dropped what looked like an interception (with an easy path to the end zone), the Texans marched down the field. The “home crowd” did its part. On a third-down play in the second quarter, Houston quarterback Brock Osweiler had to call a timeout because Raiders fans were too loud.

Houston running back Lamar Miller broke through the line when linebacker Bruce Irvin couldn't set the edge and looked to score from 34 yards out. A replay showed he was out at the 1. Two plays and 11 yards backward later, Osweiler found Braxton Miller for a 12-yard touchdown. Miller gave cornerback David Amerson not only a double move, but a slow-motion triple move and Amerson turned to jelly.

Then, to start the third quarter, Carr did something he hasn't done for a couple of years – throw one up for grabs where there were more defenders than receivers. The interception by A.J. Bouye fueled another Houston drive, with Lamar Miller punching it in from a yard out.

The Raiders had a chance to answer right back, but Michael Crabtree's great hands apparently didn't get their work visa settled as he had his second drop of the night. This one was in the end zone on a deep pass from Carr.

Carr went right back to him on the next play, deep again, and Crabtree was dragged down for a pass-interference call. The Raiders, despite a first down at the 8-yard line, couldn't score a touchdown. They settled for another Janikowski field goal and trailed 17-13.

3 notables

Derek Carr: Threw an ugly interception when it looked like game might be slipping away, but again made big plays down stretch. Mexican fans will be buying some No. 4 jerseys.

Jamize Olawale: Head coach Jack Del Rio said, “He's supposed to be our brusing fullback.” And there he goes down the field for 75 yards.

Malcolm Smith: Bad spot or not, the linebacker made the stop on big 4th and 1 play late. Also showed his hops with an earlier interception.

INSTANT REPLAY: RAIDERS BEAT TEXANS IN MEXICO CITY, SIT ATOP AFC WEST

By Scott Bair

November 22, 2016

MEXICO CITY – The AFC West has been jumbled all season long. On Monday night, a pecking order was established.

The Raiders are all alone at the top. The Silver and Black took a one-game lead in the division with a 27-20 victory over the Houston Texans before a raucous sell-out crowd at Estadio Azteca in Mexico City.

The Raiders were behind most of the game but surged ahead in the fourth quarter and never looked back.

Amari Cooper pulled the Raiders ahead with a 35-yard catch and run for a touchdown, a dynamic play that gave the Raiders their first lead since the second quarter.

It was part of 14 unanswered points from the Raiders, who tied it on a long touchdown catch by fullback Jamize Olawale.

The victory in Mexico City elevates the Raiders to 8-2, a game up on Kansas City and Denver with six games remaining.

It was yet another example of the Raiders finding a way to win. They looked lost most of the game, and made uncharacteristic mistakes, but pulled it together when it mattered most.

After getting outplayed for most of three quarters, the Raiders struck back in the fourth. They tied the game at 20-20 after a 75-yard touchdown strike from Carr to Olawale on a play where the fullback lined up out wide and Cooper was in the backfield.

Houston generated another long drive on their next possession, but they forced a turnover on downs after a controversial spot and replay review ruled Houston short of the marker.

The Raiders caught a break there, and took full advantage.

The game was tied 10-10 at halftime, with the Texans scores sandwiching points for the Raiders. Jalen Richard caught a 17-yard touchdown pass early in the second quarter, and a muffed kickoff recovered by Taiwan Jones put the Raiders in prime position to score again.

They couldn't convert from the Texans' 1-yard line, and settled for a field goal. That would prove troublesome against a stout Houston defense that controlled the line of scrimmage most of the game.

The Texans took a 17-10 second-half lead after Derek Carr threw an ill-advised interception. The Texans responded with a 13-play, 65-yard drive that ended in a Lamar Miller touchdown.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

The Raiders put together a strong drive after that, but settled for another short field goal instead of cashing in for a touchdown. That made it 17-13 near the end of the third quarter.

Smith lights the torch: Olympic gold medalist Tommie Smith lit the Al Davis torch before Monday's game. The San Jose State product, well known for holding up a fist during his gold medal ceremony at the 1968 Olympics here in Mexico City, returned to the city for the first time in a while.

Raiders-friendly crowd: The Houston Texans are the closest team to Mexico City. Didn't matter. Monday night's crowd at Estadio Azteca was decidedly partisan, clearly favoring the Silver and Black. The crowd was boisterous and into a close contest, with chants that can't be repeated here, and plenty of noise for the home team.

Laser pointer on Osweiler: If the cheers weren't obvious, a green laser pointer certainly was. A fan locked a green laser pointer on Texans quarterback Brock Osweiler in the second quarter and continued it in the second half.

The practice is supposedly common from Mexican soccer fans, though it didn't seem to have a negative impact on the Texans signal caller.

Sitting it out: The Raiders had the entire 53-man roster at their disposal, a luxury afforded by the return of cornerback Sean Smith and defensive tackle Stacy McGee.

The Raiders rendered Connor Cook, Johnny Holton, Dexter McDonald, Antonio Hamilton, Matt McCants, Vadal Alexander and Ryan O'Malley.

What's next: The Raiders will return from this home-away-from-home game and host a real one next week with the Carolina Panthers coming to town. Their record isn't good but they still have a shot to win the NFC South and are motivated to play well in a crucial game.

Carr helps Raiders rally past Texans 27-20 in Mexico City

By Josh Dubow

November 22, 2016

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The party in the stands started early in the second NFL regular season game ever played in Mexico with loud cheers and chants from before kickoff until the final whistle. The Oakland offense took a little longer to get going, but once they did Derek Carr and the Raiders came out with yet another win.

Carr woke up a struggling offense by throwing two touchdown passes in the fourth quarter as the Raiders capped a successful trip to Mexico with a 27-20 victory over the Houston Texans on Monday night.

"We got punched in the mouth," Carr said. "We weren't doing things the way we usually want to do things executing wise. But there was no doubt in anybody's mind that we'd come back and win the football game."

Oakland had been held to 120 yards through three quarters with the running game going nowhere and Carr finding few open receivers downfield. But that suddenly changed in the fourth quarter to give the Raiders (8-2) their fourth straight win for the first time since 2002 .

With star receiver Amari Cooper lined up in the backfield, Carr found fullback Jamize Olawale open for a 75-yard catch and run that tied Houston (6-4) at 20.

"We felt like that was the momentum shifter," Cooper said.

Then Oakland took advantage on two questionable spots by the officials to take over on downs at the 15 and drove 85 yards in five plays to take the lead on a 35-yard pass to Cooper to send the Texans to their fourth loss in five games outside of Houston.

"Very tough loss," defensive lineman Jadeveon Clowney said. "We should have won the game, we are trying to win every game. You don't leave the game in the ref's hands."

That set off loud celebrations from the pro-Raiders crowd of 76,743 in the second regular season game ever played in Mexico. What was originally scheduled as an Oakland home game featured Raiders music during stoppages, Tommie Smith lighting the Al Davis torch in a memorable return to Mexico City nearly a half-century after his Black Power salute at the 1968 Olympics and frequent "RAI-DERS!" chants.

While the atmosphere was electric, the field was a bit slippery leading to some falls and the high elevation 7,380 feet above sea level played a factor. The Raiders needed to use a timeout on defense at one point in the fourth to catch their breath and receiver Michael Crabtree was seen gasping for breath at one point.

"To be able to play here was amazing," Carr said. "There's so much history, so much rowdiness. I love soccer and it gave me a kind of soccer feel."

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

CLOSE SPOTS: The Texans were upset on two spots on the fourth-quarter drive before Oakland went ahead. On third-and-2, Lamar Miller was stopped just short of the first down even though Houston believed he got it. Coach Bill O'Brien went for it on fourth down but Akeem Hunt was stopped about an inch short on fourth down and the play stood after a replay challenge.

LASER SHOW: Houston QB Brock Osweiler had to deal with an unusual distraction during the game as a fan with a green laser frequently shined it on the Houston quarterback as he dropped back to pass in an act more familiar in soccer games played here than in NFL games. That wasn't the only soccer tradition imported for this game. Fans also used a homophobic chant on kickoffs. Mexico's soccer federation has been punished by FIFA in the past for the chant during World Cup qualifiers. Fans threw paper airplanes on the field in the third quarter with Oakland's Sean Smith taking a turn throwing one that reached the field during a break.

STREAK BROKEN: Carr had thrown 170 straight passes without an interception before getting picked by A.J. Bouye on a deep ball on the first play from scrimmage in the second half. It was Carr's fourth interception of the season and the first since Kansas City's Marcus Peters got one Oct. 16.

INTERNATIONAL SCORER: With his extra point in the second quarter, Oakland's Sebastian Janikowski scored a point in his third country, having previously done it in the United States and United Kingdom. Joe Nedney is the only other player to score in Mexico, the U.S. and the U.K. Five other players have scored in Canada, the U.K. and the U.S.: running back Steven Jackson and kickers Robbie Gould, Matt Bryant, Dan Carpenter and Jay Feely.

General Manager Reggie McKenzie

THE SACRAMENTO BEE

Raiders' Reggie McKenzie learned tricks from one of trade's best

By Andy Furillo

September 4, 2016

Reggie McKenzie knew where to apply when it was time to pursue a career as a pro football executive.

It was 1994, and McKenzie – his playing days over and looking to become a scout – sent his résumé to the evaluator who first evaluated him.

As a scout for the then-Los Angeles Raiders in 1985, Ron Wolf recommended to Al Davis, the team's managing general partner, that the team draft McKenzie when he was a linebacker coming out of Tennessee. So when Wolf became the general manager of the Green Bay Packers, he had a fairly good idea what to expect in McKenzie – a hard worker who knew, loved and respected the game.

Wolf barely finished interviewing McKenzie for a scouting position when he'd made up his mind.

"I think I hired him on the spot," Wolf said last month.

McKenzie didn't know it at the time, but he was stepping into a hothouse where Wolf was growing a crop of future NFL player personnel executives.

The same year Wolf brought in McKenzie, he also hired Scot McCloughan as a scout. The staff already included John Schneider and John Dorsey, and the director of pro personnel was Ted Thompson.

Within four years, the Packers were rebuilt into Super Bowl champions. As a testament to Wolf's greatness, all five became NFL general managers, and Wolf later was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Thompson, who succeeded Wolf at Green Bay, and Schneider, now the general manager with the Seattle Seahawks, both created Super Bowl championship teams, like their former boss. Dorsey took a Kansas City Chiefs franchise that had endured five losing seasons in its last six and turned it into one that has made the playoffs twice in his three years. McCloughan, from Alameda, improved the losing Washington Redskins into a divisional champion in one year. It was McCloughan's second stint as a general manager – 49ers fans will remember him during the team's mediocre 2008 and 2009 seasons.

With his other protégés having experienced varying degrees of success, Wolf thinks McKenzie's time has come "to get on with it."

In four years, the Raiders are just 18-46, but Wolf gives McKenzie something of a mulligan. McKenzie walked into the job in 2012 with the franchise suffering under the weight of several years of bad drafts and lousy contracts that left it short of talent, and it has taken him a few years to work through the mess and mold the team into his own.

McKenzie has had three consecutive productive drafts and two strong offseasons of free-agent acquisitions. He also hired coach Jack Del Rio, who created a new energy and sense of confidence around the team. Now, in McKenzie's fifth year, the Raiders have a decent chance of winning the AFC West.

"You had to turn that whole thing around, and evidently he's been able to do that – to the satisfaction of the ownership there," Wolf said. "That's a really big plus for him. And nobody's rooting for him harder than I am. He's a heck of a person."

BRINGING STABILITY TO RAIDERS

McKenzie became the Raiders' general manager less than a year after the death of Davis, who saved the franchise in 1963 as head coach and later ruled it for 39 years. With Davis having complete and unchallenged authority, his teams won three Super Bowls. It had become almost inconceivable to think of the Raiders without Davis in charge. And in 2012, that inconceivability for McKenzie was topped off by the unsettling realization that he, of all people, had been named as the replacement.

"You had to step back and let it all sink in," McKenzie said.

While nobody knows where the Raiders will play home games over the long term, the team is moving ahead with a sense of stability. It starts with McKenzie, and Al Davis' son, Mark, now the chief executive of the team, acknowledged as much just before training camp began in late July when he signed McKenzie to a four-year contract extension.

"A lot of hard work went into it," McKenzie said of the drafts and player acquisitions that elevated the Raiders from laughingstock to contenders. "Hopefully, we can reap some benefits. It's good to see that Mark Davis sees the vision coming into play. We're on the same page, moving forward with this great organization. So I really feel good about the future of the Raiders."

With McKenzie at the controls, the Raiders in 2014 drafted defensive end Khalil Mack, now an All Pro. They also went for a second-rounder, Derek Carr, who looks like a future star at quarterback. In 2015, McKenzie drafted Amari Cooper, a potentially great wide receiver, and used the draft to load the team from front to back on both sides of the ball with talent and potential.

McKenzie's most prominent free-agent acquisition probably was wide receiver Michael Crabtree, who revived his career with the Raiders after falling out of favor with the 49ers. McKenzie stocked the offensive line with free agents, including Kelechi Osemele and Rodney Hudson. On defense, he signed lineman Dan Williams and linebackers Bruce Irvin and Malcolm Smith and defensive backs Sean Smith and Reggie Nelson.

McKenzie says he also looks for character in every rookie he drafts and every free agent he signs. The result is the most tangible of the intangibles – chemistry.

Del Rio thinks the Raiders have it, and he credits McKenzie.

"We're very pleased the way it has worked out for us," Del Rio said. "We feel like the guys who have come in really fit in well. They're good teammates, and the chemistry appears to be really good."

FINDING DIAMONDS IN DRAFT

Chemistry is great, but there has to be talent, too. The Raiders don't like to discuss their evaluation process, but the guru who spotted the ability that McKenzie brings to the job says it's pretty simple.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“What makes a good evaluator,” Ron Wolf said, “is the ability to determine who can and cannot play.”

Anybody can spot an Aaron Rodgers or a Peyton Manning, Wolf said. The genius is in finding a starter with a lower-round draft pick, such as running back Latavius Murray and tight end Mychal Rivera (both sixth round), linebacker Ben Heeney (fifth round) and defensive tackle Justin Ellis (fourth round). It takes hundreds of hours, Wolf said, sitting in the dark, studying film, to separate who can help from who cannot.

“Reggie had an advantage because he was a player, and he could fall back on his memory of who the good players were and the attributes they had,” Wolf said. “Eventually, he became my right-hand man with the Packers. He was a guy I trusted implicitly with running our football operation, our scouting operation. He did a masterful job of that. He had a knack of being able to pick out the guys who could play. He also had a command of all the other people who were playing in the league, and that was really beneficial.”

In 17 years with the Packers, McKenzie moved up from scout to director of pro personnel under Wolf and then to director of football operations under Thompson. The Packers made the playoffs 13 times, played in three Super Bowls and won two of them.

McKenzie watched and learned from Wolf, came to know him as one of the best talent evaluators in the history of the league. Wolf also knew how to scout a scout and what went into becoming a good one. Then, from the ones he hired, the Hall of Famer molded a wave of future executives who are among the most successful in the league.

Is McKenzie poised to join them? If so, it will probably be from the one thing he remembers the most from Wolf.

“No matter how anybody else sees it, he sees things with his own eyes,” McKenzie said of Wolf. “That’s what he told me – ‘Trust your own eyes.’ You can’t see for anyone else. You can only see for your own self.”

The man behind the Raiders' revival

While the Oakland Raiders enjoy a bye week, the man who assembled the roster that has led the revival of a once-storied franchise continues to plow ahead with the personnel duties that are never-ceasing and wisely suggest, “Work in progress.”

At least Reggie McKenzie, the Raiders' general manager, has the tools that have equipped him for the job.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Ron Wolf, the Hall of Fame general manager associated with restoring the Green Bay Packers' prominence, saw it coming after he hired McKenzie as a pro personnel assistant in 1994. McKenzie remained with the Packers in the player personnel department until he was selected as the Raiders' GM in 2012, less than a year after Al Davis died. Wolf recommended McKenzie to Raiders owner Mark Davis without hesitation.

"I thought he was exceptional at what he did -- that is, to evaluate talent," Wolf said. "He had a rare feel for evaluating players properly. He really was a cut above. I think that came from him being a player. He was smart, he was tough, he was strong and he understood the game. I hate to say this, but maybe the best thing for pro football is that he got hurt, couldn't play anymore, and he went into talent evaluation."

Wolf was a mainstay in personnel under Davis when Raiders selected McKenzie, a linebacker for the University of Tennessee, in the 10th round of the 1984 NFL draft. That season, he started all 16 games and was named to the all-rookie team after the Raiders went 12-4.

McKenzie played next to Matt Millen, an All-Pro linebacker -- yes, that Matt Millen, the former general manager of the Detroit Lions.

"I tried to hire Reggie in Detroit but he stayed put," Millen said. "The thing you valued is he thinks like Ron did. Ron trained him and Reggie was a great student, which if you know Reggie's background, he was always a great student in high school and college. Reggie has his own instincts, like Ron. He has his own unique way of looking at things, but he also is grounded in the fundamentals of the job."

Among those fundamentals, Wolf and Millen both agree, is finding a franchise quarterback. Wolf succeeded when he landed Brett Favre. Millen landed Joey Harrington.

"The bottom line is if you don't find that quarterback, then you don't have much a chance to go where you want to go," Millen said.

McKenzie spent his first two years in Oakland with few draft picks and a bloated payroll that led to massive salary-cap cuts of established players who were on the down side, before he pounced on Fresno State quarterback Derek Carr in the second round of the 2014 draft. McKenzie also scored big that year in the first round when he took University of Buffalo linebacker Khalil Mack.

"Reggie found the quarterback, he found a dynamic pass-rusher and he is using all the tools available to build through the draft, free agency, the trade market if necessary," Wolf said. "Just look at the offensive line. It's one of the best in football. He's used free agency and the draft to build it pretty quickly. If you don't have five of those guys up front, your quarterback won't have a chance to display those skills."

"The exciting part is that Reggie has built a strong personnel department, and because of his own skills, what he is doing is very sustainable. He weathered the storm of those first two years. I'm just delighted for him. It's exciting. It's exciting for the Raiders. It's exciting for the NFL."

Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie has proud franchise back in spotlight

By Jerry McDonald

November 18, 2016

ALAMEDA — The deliberate walk by general manager Reggie McKenzie en route to the practice field isn't much different than the way he resurrected the Raiders.

It takes patience to reduce a franchise to rubble and rebuild it into a contender.

McKenzie thinks the Raiders can get much better and is focused on the future. Yet the effect of beating the Broncos was undeniable for a team which had compiled its record against suspect opposition.

"It was significant because it was a team we beat with a winning record, the Super Bowl champs," McKenzie told this newspaper. "Any time you beat the good teams, that gives you confidence. The players are excited and we're moving where we need to be."

Next up are the Houston Texans, with the stage going from national to international on Monday night.

McKenzie understands the Denver win put the Raiders in another realm. With that comes recognition for the G.M., no matter how much McKenzie wants to ignore it.

Considering where the Raiders have been, McKenzie is a prime candidate to be the NFL's executive of the year. McKenzie and Jerry Jones of the Dallas Cowboys are the front-runners, and the contrast couldn't be more striking.

Jones speaks to the media regularly, even on daily personnel moves which are usually addressed by the head coach. McKenzie, although friendly in casual conversation, is seldom on the record and often on the road scouting talent, leaving coach Jack Del Rio to be the face of the franchise.

If Jones had landed franchise cornerstones such as edge rusher Khalil Mack and quarterback Derek Carr with his first two picks of a draft, he would be telling it to the world and posing for magazine covers.

McKenzie just smiles and shakes his head, the same personality at 7-2 as when the Raiders were 11-37 in his first three years. It was at that point owner Mark Davis was being criticized for hiring McKenzie away from the Green Bay Packers, where he had been second in command but had never run his own team.

McKenzie's in-week practice attire is sweatshirts and shorts with a ball cap. He could fit in with the equipment staff and often mixes in almost anonymously with players for meals at the training table.

"He can do the suit and tie thing when he needs to, but basically, he just seems like one of the players," defensive tackle Justin Ellis said.

Aside from beating a good team, the Denver win underscored McKenzie's vision of having a big, powerful team that can flex its collective muscle. The Raiders rushed for 218 yards and had a staggering time of possession advantage of 41:28 to 18:32.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Every member of the offensive line was acquired by McKenzie — guard Kelechi Osemele and center Rodney Hudson were high-priced free agent signings in 2016 and 2015. Guard Gabe Jackson was a third-round draft pick in 2014. Tackle Austin Howard came aboard in 2013.

“Playing physical ball is what we set out to do from Day 1 and our staff believes in that,” McKenzie said before pausing to make a point. “We’re not big and slow and we don’t want people to mistakenly think that. We believe in being a threat with our speed.”

Overall, McKenzie’s losses have more often been offset by bigger wins. McKenzie fired Hue Jackson and hired Dennis Allen but then brought in Del Rio. He lost left tackle Jared Veldheer but signed Donald Penn.

The Raiders’ defense, which gave up staggering amounts of yardage and points through six games, has been much better over the past three.

One steadying influence was middle linebacker Perry Riley Jr., picked up by McKenzie as a street free agent after six years in Washington.

“It took time, but I’m sure the players were down on themselves, got together with the coaches and said, ‘Let’s fix the problems,’ ” McKenzie said. “You fix that stuff week to week, hopefully you go in the right direction and it gets better and better.”

The beauty of the way McKenzie has structured the Raiders’ finances is most contracts are on a pay-as-you go basis without enormous salary cap hits for players who don’t work out.

No roster has upgraded its talent as much as the Raiders, yet they’re only one of two teams playing below the 89 percent threshold mandated by the collective bargaining agreement from the seasons 2013-16.

McKenzie, signed to a contract extension during training camp, will rectify that by locking up key players long-term, which could include Carr, Mack and Latavius Murray.

In a year-by-year culture, McKenzie has built the Raiders to last. It’s what he had in mind when he jettisoned bad contracts early on and took the cap hits to build for the long haul, absorbing the on-field losses for the long-term gain.

“I always felt confident in what I was doing,” McKenzie said. “I was used to going to the playoffs, having good teams. I had to take a step back and say, ‘How are we going to build this into a perennial playoff team?’ I knew it wasn’t going to be a quick fix. I did not ever panic. I just wanted to make sure I made the right decisions to get to this point.”

Head Coach Jack Del Rio

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Playing career earns Jack Del Rio respect

By Vic Tafur

September 7, 2016

There are photos of his wife and kids, of big fish caught, of him at USC — both as a young baseball player and at last year's Hall of Fame ceremony. But the biggest and most prominent pictures in Jack Del Rio's office in Alameda are of John Madden and Tom Flores, the Raiders' two Super Bowl-winning head coaches.

"That's the goal," Del Rio said.

Del Rio sat down for a one-on-one interview recently, despite being focused on Sunday's season opener in New Orleans that can't come soon enough.

Oakland improved from 3-13 the year before to 7-9 in Del Rio's first season, but, he said, "We want more. A lot more."

So Del Rio and his staff keep pushing.

The players love that Del Rio played in the NFL — and at a high level — and that he can relate to them in a way many coaches can't. The energy at practice and in the halls between meetings at the team's practice facility is much different than it was a couple of years ago with stoic head coach Dennis Allen.

For that, Del Rio owes a debt of gratitude to former Baltimore linebacker Ray Lewis, who played for Del Rio when he was the Ravens' linebackers coach. Del Rio won a Super Bowl ring with that team.

"He said to me, and I thought it was a real compliment, 'You keep it real,'" Del Rio remembered. "And I always felt like I could keep it real, because I have been in the trenches, I have had that helmet on, those pads on, I've been in the meetings. I understand what it's like to get up and compete every day..."

"I'm not asking them to do anything that I wouldn't do myself as a player."

If the players understand what a coach wants and believe it will get results, they will give it to him. So Del Rio works at having relationships with his players, and he enjoys the interaction.

To a point.

"I'm not trying to be anybody's friend," he said. "There is a respect for what they do and an appreciation for the fact that it's a player's game. As coaches, we provide a blueprint and a vision, and we want them to embrace that."

He even takes suggestions — quarterback Derek Carr said about 10 percent of the way things were done at training camp were changed after Del Rio met with the team's leaders.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

At his first head-coaching stop, in Jacksonville, Del Rio might not have been so agreeable. He used to cringe when he was called “a player’s coach.”

“I felt I really had to fight that when I was a young coach,” he said. “Because I was so close to playing. There were so many guys still in the league that I had played with or against. Six years after I started coaching, I was a head coach.

“So I was very sensitive then. ... Now, I am completely comfortable with that label. Being a player’s coach just means that you get it and you’re not so far removed.”

Speaking of labels, how about the “defensive coach” one?

“No, I don’t like that one,” Del Rio said. “I don’t like that because I am not. I mean, that’s what my background is, and if we’re going to talk X’s and O’s, I may have more to offer on that subject. But I am a head coach.”

Del Rio is heavily involved with everything, down to special teams.

“I am very much into the offense, very heavily invested in everything that makes up the team,” he said. “The weight room, strength and performance, how we’re feeding and training our guys, how we’re traveling. Everything that helps us be as good as we can be.”

A big key to the team’s improvement this year will be the free agents that Oakland signed. Del Rio thought the secondary was a glaring need, and the Raiders added former Kansas City cornerback Sean Smith and ex-Cincinnati safety Reggie Nelson. They also addressed the run game with former Baltimore guard Kelechi Osemele and the pass rush with ex-Seattle linebacker Bruce Irvin.

“The mystery with free agents you bring in is always the chemistry, how are they going to fit in,” Del Rio said. “You ask about guys beforehand, but you never really know until they’re in the building. But we’re very pleased with how everyone has fit in.”

The goal this year — as it was last year — is to win the AFC West, and that road goes through Denver and the Super Bowl-champion Broncos.

“Expectations are important,” Del Rio said.

That road is paved by 300-pounders, as Del Rio and general manager Reggie McKenzie agree that the foundation of a football team is the offensive and defensive lines.

“Being physical in the trenches is where it all starts for both of us,” Del Rio said.

The offensive line of (left to right) Donald Penn, Osemele, Rodney Hudson, Gabe Jackson and Menelik Watson should be one of the best in the league — which is good, because Del Rio wants to run a lot this season.

“An offensive line is a fist, and the fingers are starting to come together,” Del Rio said.

One can imagine Del Rio with his fists clenched on the sideline. He not only enjoys helping players reach their potential; coaching also feeds that competitive beast that still lies within.

"It's very addictive to me, the thrill of going in there knowing that you're putting your neck on the line," he said. "And you know that there are going to be Sundays where it gets chopped off. There's going to be pain. ... But I love it."

Del Rio is getting a fresh perspective now that his son, Luke, is going through that as a quarterback at Florida. Dad flew to see the sophomore's first start Saturday.

"It's awesome for him," Jack said. "I've always told him that I am more concerned with his character than what he does in sports. I never pushed him to play or do anything, because I knew there would be a lot of pressure to live up to this whole thing and I didn't want him to feel that. He still did."

Luke transferred from Alabama to Oregon State to Florida to pursue his dream of being a starting quarterback.

"Most people would have given up by now," Jack said. "He hung in there, kept the faith, kept grinding and kept paying the price."

Luke grew up watching his dad's game film, and then, about five years back, the script flipped.

"That was cool," Jack said. "He wanted to start talking ball. We started watching his stuff, his next opponents, showing him what I was seeing on defense. We would have sessions on the plane rides home where he would draw up a play and I would show him how defenses would adjust to it."

Jack attended Florida's spring practice this year and brought along a special guest, Academy Award-winning actor Gene Hackman. Hackman's wife and Del Rio were friends at USC.

"When he was doing 'The Replacements' in 2000, he came out to Baltimore and came to practice with her," Del Rio said. "And the four of us, with my wife, hit it off."

In "The Replacements," quarterback Shane Falco (Keanu Reeves) says, "Pain heals, chicks dig scars, glory lasts forever."

Del Rio couldn't have said it better himself.

"Winning in this league is hard," Del Rio said. "For us, it's just about preparing our butts off and then competing our butts off. All that other stuff is just talk."

"When we get our opportunities, if they're not going well, how is our resolve to bounce back? When they are going well, how do we put it behind us and move forward? One way or another, you're going forward."

The two things that pleased Del Rio the most this preseason were Carr's continued development and his team's work ethic.

"Last year, we showed them how we want to do things," Del Rio said. "This year, guys that were new, whether they were free agents or draft picks, heard from the guys that were here, 'Hey, this is how we do it.'"

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Since-retired safety Charles Woodson was the team leader last season – “Him buying in was huge,” Del Rio said – but Carr and All-Pro defensive end Khalil Mack, each 25, have taken over the heavy lifting.

“Those guys are really hard workers, always on point, and players see the leaders doing it so they do it,” Del Rio said. “It’s become part of the culture....”

“That’s your culture change.”

Offensive Coordinator Bill Musgrave

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders' offense humming under Bill Musgrave's guidance

By Vic Taufr

November 14, 2016

Back when Bill Musgrave was a quarterback at the University of Oregon, 27 years ago, he used to play a lot of "Joust," the video-arcade game that featured combatants riding flying ostriches.

The offensive coordinator of the Raiders, an admitted arcade regular in those days, repeatedly would pound the button trying to flap his ostrich's wings harder and harder.

"I once developed a big blister on my finger and it was hard to throw a football around for a couple of days," he said.

Musgrave, 49, doesn't play "Joust" anymore, but he's having some familiar struggles regulating his desire to flap those wings. On game days with the Raiders, he would love to keep assaulting through the air with quarterback Derek Carr and receivers Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree. Then Musgrave tells that voice in his head to be quiet.

"There is always a push and pull there," Musgrave said. "You want to find that balance between being aggressive and being responsible."

Looks like Musgrave and the Raiders (7-2) have found that balance, resulting in some high-octane offense, including Carr's franchise record 513 yards passing at Tampa Bay on Oct. 30.

Oakland ranks fifth in the league with 27.2 points per game and 401.1 yards per game. And the Raiders lead the league in fewest times getting sacked (11) and are third in turnover margin (plus-9).

"The guys have really prepared well and competed exceptionally on game day," said Musgrave, who sat down for a one-on-one interview. "We've established a lot of good habits, dating back to offseason workouts and training camp. We're protecting the football, and when a play is not there to be made, we're minimizing negative plays."

Musgrave is using a diverse combination of formations, groupings and route trees to get the passing game going. The tandem of Cooper and Crabtree leads the NFL in first-down catches (70) and first-down catches on third down (26). The duo ranks second in yards (1,439) and receptions (107).

Cooper says Musgrave deserves a lot of the credit.

"I love Coach Musgrave," Cooper said. "He gets me in great position and in space where I can make plays. He calls the plays based on everyone's strengths, and there is more trust now that we're all in our second year together and we're going deeper into the playbook."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

That continuity, with Musgrave and head coach Jack Del Rio together in their second season, definitely has helped Carr. The third-year quarterback has made another big leap this season, completing 66 percent of his passes for 2,505 yards, with 17 touchdowns and three interceptions.

“He is very steady, and that enables him to make these jumps every year,” Musgrave said. “He reminds me of (Minnesota running back) Adrian Peterson. Adrian only knows how to practice at full speed. There is no such thing as a walk-through for him. That’s the way Derek is.”

The Raiders had a practice Wednesday during the bye week and “Derek is letting it rip, right from the get-go, even though we don’t have an opponent,” Musgrave said. “That ball is flying during a walkthrough like it would be on a Sunday afternoon.”

Musgrave said Carr is the same man every day.

“So consistent, with the same approach,” Musgrave said. “Never down in the dumps or too giddy. Not even when he throws for over 500 yards.”

Not even when Musgrave allows him to check out of plays and call something else, like he did late in victories over New Orleans and San Diego.

“He wants me to take control, and he’s been slowly giving me more and more,” Carr said. “I told him that I can handle whatever you throw at me, and he’s been great at teaching me how to get things done, being a former quarterback himself.”

Carr said he has heard from other quarterbacks that Musgrave wasn’t as flexible in his first four stops as an NFL offensive coordinator, with the Eagles (1998), Panthers (2000), Jaguars (2003-04) and Vikings (2011-13), along with several stints as quarterbacks coach.

“He didn’t let things be changed at the line of scrimmage, but he is letting me do that more and more,” Carr said. “The cool thing is he loves to know my thoughts. A coordinator that loves to listen or run things that you feel comfortable with, that helps us all play confident because we like what we’re doing.”

They may start bouncing things off each other for the next game hours after the last one is over.

“The coaches get started a little earlier after road games, because we get to grade the film on the plane ride back,” Musgrave said. “We start by looking at first and second downs, all the formations on tape. Then the pressures.

“We look for trends and anomalies, looking to crack the code. See if we can find formations that might make the defense predictable, rather than having to prepare for the entire universe of defense.”

So, the Raiders are 5-0 on the road, but rather than celebrating with an adult beverage, Musgrave and the coaches are breaking down tape?

“I wish we were living it up,” Musgrave said. “There was a day back then, in the ’90s, when there would be coolers of beer in the aisle. You’d have to hop over them to get to your seat. But no more. Now it’s a bunch of guys on iPads. Have to keep up with the Joneses.”

This is Musgrave’s 17th year on an NFL staff, after he won a Super Bowl ring as a backup quarterback with the 49ers.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"The experience has been great for me, to learn from mistakes," Musgrave said. "You learn from triumphs, too. We're always looking for someone to exploit on their defense, and to somehow get one of our best players matched up against him."

"Hopefully, you get better each year at something you do over and over again."

Kind of like the Raiders' offense in their last win, over Denver, in which they kept running behind a mauling offensive line for 218 yards and three touchdowns. Musgrave used a lot of heavy sets, often with six offensive linemen, and showed a national-television audience that Oakland can beat teams in the air or on the ground.

"It was great to lead a game wire to wire," Musgrave said. "We want to start fast and make the opposing offense one-dimensional."

Musgrave's offense is not one-dimensional. Where once you could call him a West Coast offense coach, using the short pass to set up everything, you can't anymore.

"Being with the Niners and Broncos, it was the West Coach language from Bill Walsh," Musgrave said. "Still used that language when I was with the Panthers and (the University of) Virginia and in Jacksonville the first time with Jack."

Since then, the terminology changed in stints with the Falcons and Vikings, as well as with 49ers head coach Chip Kelly when both were with the Eagles.

So, the resulting offense, one with many different formations and tendencies, has no name.

"No name," Musgrave said. "Hopefully, just a 'score points' offense."

Offensive Line Coach Mike Tice

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders credit Mike Tice for stellar line play

By Vic Tafur

October 13, 2016

The first-down chains have been moving for a while.

"It's been a long journey," Mike Tice said of his 14-year NFL playing career and 20-year coaching arc.

But as he drives into work from Dublin to the Raiders' facility with his son, and gets to egg on one of the best offensive lines in the league, Tice knows he has made it to a pretty cool destination.

The former Vikings head coach isn't looking for another shot at calling the shots.

"I don't have any aspirations of being anything but being known as an excellent offensive line coach and a teacher of men," Tice said. "My goal is to help young men grow and to win a Super Bowl. I have been in the league since 1981 and I don't have a ring."

Tice, 57, made it to four conference championship games, one as a player and three as a coach. And now, just maybe, he has another shot, with the Raiders sitting at 4-1.

Derek Carr is averaging 277 passing yards a game, with 11 touchdown passes and two interceptions, thanks in large part to a line that has allowed the fewest sacks (five) and quarterback hits (11) in the league.

And that has Tice's fingerprints all over it.

"He's a great coach," center Rodney Hudson said. "He's smart, he's honest, he's been around a long time and he always has an answer for you. He does a great job, throughout the game, of making adjustments. Because you don't always make it to halftime to make adjustments."

The Raiders also have run for 119 yards per game, ninth-best in the league. And they've done it while dealing with injuries, as Tice has had to plug in five right tackles.

"I'm proud of the fact that the guys were prepared and ready to go in and play at a high level," Tice said. "They weren't nervous and the group wasn't worried."

Tice is also a master at knowing when it's time to be intense and when it's time to be loose.

"He lets us know when we're wrong and praises us when we're right," left tackle Donald Penn said. "The other thing that sets him apart, is when we work, we work and when it's time to rest, we rest."

"A lot of O-line coaches just work you and work you. If we get down early in practice, Mike's not going to add something just to fill the time."

As with head coach Jack Del Rio, Tice benefits from his time as a player; he and Del Rio became friends when they were teammates with Minnesota (1992-95).

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Tice was then on Del Rio's staff in Jacksonville, and when Del Rio became head coach in Oakland last year, the former linebacker called on the former tight end again. Tice is thankful the Falcons let him out of his contract as their line coach to join his friend early in the process, before an offensive coordinator was hired.

"Jack and I were able to put an offensive staff together," Tice said. "Jack had worked with (coordinator) Bill (Musgrave) before and I knew Bill well. We felt we put together a great teaching staff."

Tice inherited Penn and guard Gabe Jackson and right tackles Austin Howard and Menelik Watson. Then the past two years, the Raiders added prized free agents in Hudson and guard/bully Kelechi Osemele.

"I want the biggest, toughest guys I can get who can move," Tice said. "I want guys who can recover and react to a secondary move."

Or eliminate them. Osemele has been averaging 10 pancakes a game — "He's a knockdown specialist," Tice said.

This season has been more fun than usual for Tice.

His son, Nate, is working with the Raiders as a seasonal offensive assistant, a year after working in the Falcons' personnel department. Nate was once a backup quarterback (and Russell Wilson's roommate) at Wisconsin.

"It's been great working with my son, driving into work with him," Tice said. "We were at training camp and one day he just decided he wanted to coach."

Nate Tice, 27, joked that it goes beyond "free rent and free meals."

"I am spending 20 hours a day with one of my best friends," Nate Tice said. "My dad can relate to anybody. He adapts to his players and knows what to give them if they're smart or not so smart. In Chicago (when Tice was offensive coordinator), he called his offense 'a duh offense.'"

Keep it simple, and have a glass of wine — that could be his dad's motto. Mike and his wife, Dianne, fell in love with Napa on a trip there in 2010, and are quickly up to 1,000 bottles in their Seattle house cellar.

They have a special bottle saved for the Super Bowl win, but that goal isn't going to define Tice's career. He loves his job, after all.

"I love being in a group of brothers that pull for each other," he said. "I told my guys early on that if we're going to be a great offense, you're the engine and an engine has to be able to fire on all eight cylinders. The engine can't sputter.

"And I believe they buy into that."

Raiders rookie will cherish his New Orleans homecoming

By Marcus Thompson II

September 10, 2016

At some point, Raiders rookie guard Vadal Alexander will take the field in Sunday's season-opener in New Orleans.

His aunts and uncles and cousins are going to scream. His mother, Rhonda, will likely cry. His father, James, will scream at the top of his lungs. And then he will cry.

"It's going to be phenomenal to see him run on the field," James said. "I grew up watching the Saints as a little kid. To see him on the field against the Saints, all the feelings that will be running through me..."

You almost have to be from New Orleans to understand the significance and symbolism of this moment. Alexander, who backs up starting right guard Gabe Jackson on the depth chart, is a son of New Orleans.

He grew up in Atlanta, where his father's job as a manager of Marshall's Distribution Center relocated the family when Alexander was 3. But he was born in New Orleans. His family is there. He spent holidays and weekends there. New Orleans is home.

Which is why the thought of him making his NFL debut there trips him out.

"The crazy thing about it is I never played in the Superdome," Alexander said. "I've never been in there. I get goose bumps thinking about that building. ... That building has a lot of power, it means a lot to the people of New Orleans. It's going to be special."

To New Orleans, the Superdome is so much more than a stadium. Since the mid-70s, it has been a staple in the lives of residents. It's part of the city's identity, right up there with jazz, the world's best cuisine and Mardi Gras.

For a region big on family and fellowship, it was a gathering point. It was a place where music and food and hospitality converged to celebrate life and dust off its problems. Even when the Saints were terrible, the Superdome was a blast. Many other community events – the Essence Festival, college football, concerts – made this a community hub.

Hurricane Katrina added even more sentimental value to the Superdome. It was the ark as the storm ravaged and the levees broke and New Orleans was baptized in devastation. The Superdome took a massive beating, inside and out, but most of the people who couldn't and didn't evacuate were spared.

"The house I grew up in was gone. We lost everything," said James, Alexander's father, who housed seven family members in Atlanta after Katrina hit. "It was hard to see what the Superdome went through."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Ten years ago this month, in one of the most emotionally charged sporting events in American history, the Superdome reopened and the Saints returned home.

“I was at the first game after it reopened,” said New Orleans lifer Maurice Ruffin, an author and restaurant owner who is also Alexander’s uncle. “Almost anybody who was there would tell you it was one of the most special moments. ... Now it’s more beautiful than ever. It represents the rebirth of New Orleans. You can see our spirit in the Superdome.”

The city of New Orleans has come to be known for its resilience since Katrina.

The people there have been through it all – natural disasters, governmental misconduct, economic disparity, crime, drug and violence epidemics, poor education, poor leadership, bouts with national irrelevance – and refuse to cower to struggle and bitterness. Nothing will take their joy, rob them of the passion that produces their renowned culture.

Even now, Baton Rouge is suffering through floods bad enough to provoke flashbacks of Katrina. Alexander – who went to college in the city at LSU and whose parents and grandmother still live there – has to swallow the hurt and worry.

His friends from college who are still there and other families are helping. He’d love to have joined them, but he had to focus on making the Raiders’ roster and getting his pro career off to a good start.

“It makes me appreciate this, times 10,” Alexander said. “My people made it. My people are strong. The people of south Louisiana are just good people. They want to be happy. They want to live life, take every day to the fullest. They know from experience every day may not be there.”

That’s why it means so much for Alexander to make it pro. And even more for him to make his debut on New Orleans soil. In the same place his father calls “a beacon of light.”

The people of New Orleans and surrounding areas have experienced so many reasons to anguish and worry, they take full advantage of the chance to celebrate. Alexander will provide one this Sunday.

He represents how the party doesn’t stop. The generations will go on. Legacies will be continued.

That’s why several of his family members, who are Saints season ticket holders, will for one game be wearing silver & black.

“New Orleans can be an interesting and difficult place to live,” Ruffin said. “Part of our spirit is the idea that family is important to us. The bottom line is that when times are good and times are bad, you always have your family.”

LB Shilique Calhoun

CSN BAY AREA

Calhoun cross training to be Raiders' super-sub edge rusher

By Scott Bair

August 7, 2016

NAPA – Shilique Calhoun is used to attack mode. He spent most every snap at Michigan State with the opposing backfield in mind, where he was a regular in college.

He had 27 sacks as a Spartan, including 18.5 in his last two seasons. He was a traditional defensive end then, a pretty good one at that. The three-time second-team All-American has been asked to step back occasionally as a strongside linebacker. That's a hybrid position generally rushing off the edge, but Calhoun must be ready for anything at that spot.

The third-round pick is excited about a role being learned during his first NFL training camp.

"I don't believe that what they have me doing is outside my reach," Calhoun said. "I've covered in college, although not as much as I'm being asked to do now, and I think it's well within my athletic abilities. There are new responsibilities, and I haven't been put in a situation where I felt uncomfortable."

The Raiders want Calhoun ready for anything, as the primary backup rushing off the edge. He'll be used on a rotational basis at least, and will likely play a key role in moments this season.

"We try and cross train them to do multiple roles so that we have flexibility when the fall gets here," Del Rio said. "Shilique's done a nice job of being able to be a guy that can play when they're behind Khalil [Mack] or he can play in there behind Bruce [Irvin]. They're going to do both. We like them coming forward a lot, but they do have coverage responsibilities from time to time and so Shilique is learning, much like they're learning how to do both."

Calhoun left college a relatively polished pass rusher, with plenty of tools on the utility belt that help him get to the quarterback. The Raiders are adding more, but ultimately want to highlight his athleticism off the edge.

"You have to advance your skills at this level, but it was so great to hear them say they want me to be myself," Calhoun said. "They drafted me for a reason, because they like my style of play. We're trying to expand my repertoire a little more to counter what people have planned for you."

Calhoun has flashed threatening agility working with the second unit. He squared off against veteran Austin Howard earlier this week, and used great quickness to sneak underneath the big tackle and make a beeline for the quarterback. He earned a simulated sack then, one of several plays that indicate he's adjusting well to professional football.

"I have a long way to go, but I'm working through the process," Calhoun said. "I believe I have a great understanding of my role and what I'm being asked to do in terms of concepts of the defense. I've matured mentally, and I've gained some good weight. I'm right where I should be, knowing I have tons of work left to do. I have high expectations, and I want to exceed those."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Calhoun doesn't like simulated sacks, but knows real deals only come in games. His first game kicks off Friday at Arizona, where he hopes to bear fruit from this training camp's labor.

"We have some really good tackles, but I do try to get home a lot," Calhoun said. "I'm not sure how much I'm doing that. We'll have to see how efficient I am in the regular season, when it really counts. If I can't finish, a good rush doesn't mean a thing.

"This first preseason game is a great opportunity for the young players to showcase their talents in a game situation. I'm excited and ready to go. I'm counting the days down now."

QB Derek Carr

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders QB Derek Carr riding high, and taking team with him

By Vic Tafur

November 2, 2016

Derek Carr likes to say the game has slowed down for him this season, and his statistics and the Raiders' 6-2 record certainly bear out that assessment.

On the other hand, the national hype train is gaining speed and about to go off the tracks. The third-year quarterback is being called a favorite for the NFL MVP award by many of the hot-air bags.

ESPN's Stephen A. Smith even said Carr was the best QB in the league under 30 years old. When asked, "What about Russell Wilson?" — he of the Super Bowl ring — Smith said that Wilson was also in the conversation.

Pretty heady, if not a little premature, stuff for a QB who was 0-10 two years ago. Carr tries to tune out all of it, as the voices get louder and more excited leading to Sunday's prime-time tilt between Oakland and Denver (6-2).

"It means nothing," Carr said before practice Wednesday. "It's cool (since) as a little kid (you were) thinking about those kinds of things, but that's probably where it ends for me. ...

"I would rather not hear anything. I would rather just go about my business and hang out with my family. ... Trust me, I'm very honored and thankful, don't get me wrong, but at this point in the year, that stuff is not for me."

Carr was named the AFC Offensive Player of the Week on Wednesday after becoming just the third quarterback in NFL history to throw for at least 500 yards (513) and four TDs in a game without an interception. He also broke Cotton Davidson's franchise record of 427 yards passing in a game.

For the season, Carr has completed 66.3 percent of his passes for 2,321 yards with 17 touchdowns against three interceptions.

"He's had glimpses," Denver linebacker Von Miller said. "All the success that he's having this season is really not a surprise to me. I've seen it in him. I've seen the type of quarterback that he can be."

Carr won't get into where he thought he would be at this stage of his career, in Year 3, but he does admit that he "was swimming" upstream against fast defenders and blitzes his rookie year. He focused on getting better, and didn't look at where he ranked then or now.

"I never really saw myself, put myself on a list ... or anything like that," Carr said. "I just wanted to get better, I just didn't want to be the same and that's not only in football but just in life. I always want to get better at everything I do. You spend a lot of hours (training) that people don't see. ... It's cool to see it paying off.

"But there's still so much that I want to do and get better at, so I'm just not going to stop."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Blessed with a great arm and an early NFL education (thanks to being the younger brother of former Texans and 49ers quarterback David), Carr has been working on getting his footwork down, making the right reads and letting plays develop.

Sunday's win over the Bucs was his best game yet, NFL Films senior producer Greg Cosell said.

"He was very settled in the pocket and threw on balance," Cosell told Yahoo. "He had clean footwork, with more consistency than he has had in that area to this point. The Buccaneers' lack of a pass rush helped, but Carr was disciplined in the pocket.

"While Carr has always had excellent throwing skills, he has a tendency to play a little fast in the pocket and he has had footwork issues."

Carr has thrown an excellent deep ball from the start, but sometimes would resort to the check-down — or shorter yardage and safer — option to avoid getting sacked. And his footwork would fail him when he did pull the trigger.

In his rookie season, Carr was 15-for-71 passes that traveled over 20 yards in the air for 565 yards and two touchdowns with two interceptions, according to Pro Football Focus. His 23.9 percent accuracy rate was the worst among quarterbacks who took at least half of their team's snaps.

Last season, Carr improved to 25-for-66 for 831 yards and 12 touchdowns with four interceptions.

And through eight games this season, he has connected on 14 of 27 deep passes for 469 yards and five touchdowns with one interception.

Carr might be the best in the league now at dropping high-arcing passes over the shoulders of receivers such as Amari Cooper — see the 34-yard touchdown pass Sunday — and Michael Crabtree.

And a lot of that credit goes to his offensive line, for giving him time and confidence that maybe he didn't have two years ago.

Offensive line coach Mike Tice "is doing a great job of protecting him," Denver head coach Gary Kubiak said. "The thing with Derek, he's throwing it more than anybody in football and he's turned it over less than anybody in football. That tells you the growth of him.

"That's what this league is about. Can you be aggressive? Can you go out there and throw it around? Can you keep us in games and not turn the ball over?"

Carr has been sacked nine times, the fewest in the NFL. After his game-winning 41-yard touchdown pass to Seth Roberts on Sunday, Carr first celebrated with linemen Donald Penn, Kelechi Osemele, Rodney Hudson, Gabe Jackson and Austin Howard before running downfield to hug Roberts.

"I love them," Carr said. "I am thankful for them. They work their tails off just so I can stand back there and throw the ball. ... It just hit me like, man, I want to celebrate with them. Me and Seth, we will catch up later. Save my big guys from running all the way down there. They fought their tails off all game, so I thought I'd save them some time."

They haven't had much to celebrate against the Broncos, though the Raiders' defense did lead a 15-10 win in Denver in December. In four career starts against the Broncos, Carr has thrown for only 734 yards, with six touchdown passes and four interceptions.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“For the last however many years, they’ve been one of the best (defenses) we’ve ever seen in this league,” Carr said. “They’re always a good challenge for us, but we’re definitely looking forward to it.”

His teammates are, as they have long believed in Carr, maybe even more so this season. Carr has orchestrated seven fourth-quarter or overtime comebacks in his 40 starts, and three of them have come in the past two months.

Why wouldn’t the Raiders have confidence?

“We’ve got No. 4,” defensive end Khalil Mack said after Sunday’s win. “He’s going to let it rip, let it fly, and he’s got Coop and Crab.”

Mack went into a little more detail about his friend last week.

“You talk about the ultimate competitor,” Mack said. “Derek walks around with a fierceness in his eyes. It almost scares you a little bit if you look him in the eye because he is a fierce competitor. He is focused, will-driven and he is going to do anything to make the team win.

“So, to have a guy like that in the locker room, it only pumps you up more.”

That means more to Carr than any MVP chatter.

Clutch performances are latest step in Raiders QB Derek Carr's evolution

By Lindsay Jones

November 4, 2016

Derek Carr is developing a reputation — the kind that few NFL quarterbacks can boast — in his locker room.

“He’s the guy that’s going to lead us to that comeback win. He’s been playing tremendous, just off the charts. We know with him, never to count us out late in games,” Oakland Raiders running back Latavius Murray told USA TODAY Sports.

That confidence has been hard earned. From throwing a game-winning two-point conversion with 47 seconds left in a Week 1 road win against the New Orleans Saints to his overtime touchdown pass to Seth Roberts that produced a thrilling and improbable win against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Sunday, Carr is proving to be one of the league’s most clutch performers.

But this isn’t a sudden development. It’s part of a gradual evolution from rookie starter in 2014, to a rising star last year, to MVP candidate now.

Carr has heard about his candidacy — only because strangers have brought it up to him. He’s honored to be mentioned but doesn’t want to engage in any discussion about his credentials.

“I never really saw myself, put myself in a list or a ranking or anything like that. I just wanted to get better,” Carr said Wednesday.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"You put the work in, you get up in the mornings before anyone else wants to and things like that. It's cool to see it paying off, but there's still so much on my mind and in my heart that I want to do and get better at, so I'm just not going to stop."

"I think it's a lot of things Derek is doing better," Oakland coach Jack Del Rio said. "The timing with receivers, another year in our system, executing plays and taking turns at plays and knowing what the issues are and where the answers are, mastering the protection and understanding how to get the ball out when he needs to or where he needs to."

"He's more mature. He's a year older and wiser, so I think he's really played with great poise."

Del Rio declined to engage in speculation that Carr could be in consideration for that MVP award, but his numbers and contributions to the Raiders' 6-2 start say plenty.

Consider: No quarterback in the NFL has attempted more passes (323) than Carr, yet he's thrown just four interceptions and been sacked only nine times. His 17 touchdown passes rank third in the league, behind only veterans Matt Ryan and Drew Brees. And Carr has earned the ultimate trust of his coach and teammates.

"Over the course of the game, we know we need to go out there and make plays. But when it's clutch time, his intensity is at an all-time high," Murray said. "You can sense that when you're in the huddle, that this guy is going to do it once again."

What the Raiders seem to have discovered is that Carr is the rare player who can almost single-handedly make up for shortcomings elsewhere. And to be sure, though the Raiders are off to their best start since 2001, they remain a flawed team. From committing an NFL-record 23 penalties last week, to a defense that's ranked second-to-last in yards allowed, there are reasons why Oakland shouldn't be atop the AFC West.

But that's why Carr has become so valuable as part of a core of young players — it includes pass rusher Khalil Mack, receiver Amari Cooper and Murray — that seems to have changed the culture of the Raiders in the course of just three years. Oakland has also enjoyed the resurrection of receiver Michael Crabtree's career while benefiting from the emergence of other weapons like receiver Seth Roberts, who caught the game-winner against Tampa Bay, and tight end Mychal Rivera.

"Last year, we learned how to compete. And now we're learning how to make plays to close games out and make the plays that need to be made to win. Those guys are very key," Del Rio said. "The time they've spent, being on the same page in the critical moments, that often separates winning from losing. I've shown confidence in them a couple times, and they've rewarded it with their execution."

"It helps our football team build the belief that we're going to win."

Carr's biggest test comes Sunday night against the Denver Broncos and their top-ranked pass defense. Carr is 1-3 in four previous games against the Broncos but won the most recent meeting in Denver last year after throwing a pair of touchdowns.

It's the first of three prime-time games for the Raiders in the next six weeks, all chances for the rest of the country to see what Carr's teammates have been experiencing for weeks.

"Right now he's playing at a special level, and it separates him from a lot of other quarterbacks in this league right now and putting him in the conversation with the best of them," Murray said.

Derek Carr is so safe, he's dangerous

By Mina Kimes

November 22, 2016

Go back to Week 1. Raiders vs. Saints. It's the beginning of the fourth quarter, and Oakland is losing 24-13. Third-year quarterback Derek Carr takes a snap, drops back a few steps and then surveys the field--calmly, like a father waiting for his children to appear on the steps of their school. After a moment passes, he slings a beautifully arched pass to wide receiver Amari Cooper, who has somehow crept behind the Saints' secondary. It's a 43-yard gain and another highlight-reel throw for Carr.

Now go back and watch again. Instead of waiting for Carr to release the ball, pay attention to everything that happens beforehand. Watch the Raiders' tackles shoot their arms out and manhandle their defenders, while the guards refuse to cede an inch. Watch the chasm that opens up between the offensive line and the quarterback, an expanse of green that never seems to close. Watch the clock as the seconds tick by.

That's what Derek Carr remembers from that day. The time and the space and, more than anything, the smacking of pads and the crunching of bones and the terrible cries of mountain-sized men being knocked around by his blockers. He remembers dropping behind his offensive line as thunderous collisions unfolded in front of him, bearing witness to a level of violence that still leaves him awestruck.

"You can see it on film and you can see it on TV and you can see it in person," he says. "But when you're behind it?"

Behind 10-foot eyelashes, his blue eyes widen.

"You can hear it."

There comes a point in every story about Derek Carr when his older brother's name is invoked, typically as source material for the young quarterback's innate gifts -- and, until recently, his perceived flaws. David Carr, the Houston Texans' No. 1 overall pick in the 2002 draft, famously went bust. When Derek entered the draft in 2014, he had put up Heisman-worthy numbers at Fresno State, but David's story lingered in scouting reports like a bad Yelp review, and several QB-starved teams (including Houston) passed on the younger brother, sending him tumbling into the second round.

Their loss. After two and a half seasons with the Raiders, Derek has bloomed into a viable MVP candidate, steering his team to seven wins on the back of an exhilarating aerial attack. Heading into Monday night's tilt with the Texans in Mexico City, he has thrown 17 TDs and just three interceptions, a ratio that puts him in elite company and could set him up for a mammoth new deal. "When the ball is in his hands late in the game, everybody believes something big is gonna happen," says Matt Hasselbeck, a former NFL quarterback who now works as an ESPN analyst. "I saw that with Brett Favre when I was his teammate."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

And so it is that Derek's story has finally subsumed his origin myth -- and that his brother's failure, once an indelible part of that record, has faded away like a discredited theory. But to ignore it would also be a mistake. Because while Carr has risen on the strength of his unique talents, he has soared because of the giants who stand in front of him -- those violent actors who buy him room to breathe, a luxury David never experienced as a young quarterback. "I've been able to see complete, total opposite sides of it," Carr says. "I saw my brother in Houston have nothing. And I have our offensive line, which I think is the best in the NFL."

The contrast is astonishing. David, who played behind a rotating cast of human turnstiles on the then newly formed Texans, was sacked a record 76 times during his rookie year, which is more than Derek has been taken down since entering the NFL. This year the Raiders' offensive line has allowed just 11 sacks and 21 quarterback hits, ranking first in the league through Week 10. They've held up against stiff competition. The Broncos' dominant front seven, which entered their Nov. 6 game against the Raiders with the best pressure percentage of any team since 2008, according to ESPN Stats & Information, hassled Carr on a mere 21 percent of his dropbacks, Denver's worst performance to that point of the season.

To hear Carr tell it, battling Von Miller & Co. was like flying over traffic in a private jet. "We just played the best pass rushers in the NFL and it was the most comfortable I've felt," he says. The Raiders began building the current iteration of the line in 2014, the year rookie Carr became the team's starter. Right tackle Menelik Watson was already on the roster; GM Reggie McKenzie added left tackle Donald Penn in free agency, then selected Gabe Jackson, the team's right guard, in the draft. The Raiders signed veteran center Rodney Hudson in 2015, then splurged a year later on Kelechi Osemele, arguably the league's most formidable guard. To ensure that Osemele could continue playing inside, McKenzie re-signed Penn, and the line that fans call Carr Insurance was born.

This influx of talent has come at a price. Thanks in part to their quarterback's cheap contract, the Raiders currently devote $37.7 million in cap dollars to the offensive line, $3 million more than what any other team pays. When asked if he's aware of how expensive his line is, Carr nods. "As it should be," he says. "Mr. McKenzie told me from the beginning, when I was named the starter, he said, 'We're gonna build this thing around you.' They see that I'm valuable to them. They want to protect me."

Donald Penn remembers the first time he saw Derek Carr at training camp. As he and the other starters looked on, the rookie quarterback fired bombs to the Raiders' backups, showing off his crisp, flawless throwing motion. "I was like, 'This kid's got something about him,'" Penn says. "He carried himself with a swagger."

Penn -- older, tattooed, a little brash -- would seem to have little in common with Carr, who is almost comically wholesome, the sort of athlete destined to star in ads for milk and comfortable jeans. "I've never heard him say a cuss word!" Penn says. But Carr, who grew up hanging around David in locker rooms for more than a decade (when he was 6, he says, he used to eat lunch with his brother in the high school cafeteria), has always slid into new groups with ease. When he became the Raiders' starter, he began attending the offensive line meetings and tagging along for their steakhouse dinners, gawking as his massive teammates overloaded the table with food. He can recite information about their hobbies and their families, and he's shared his strong Christian faith with them. He often tells them he loves them.

While Carr has bonded with the entire group, he's grown closest with Hudson, the center who sets protections during games. Carr says he always pulls up a chair next to Hudson during team meetings and that the two of them will often stay up late on Saturday nights, bouncing ideas off each other in the team hotel. "We just go to another level in our discussions -- stuff we don't want everyone to hear because their brains might explode," he says with a laugh.

Hudson, a soft-spoken Alabama native, says he'll be out at dinner, look at his phone and see that "DC" has been texting him videos of plays. "We're in constant communication," he says.

The Raiders' offensive line is unique in several ways, aside from being the most expensive. Its starting unit is composed entirely of black players; Penn says they've hung posters of the NCAA-championship-winning 1966 Texas Western basketball team and the Tuskegee Airmen, other groups that shared similar distinctions, in their practice room. It's also the heaviest line in football, with the average lineman weighing in at 324.2 pounds. That runs counter to the trend of teams employing lighter, more athletic linemen who can move side to side while blocking.

Raiders O-line coach Mike Tice says he wants blockers who are brainy and athletic, but he doesn't deny that he's assembled a group of road-grading sledgehammers. The line's muscle was on full display in the Denver game, when the Raiders averaged 5.1 yards per rush. At one point, the team ran the same play 10 times in a row, simply overpowering the Broncos' defensive line with brute force.

In addition to tallying knockdowns (Jackson, the right guard, is known for racking up pancake blocks), Tice also tracks takedowns, which occur when a lineman uses his hands to bring down a rusher. "People say you can't be physical pass-protecting -- they think you can only be physical in the run game. I disagree," he says. "Even if we're passing, I still want to knock guys down and keep the quarterback clean." Carr is known for his lightning-quick release, but Tice wants his line to buy him enough time so that he can set his feet before taking deep shots, especially against defenses that play tight coverage. "We pride ourselves on that," he says.

"When a quarterback can step into his throws and he's got an arm like Derek?" He chuckles. "People are in trouble."

When Carr tells stories about his linemen mauling defensive players, he omits the opponents' names "to be respectful." The 25-year-old is incredibly polite and relentlessly positive. It sometimes seems he was manufactured in a lab for franchise quarterbacks, designed to appeal to GMs and grandmothers alike. So it's a little jarring when he gets fired up in response to a question about his brother's career in Houston. "I feel so bad for him because their team sucked," he says. (If that seems milquetoast, consider that "sucked" might be the closest thing to profanity in Carr's vocabulary.) "That's a team you dream of playing. The Raiders, if we would've played that team -- it would've been ridiculous. We would've looked forward to that."

In high school, Carr was asked to write a paper making an argument on any topic. He elected to write about why the Texans shouldn't trade his brother. What quarterback wouldn't have struggled, young Derek wrote, with such a feeble supporting cast? He says David would've "absolutely" thrived behind the Raiders' line. "If I was on that Houston Texans team, I don't know if my body would've held up," he says. These days, when Carr sees quarterbacks like Russell Wilson and Sam Bradford scrambling behind slipshod protection, he cringes. "Honestly, I feel for them," he says. "I'm so thankful for what I have -- what we have."

It's impossible to overstate the impact that offensive line play has on the development of a young quarterback. Just look at Dallas, where rookie Dak Prescott is thriving. While Prescott is undeniably talented, he has also been blessed with the opportunity to throw passes behind a battalion of human tanks. Meanwhile, fellow rookie Carson Wentz struggled in Philadelphia after Lane Johnson, the Eagles' stud right tackle, was suspended and replaced with an inexperienced blocker.

David Carr, who now works for the NFL Network, says that, after being repeatedly sacked and hit, he grew wary of his protection and gradually developed a skittishness that took permanent hold in his psyche. He compares being an NFL rookie to childhood -- a little boy or girl who grows up without encountering danger is more likely to become fearless. "It's like that with quarterbacks," he says. "If you're never in a situation where it's a complete disaster, you can develop at a normal rate."

He sees that growth in Derek. In college, the younger Carr completed 72 percent of his passes in a clean pocket but just 29 percent when under duress, according to ESPN Stats & Information. During his first two years in the NFL, he posted QBR ratings of 9.7 when pressured and 7.8 under duress. This year his QBR when pressured has risen to 41.4, which was eighth best in the NFL heading into Week 11.

Because Carr mostly avoids contact, he's learned not to fear it, even during the rare plays when his linemen get pushed around. "They've brainwashed me," he says with a laugh. As he's grown more composed and intrepid, he's become comfortable making adjustments on the fly. Take, for example, that throw to Cooper, the 43-yard completion in the Saints game in Week 1. "Amari wasn't even supposed to get the ball," he says. "But because they protected me for so long, I saw that no one was going anywhere. So I looked off the safety for, like, three seconds, and he had to take the bait. That ball never should've been completed against that coverage."

Going forward, Carr says, he plans to continue taking more risks on the field, trying his hand at creative looks and passes. "It's helped me take my game to another level," he says. In Oakland, he has the freedom to experiment -- and the time, and the space.

Raiders star Amari Cooper learned to catch a football on this Miami blacktop

By Jimmy Durkin

October 28, 2016

MIAMI — Amari Cooper wanted the game-winning touchdown, no matter the consequences.

This wasn't a stadium packed with 70,000 NFL fans, but the blacktop basketball court at The Barnyard, an after-school program and summer camp in the Coconut Grove neighborhood of Miami where Cooper grew up.

The football games there were legendary, and Gary Wilcox, a counselor now in his 21st year at The Barnyard, was Cooper's first quarterback. He has a hint of guilt when he talks about his game-winning connection with the Raiders' star wide receiver.

"It was a slant. I think I threw the ball a little too hard," Wilcox said, walking himself and a reporter through the route on that very same blacktop on a visit during the Raiders weeklong stay in Florida.

The problem? A tree that stood tall and proud in the back of the makeshift end zone.

"I knew it was a little too far," Cooper said, recalling that pass this week. "I had a feel. I know the area we were playing in. I still wanted to go catch it because it gave me a good feeling to catch a ball at The Barnyard because everybody was so competitive."

Cooper made the catch and then ... bam, he slammed right into the tree.

"I had the biggest knot on my face," Cooper said.

"He'll blame me for that," Wilcox said. "That was my bad, Amari. I led you a little too far. But he caught the ball."

Cooper caught a lot of balls here. Situated about a stone's throw from both his house and elementary school, Cooper attended The Barnyard from ages 5 to 12. The three-hour after-school program was enjoyable, but full-day summer camp was his favorite.

For his mother, Michelle Green, a single mother of five, the nonprofit center's free programs were a godsend.

"It was hard to afford after-school programs when I'm a working a low-wage job," Green said. "It meant a lot to me as far as giving them a place to go, knowing they would be safe and being able to do their homework."

Cooper never struggled to find inspiration to get his schoolwork done.

"We would always rush to do our homework because after work, we knew that it was football," Cooper said.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Wilcox and fellow Barnyard counselor Travis Swain — another one of Cooper's first quarterbacks — still remember meeting 5-year-old Amari.

"Very quiet, laidback, shy kid," Wilcox said. "Very observant at what his surroundings were."

"He would always be around with a football in his hand," Swain said. "Just throwing it up in the air, trying to see if he could get anybody to play with him."

That didn't prove difficult.

"We had so many kids that were super athletic," Wilcox said. "Every day or every other day when we had the opportunity to play sports, we would pick teams, and we'd be the quarterbacks just to see what the guys would do."

Fellow Raiders receiver Johnny Holton, a childhood friend of Cooper's who grew up in Coconut Grove, attended as well.

"That used to be the best times, playing football at The Barnyard," Holton said. "A lot of people running around trying to make plays."

"Amari wasn't the strongest or the fastest," Wilcox said, "but he was determined. He was always determined."

And he was never rattled.

"I do remember one incident," Swain said. "One kid was really downing him, 'Ah I'm better than you.' But Amari never gave any talk back. He never said anything. He just got back, lined up."

Within a few years, Wilcox started realizing they might be looking at something special.

"Between 8 and 9, he started transitioning," Wilcox said. "He starting doing some stuff that, you have an athletic gift that coaches can't coach — he had that. Some of the cuts, some of the instincts that he had, it was phenomenal."

Cooper's reserved nature has always been there.

"He was so quiet, and he never bragged about anything he did," Swain said. "You'd say, 'Great catch Amari,' and Amari would just throw you the football back and get ready to line up."

While notoriously stoic during interviews since he arrived in Alameda, Cooper's face lit up when he was asked about The Barnyard.

"They were great mentors to me," Cooper said of Wilcox and Swain. "They led me in the right direction. Gary was my first teacher of football. He taught me how to catch the ball and what to do with the ball after I caught it. It was really cool playing with them."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

The football there was important, but the educational tools were a big deal as well.

Katie Oxenhorn, the center's current program director, said an emphasis is placed on teaching literacy and "always trying to work with them in ways that they're not working with them in the schools." That even includes psychological counseling.

The Barnyard has about 125 students, with a waiting list of 10-15 others hoping for a spot. For a low-income neighborhood like Coconut Grove, it's a saving grace.

"The area that we were from, it wasn't really bad at all back then," said Ashley Williams, the second-oldest of Cooper's three sisters, and a former Barnyard student as well. "But now, it's bad, and a lot of those guys are not really seeing the age that Amari's at now. They're either dead or in prison."

Cooper has shown his appreciation to The Barnyard. In January, he made a donation to a book drive that put two books in the hands of every student and delivered additional books to keep at the center. He's also in the process of selecting 25 children to receive a new pair of shoes — something near and dear to his heart.

"I didn't have any shoes growing up, and it was such an embarrassment," Cooper said.

But one time, in about the second grade, Wilcox gave Cooper his first pair of Jordans.

"That sticks with me forever," Cooper said.

As Wilcox explains it, "You just couldn't help but give back to Amari because he was a kid that he just clinged to you. He just had that type of spirit and motivation about himself."

Cooper still gives off that vibe. Those in the Raiders organization who see Cooper behind the scenes rave about him. In Coconut Grove, there's a definite pride in seeing that he's remained as down-to-earth as ever.

"I'm happy that he remained humble like that because it took him far," Williams said of her brother.

And to know the role The Barnyard played in his development brings an emotional connection to his former counselors.

"I have a tear of joy for him," Swain said, "and I share that tear as I watch on TV and remember all those days of him coming in and out of The Barnyard."

Wilcox is able to view Cooper's success as a confirmation for why he continues to pour his heart into his work.

"That's what you work for — to touch one life," Wilcox said. "And to touch that young man's life, and he still remembers that you were a part of his growing up, that's what you do it for."

And for Green, Cooper's mother: "It meant a lot to me," she said of The Barnyard. "They really enjoyed it."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

But nothing shines through like Cooper's sincere appreciation for his time there.

"Most of my memories from being a young kid come from The Barnyard," Cooper said. "It's where I grew up. It's where I got my sense of everything."

Crabtree finds it's a blessing to give as well as receive

By Vic Tafur

October 13, 2016

After the students at the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts in Richmond sang and played instruments Monday night, Michael Crabtree walked to the stage and was dying to follow suit.

"Man, I wish I could sing," the Raiders' receiver said. "Oh, man ... I wish I could. Back in the day, my mom put me in choir but I was too nervous.

"My dad used to clean buildings, and there was a church and I would go with him. I would play the piano, the drums and sing ... because nobody was in there. I was a performer."

Crabtree's Crab5 Foundation helps inner city youth by promoting personal and professional development through the arts, music, sports and academics. Crabtree, in partnership with the Berklee City Music Network, visited the arts school along with Martin Shore, the director of the documentary, "Take Me to the River."

It's Crabtree's first charitable push in the Bay Area — he holds an annual camp extravaganza (there is a marching band) and other events for kids in his hometown of Dallas — as he develops a relationship with the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts.

"The sky is the limit," Crabtree told the 200 kids in attendance. "That sounds like a cliché, but I am proof. I work hard every day. Everything I want, I get it. I try hard, I try hard, I try hard and I get it. And I am motivated by you guys chasing your dreams, too. Let's do it."

Though he can't sing, Crabtree does have some dance moves, as seen by his footwork on catches in the back or side of the end zone. He dragged his feet perfectly before going out of bounds on a touchdown two weeks ago in Baltimore, and made a parallel-to-the-ground-while-tapping-down-the-toes TD catch Sunday. Crabtree is one of the big reasons the Raiders are 4-1 and one of the biggest surprises in the NFL.

Oakland head coach Jack Del Rio first rolled the dice in the season opener and went for a two-point conversion rather than a kick to tie with a minute left. It paid off when quarterback Derek Carr lobbed the ball up for Crabtree, who jumped over the defender and caught it for the 35-34 win in New Orleans.

"I am not new to it, man," Crabtree said. "We've had three games already that have come down to big plays on fourth down. You fight every down, and if you don't get it on second or third down, we have someone that believes in us in Coach. And I believe in Coach.

"Once he makes the call, it's just play ball."

Well ... not really. Carr checked out of offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave's call Sunday for a short slant route and — because of his confidence in Crabtree — instead had the receiver go for the end zone against San Diego cornerback Casey Hayward's single coverage.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I just know that as soon as the ball goes up, I laugh," Carr said Wednesday, "because I know what (the coaches) were thinking like, 'We didn't call that.'"

Some teammates even joke that the two-point call against the Saints was a run play, but Carr and Crabtree changed that one on the fly, too.

Crabtree doesn't think that's funny. This is serious business. He knows what Carr is thinking when they walk to the line of scrimmage, based on what the quarterback sees from the defense.

"We do it so much at practice, we don't even have to look at each other," Crabtree said. "We're so competitive with each other, we're just trying to win and I'm not trying to mess up his stats if I don't catch it."

Crabtree, 29, and Carr, 25, clicked when the receiver played with the quarterback's brother, David, on the 49ers, and that friendship grew when they saw how much they enjoyed playing catch and wanting to be the best.

"Just two competitive guys playing ball together," Crabtree said. "We're so competitive, man, and I hold Derek up there and he holds me up in the same way."

Crabtree is such a perfectionist at practice that Carr messes with him.

"I'll try to throw it extra hard and early just to test him, because I want to see it, because it's cool to me and he'll just turn around and just catch it with one hand and it makes you feel like you can't throw the ball hard at all," Carr said. "It's just effortless to him. Sometimes he'll catch the ball and he's not even looking. He's already looking to make his move."

"He can get away with it because he's gifted in that way. I wouldn't tell little kids to try to catch like that."

Crabtree tied his career high with 85 catches (for 922 yards) last year in his first season with the Raiders, and signed a four-year, $35 million extension. He is on pace for 93 catches, 1,136 yards and 16 touchdowns this season.

"He's been tremendous," Del Rio said. "He's come in here from Day 1 and been a great teammate. He's a leader in the locker room. He's a tough guy. ... He'll play when he's banged up. He's really a terrific competitor."

Crabtree doesn't talk about his injury-plagued six years with the 49ers, and there is no reason to do so.

"He's got a fresh start, fresh opportunity here to show us what he's about and that he loves football," Del Rio said. "That's all I've seen. I see a guy that loves football."

And Crabtree loves the kids. His 2-year-old son, Michael III, helped Dad and belted out a note when they were on stage together for a minute Monday.

"It's my first time attaching the Crab5 Foundation to anything here," Crabtree said. "It's only right that I get my feet in the dirt in the bay. Going to do all five, the sports, the education, the arts, the fashion and the music."

"Get some guidance, give it your all and have some fun with it. That's how we do it in sports."

WR Johnny Holton

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Amari Cooper's friend, Johnny Holton, may surprise at Raiders' camp

By Vic Tafur

August 4, 2016

Amari Cooper called it a "once-in-a-lifetime story. I never heard of anything like that until he did it."

The Raiders' receiver was talking about a childhood friend who didn't play high school football and was discovered by a junior college when he was playing in the park.

That same friend who was walking off the practice field in Napa.

Undrafted free-agent Johnny Holton.

Holton turned some heads with back-to-back deep catches in Monday's practice, just as he did in that Miami park five years ago.

"I was starting to think it was over for me and football, but I kept my faith," Holton said. "I still dreamed about playing in the NFL one day."

Holton is one of 11 kids, and because he didn't take high school seriously, anyway, he got a job working at a grocery store to help his mom make ends meet.

He loved football; he and his brother had played in the park with Cooper since they were 11, and he still played in a 7-on-7 flag-football league on weekends. "Our team was called ESPN," Holton said, smiling. "Lot of highlight plays."

A coach from the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Ill., saw Holton in the park when he was in town to see another player. He liked the highlight plays.

With the door opened, Holton quickly took and passed the GED and scored 15 touchdowns for the Chaparrals in two seasons.

He transferred to Cincinnati and showed his big-play potential, averaging 19.4 yards per catch (46 for 892) and scoring 10 touchdowns in two seasons. Holton missed seven games last year with a hamstring injury and wasn't a coveted participant at the NFL combine.

Many teams flagged him as too skinny or too raw. The Chiefs even made him work out as a defensive back.

After the draft, Holton had offers from two teams — the Raiders and Lions — when he used a lifeline and phoned a friend.

"Of course, I gave him some advice," Cooper said. "I want him to be successful, so I pointed him in this direction."

Holton, who is two years older than Cooper, was leaning toward Oakland, anyway.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I thought it would be good to team up with a friend," Holton said. "We were never on the same team growing up."

Cooper made the Pro Bowl in his rookie season last year, and Holton said that even at 11 years old, Cooper was a star.

"He was the real deal growing up, too," Holton said.

Cooper said Holton wasn't too shabby himself, and his friend already has shown the coaches his ability to beat defensive backs deep.

"He's made some great catches here," Cooper said. "He has qualities you look for in a receiver. No one can jam him at the line, and he's fast. He's developing nicely."

Holton followed up his nice breakout with a leaping catch Wednesday that got some oohs and aahs from the fans in attendance.

Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio said he heard the cheers for Holton, but added, "We'll learn more as we go." That's coach-speak for, "Don't ask me about a guy we may try to sneak onto the practice squad."

Making the 53-man roster will be tough, as Oakland is set at the first four receiver spots with Cooper, Michael Crabtree, Seth Roberts and Andre Holmes. Holton's chances would improve if he returned punts well, and he got his first look there Thursday.

He will keep grinding and honor the biggest piece of advice that Cooper gave him: "Never take a day off."

That won't be a problem for Holton.

"I am so blessed to be wearing the Silver and Black," Holton said. "I used to go to high school football games and just watch after I got off work. And now I am here."

Amari Johnny Holton, From Flag Football Talent To NFL Prospect

By Kyle Martin

August 11, 2016

Oakland Raiders wide receiver Johnny Holton grew up in Miami, Florida, along with friend and fellow Raiders wide receiver Amari Cooper. Holton attended Coconut Grove High School as a teenager, but wasn't focused on playing football. His priorities were elsewhere. As one of 11 children in his family, he focused on helping around the house, "By me working, I was just trying to make money to support my family," said Holton.

Holton put his family first, above his own personal desires, and felt obligated to contribute to his household. Although Holton was preoccupied with being a quality family member, he did enjoy playing flag football recreationally at a local park.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Holton's potential stood out to a college scout who happened to witness him play and offered him a chance to develop his talent at the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Ill. Recently, Cooper talked about watching Holton play at the park and their relationship on 95.7 The Game and watching him play. "The park is right across the street from his house and there would always be flag football tournaments," said Cooper, "I would go out there and watch sometimes...there was a junior college coach watching him play and he was impressed."

During his time in Junior College, Holton helped his team get to eighth overall in the NJCAA rankings. He was also named to the First Team All-Midwest Football Conference back in 2012 and had 23 catches for 548 yards including eight touchdowns. From one stage to the next Holton continued to progress as a player.

Holton credits that part of what made him successful in college was his ability to make plays after the catch. "The games I played in I had a big impression, I was leading the nation with 27.1 yards per catch," Holton said. After playing College of DuPage for two years, he was swooped up by the University of Cincinnati. In both of his years spent with the Bearcats, he had five receiving touchdowns and could've had a 99-yard kick return touchdown had it not been called back due to a penalty.

Coming out of college as an undrafted free agent, Holton reached out to Cooper and asked for his advice on what he should do. "He just told me I'm good enough to play anywhere in the NFL, just look at my options," said Holton, "I decided I wanted to be close to him and thought I had an opportunity here [with the Raiders]."

So far through training camp, Holton has opened the eyes of his coaches and peers. He's flashed a lot of athleticism and speed, while making impressive plays. Holton is putting his best foot forward to try to join his friend Cooper in the receiving corps. With the Raiders first preseason game scheduled for tomorrow night against the Arizona Cardinals, Holton will have plenty of opportunities to show what he's capable of.

With the next chapter in Holton's story set to begin, he'll be an interesting player to watch going forward.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Q&A: Bruce Irvin trying to take on Raiders' 'bully mentality'

By Vic Tafur

August 15, 2016

The number shines down on him just like the Napa sun.

"Fifteen sacks," Bruce Irvin said.

That's the number that Khalil Mack, Irvin's new teammate and opposite-end pass rusher, had for the Raiders last season.

"I hope they put three or four people on him and just let me run free," Irvin said, smiling.

Irvin is reunited with defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. after the Seahawks didn't pick up the fifth-year veteran's contract option. "I couldn't have been put in a better situation," Irvin said.

He sat down for a one-on-one interview after a recent training-camp practice. Among other things, he touched on leadership, being feared, Raiders tradition, Mack, his biggest surprise since joining the team and fights at training camp:

There has been a transfusion of new blood here with you, Sean Smith and Reggie Nelson on defense. What do you bring to the mix?

Irvin: Leadership. And not just talking about it, but leading by example. You have to get guys believing in one thing, and that's playing for each other. That, and try and get better every day.

When you guys take the field in the season opener against (New Orleans quarterback) Drew Brees, what do you want to be going through his mind when he looks across the field?

Irvin: Fear. We want to be feared. Not just on defense but as a team. We want to be physical and punish people. That's the biggest thing. We want people to look at the Raiders, and say, "That's a tough, nasty physical team. ... They're going to run the ball and they're going to play great defense."

Teams can take on the personalities of their coaches. Did you just describe Jack Del Rio and Ken a little bit?

Irvin: Definitely. They're a couple of bullies, and we're taking on that bully mentality. But that's just the Raiders, period. You look at the old teams here, and they would do a little extra after the play. It is what it is. That's the appearance you want to have, like you will do anything to win.

Did the young core of Mack, Derek Carr and Amari Cooper clinch it for you when you decided to sign here?

Irvin: It's a young team on the rise. And they added a lot of key pieces in the offseason. I looked at that, too. And playing in a familiar defense with one of the best players in the league in Khalil Mack.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

What makes Mack special?

Irvin: Regardless of the success he's had his first two years in the league, he's always willing to learn, always willing to see it from my perspective or somebody else's. He is a very humble person who is going to continue to get better each and every year.

You mentioned the known things coming in. Anything surprise you about your teammates in the offseason workouts and camp?

Irvin: (Middle linebacker) Ben Heeney. I really like Ben. High-motor guy who's not very big but plays bigger than he is. One thing about Ben is he's going to leave it out there for you every play. I have a genuine appreciation for that.

A lot has been written about you and Ken. But you're also reunited with (linebacker) Malcolm Smith, who was the MVP of the Super Bowl you won in Seattle. Have you seen any changes in Malcolm?

Irvin: It's a new Malcolm, because he is getting an opportunity. He didn't get a lot of opportunities in Seattle. He's been given a chance to be a leader and big-time playmaker for us, and he is doing a great job at that.

Do you have a chip on your shoulder about how it ended in Seattle?

Irvin: That's water under the bridge. I could never thank (coach) Pete (Carroll) and (general manager) John (Schneider) enough for putting me in a great situation and helping me grow as a player and as a man. But it's time to move on. I feel like I didn't reach my full potential in Seattle, and I am going to take full advantage of that opportunity here.

You tweeted out that you didn't want teammates to read the clippings and believe the hype. But ... you peek a little, right?

Irvin: Yeah. ... It is always good to be talked about. You get tired of hearing about the other 31 teams. It's good to get loved on sometimes. But it doesn't mean anything. So remember that.

What's the secret to not losing it at training camp? Meetings all day, practices, having a roommate. ... How do you ease the grind?

Irvin: You have to go out of your way to make it fun, otherwise you'll be miserable. It's draining. So you have to crack a lot of jokes at each other's expense, shoot hoops ...

Who's the guy to beat in hoops?

Irvin: The defensive backs have a lot of shooters. We have shooting contests, 30 seconds for each guy to make as many as he can, each position group. The last three days, the defensive line has won. Me and Khalil, and Shilique Calhoun and Darius Latham can both shoot.

There have also been some boxing contests between some of your defensive teammates and guard Kelechi Osemele. Is that just part of the camp grind?

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Irvin: That's just who he is. He's a physical, tough-nosed guy. We just have to get him to understand that we're all on the same team. You can't try and hurt your own guy. But he is on a new team. They may have practiced differently in Baltimore. ... He's a good guy. Going to be a great player for us. Can't wait to see him out there in the opener. Just another Raiders bully.

Raiders reunite Bruce Irvin, Perry Riley Jr.

By Vic Tafur

October 20, 2016

Bruce Irvin doesn't have the time or the temperament for trips down memory lane. But this one, the Raiders' outside linebacker admits, is too good to pass up.

Oakland signed inside linebacker Perry Riley Jr. two weeks ago. He and Irvin had met before.

"Fourth grade," Irvin says, without a hint of a smile. "We were enemies. We were both the biggest and the fastest in the school. Both trying to be the biggest guy on campus...."

"We were enemies for a good little minute."

The Friday before he signed with the Raiders, Riley was talking to his mom about which team he wanted to play for. Surprised that he had been cut by Washington, Riley wanted to stay close to his Stone Mountain, Ga., home and told his mom he hoped the Atlanta Falcons or Carolina Panthers called.

Or the Oakland Raiders. Riley, 28, would play for the Raiders.

"You said you didn't want to go too far," said his mom, Fonda. "California is far."

"I would go that far to play with BJ," her son said.

BJ is what family and friends call Irvin.

"The Raiders called Monday," Fonda Riley said. "It was so amazing. Perry was so happy that he got to play with his best friend."

Irvin said he didn't like Riley until the seventh grade. And they saw each other often, living down the street from each other.

Finally, there was a spirited basketball game — "We used to go neighborhood versus neighborhood, serious stuff, like we were playing for money," Irvin said — and the two weren't roughing up each other, but on the same team.

"Ever since that day, we've been cool," Irvin said. "We still compete over everything, but that's just the kind of friendship we have. Real solid connection."

"He's a dawg, just like me."

Riley said Irvin and he would try to be on the same team in PE class, but "it was considered cheating. Being the fastest, strongest guys eventually brought us together and we became like brothers and the bond became unbreakable."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

(At this point, Irvin, a few lockers down, yells out, "Stop talking about all this personal stuff. It's time to play football now.")

Irvin might want to cover his ears for this one, then.)

Riley was asked who won the early-years matchups?

"Football, basketball, kickball ... ask him. ... I did. I won most of those," Riley said, laughing.

Irvin was the quarterback and Riley the running back, with both playing linebacker on defense, in middle school and into high school.

"They rode to school together, had sleepovers, were always in each other's yard," Perry Riley Sr. said. "Both kids loved to compete and loved to win, and they pushed each other. All the way to the NFL."

They played together one season at Stephenson High, with Irvin at receiver as the Jaguars lost in the quarterfinals of the state tournament. The next year, Irvin dropped out of high school to earn money to help his mother and spent three weeks in jail on larceny challenges.

Irvin passed his GED the following year and got his football career back on track at Mt. San Antonio College in Southern California. His athleticism got him a shot at West Virginia, where he led the nation in sacks.

Riley went to LSU, and the friends then discussed about one day playing together again.

"We always talked about that," Riley said. "Then, when he was going through the draft process, I was already at Washington and we got our hopes up, but no. Then, he called me as soon as Washington cut me. And here I am."

Irvin is the starting outside linebacker. Riley started in place of the injured Malcolm Smith and is competing with him now for snaps. They will both have a lot of family and friends in the stands when the Raiders (4-2) play at Jacksonville on Sunday and then at Tampa Bay the following Sunday.

"It will be like a home game for us," Riley said "My family's first chance to see me as a Raider. I am fired up. ... I am just here to help. We're 1-1 since I got here, and we want to get that losing taste out of our mouths."

Irvin actually cracks a smile when asked about his new teammate as a player.

"He doesn't shy away from contact," Irvin said. "His presence is definitely felt on Sunday."

Still standing: Sebastian Janikowski's unlikely path to Raiders royalty

By Don Banks
June 22, 2016

OAKLAND — You hear him coming down the hall before you see him, and by the time he breezes into the room and slowly slides himself into a chair, you're already starting to get why everybody here in Raiders country seems to adore Sebastian Janikowski.

He wears a perpetual bemused smile and a cap turned backwards in his trademark fashion, the look of a guy who hasn't had a real worry in years. At 38, and entering his 17th season as an NFL kicker, there are, to be sure, a few lines on his round, jowly face these days. But he laughs easily and often, and appears quite comfortable in his weathered skin. With more than a hint of his thick Polish accent still present, a playful manner that never goes out of style, and that Hall of Fame nickname, the man they affectionately call "Seabass" is regarded as royalty around the Raiders' complex. He's a walking, talking (and kicking) Oakland institution.

"He's one of my favorite teammates I've ever had, he really is," Raiders third-year quarterback Derek Carr says. "He's got such a good heart. I talk to him every morning, and he sits behind me at every team meeting. He means the world to me."

"He's the guy around here," says Oakland fullback Marcel Reece, a teammate of Janikowski's since 2008. "We treat him like he's one of one. An original. A living legend. He's been here so long he's like a statue in front of the building. But he's one of the greatest people I've met in football, and he's a warrior."

Adds veteran Raiders offensive tackle Donald Penn: "Who doesn't love Seabass? He's like a fixture here. I would love to give him a fairy tale ending, to see him go out with the Raiders on top. But knowing Seabass, he's probably still got at least three more years in him."

The mind boggles at the thought, but it's been 16-plus years since strong-willed Raiders owner Al Davis stunned the NFL world and elicited howls of derision by taking Janikowski 17th overall out of Florida State in the 2000 draft, the first kicker selected in the first round of a non-supplemental draft since the Saints' failed Russell Erxleben experiment in 1979. But who's laughing now, with the colorful and cannon-legged Janikowski about to give Oakland a 17th season of production in return for that gutsy No. 17 pick? How many clubs ever realize that rich of a return on a draft investment?

"I think it's a hell of a return," says Janikowski, as blunt as ever. "I'm still going strong. I don't know how many guys are even still playing from the Class of 2000 draft. I think I'm the only one." (Well, there is that Tom Brady character, too, along with Janikowski's old teammate Shane Lechler.) "Everybody was like, 'What's Al Davis doing?' But hey, 17 years later and I'm still kicking, so they did something right."

Not only is he still kicking, but for the majority of his first 16 seasons as a Raider, Janikowski was arguably Oakland's best player and only real star attraction, a beacon of steady production amid the franchise's long, painful stretch of ineptitude. And yet after all these years, how is it that we hear so little about Janikowski, maybe the most underappreciated great player in recent NFL history? Chalk it up perhaps to Oakland's desultory decade-plus of putrid play.

After reaching the playoffs in each of Janikowski's first three seasons, capped by that Super Bowl trip at the end of the 2002 season, the Raiders are mired in a 13-year postseason drought that trails only Buffalo's 16-year odyssey of frustration. In 10 of those seasons, Oakland mustered five or fewer wins, topping out at 8-8 in both '10 and '11. Unless No. 11 was taking the field to bang home another long-distance kick, the Silver and Black have rarely been worth watching.

"We've lost some games, that's true," Janikowski says. "After my first three years, when we went to the playoffs and the Super Bowl, in my mind, it was like, that's how it works. Every year, playoffs. Then 13 years later, still no playoffs, and suddenly you're in the desert. You're at home watching the damn playoffs and everybody else is playing in them. You're like, 'Man, we should be in it. We should be out there.' But I think that's going to change soon."

There is finally legitimate hope in Oakland after last season's four-game improvement to 7-9, and Janikowski is dying to kick for a winner again. His 252 career games are more than any other Raider has ever appeared in, and his powerful left leg is the stuff of legend, responsible for 385 field goals in 480 career tries (80.2%) and NFL records like longest overtime field goal (57 yards in 2008), most 50-yard-plus field goals in a game (three in '11), and most 60-yard-plus field goals in a career (two, tying him with Morten Andersen).

All that he lacks at this point is that amplifying blast of late-career glory that would come with team success, giving even greater meaning to his impressive statistical accomplishment and his revered status as the Raiders' long-time survivor, the sole remaining link to Oakland's last Super Bowl team.

It's easy to forget from the vantage point of 2016, now that he's a solid citizen and beloved member of the organization and Oakland community, but there were times early on when Janikowski's career seemed to be going off the rails, destined to end almost before it began.

"No way he was going to make it this long"

Back in 2000 and '01, Janikowski's catchy nickname was more likely to elicit eye rolls than smiles, especially for then Raiders coach Jon Gruden, who grew exasperated with his kicker's inconsistency and his insatiable love of the party scene.

With that gaudy first-round target on his back, Janikowski was supposed to come in and immediately shore up Oakland's bedeviled kicking game, which in 1999 saw free-agent signee Michael Husted struggle mightily before being released after 13 games. Davis is said to have pinpointed a half-dozen games in '99 that were lost in part due to kicking failures (Oakland finished 8-8), and thus decided to go big and bold in the 2000 draft, selecting both Janikowski and Lechler, the big-legged Texas A&M punter who went in the fifth round.

But the pressure of kicking in the NFL nearly broke Janikowski, a two-time All-America selection at Florida State. He was just 22 of 32 in field goals that season (68.8%), and struggles with injuries (a case of cellulitis cost him two games) and his shaky transition to the longer pro season made his debut an endurance test he nearly flunked. He missed seven of his first 13 field goal tries in 2000.

"It was rough, the whole season," Janikowski says. "I was nervous as hell. I didn't know what to expect. And because I was a first-round pick, the spotlight is on you. You want to show the guys you were worth that pick, but you've got to be perfect. I was a young guy coming out and dealing with a lot of problems. I had off-field issues in college and all that stuff, and there's so much pressure on you that sometimes you think maybe I should have just gone in the fourth round."

Those "off-field issues" at FSU, including a pair of bar fights, followed Janikowski to the NFL, where a string of incidents highlighted his immaturity and obvious issues with drugs and alcohol. Early in his Raiders career, Janikowski's behavior was erratic enough to pose a serious public relations problem for the organization, the type rarely caused by kickers. Two months after being drafted, he was arrested on suspicion of felony possession of the date-rape drug GHB (he was later found not guilty), and in October 2001 he needed to be taken to the hospital to close a cut on his face after passing out in a San Francisco nightclub where some witnesses had said they saw him take the drug. In June 2002, he was charged with reckless driving in Tallahassee, and he was arrested in October of that year on a drunken driving charge, serving three years of probation after pleading no contest.

Still months shy of his 25th birthday, Janikowski was already at a crossroads in his career, which was beginning to be defined by his off-field problems. He has credited that drunk driving arrest in 2002 as being the impetus he needed to make real changes in his behavior, and his career began to flourish after he got his drinking under control.

"I definitely went through some stuff," Janikowski says. "I stuck with the Raiders and they stuck with me. My life now is not what it used to be back in the day. I mellowed a long time ago. I've got family, my kids [twin girls], they're going to be four in September. You grow up, you move on. I still have fun, but now it's with my kids. Back in the day, I'd be out somewhere on the street."

Back in the day, Raiders Hall of Fame receiver Tim Brown didn't give Janikowski much of a chance of making it to year seven in the NFL, let alone year 17. He marvels at Janikowski's ability to re-write the narrative of his career.

"I'm shocked that he's made it this far, because I thought there was no way he was going to make it this long in the league," says Brown, who played with the kicker from 2000 to '03. "It's always amazing when I see Seabass now and see how much of a gentleman he is and how he talks about his wife and kids. My first reaction was, 'Oh, my God, his poor wife.' But I realize he's a different man, he's a changed man. He had a lot of pressure on him when he first got to Oakland, and I don't think he was handling it very well. And his way of handling things was to go out and do more of what he had been doing the night before. That was the big issue."

Because his teammates were well aware of his partying lifestyle, Janikowski often didn't receive the benefit of the doubt if he missed a kick or struggled through an off day.

"When mistakes happen, and everybody knows you've been out partying all night and you've been out doing all this crazy stuff, then people are not going to believe you're taking this thing seriously," Brown says. "I know there were several times when he missed field goals in games, and you heard guys wondering on the sideline, 'Well, yeah, he shouldn't have been out last night or Friday night, whatever.'"

"I just think he was so talented as a kicker, he always felt like he was going to be O.K. He didn't believe in that karma thing. For a few years he just had a reputation that he just didn't care much about what was going on. Now, he would tell you he cared, and it's not like he didn't work hard in practice. But at the same time, he was working just as hard off the field on all that other stuff."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Lechler, now entering his fourth season with the Texans, was Janikowski's running partner early on, and he has seen the full arc of his friend and ex-teammate's journey from near calamity to respectability. To be young with too much disposable income and time on your hands in the NFL has long been a recipe for trouble, and Janikowski consistently found it.

"Bass came a long way, and everybody knows the Florida State stories, how [coach Bobby Bowden] treated him and gave him a long leash down there," says Lechler, who held for Janikowski at the 2000 NFL scouting combine and then throughout their 13 seasons together in Oakland. "But once we got to the NFL, and I even lived with him my first two years, I mean, we had some moments where you'd wake up the next morning like, 'Man, we've gotta quit this, you know? We've got to start focusing just on football.' Thank God there wasn't a whole lot of social media at the time and stuff like that."

In those days, Janikowski the partier was every bit as adept as Janikowski the kicker, Lechler recalls. Not that it was a sustainable career trajectory.

"It wasn't like we were out raising hell every night, but we had our times," Lechler says. "I get asked the question all the time: 'I bet that was crazy running with Seabass,' and I'm always like, 'Yeah, it was crazy, maybe like three nights a month. The rest of the time he was fine, just normal stuff. But we had a good time, and Bass of all people, he can have just as good a time as anybody you can find in this world. He can be a blast.'"

Janikowski has almost started to look like the old pirate in the Raiders' logo over the years—sans eye patch—but he's a 6' 1", 265-pound softie at heart, according to Lechler.

"He's a guy I would say that 90% of NFL fans would love to hang out with," Lechler says. "And I wish they all could, because for one it would get the bad reputation out of people's heads. He'll go and have a few beers with you, and he'll maybe miss a curfew now and then. But if you get to know deep down what the guy's like, he's a guy you'll want to be your friend, I promise you."

"There was nobody in the game better, and we knew it"

About the nickname: Janikowski came into the league with several monikers, but Seabass is the one that endured. He can tell you the wonderfully straightforward story behind it.

"Seabass is the best nickname, and it's stuck since [former FSU star receiver] Peter Warrick back in college," Janikowski says. "He said Sebastian was so long for him that he didn't want to say it. So he started calling me Seabass at Florida State and it stuck with me. That's all I'm ever called. I should [trademark] it."

If Janikowski does have a trademark of sorts, it's for playing with the psyche of the opposing team in pregame warmups. His booming left leg was always his trump card.

"This is how we approached every pregame warmup: No matter what, wherever their kicker kicked a field goal from, we went five yards further than them and kicked," Lechler says. "If we were in Denver, with that light air, we'd get back in the 68-69-70-yard range just to kind of get the upper edge in the mind games. I never even had to ask him, 'Where do you want to kick the next one from?' I just went five yards further than where the opposing kicker just kicked from, and that's where we lined up."

When it calls for classic Seabass stories, the ones that show him at his most colorful and quirkiest, Lechler is a human Wikipedia page. They didn't just live together those first two years in the NFL, they were practically inseparable as friends and fellow elite kickers. They were very, very good for a team that was usually very, very bad, and they shared that bond proudly.

“There was a stretch of four or five years there where there was nobody in the game better, and we knew it,” says Lechler, who went to seven Pro Bowls in his Oakland tenure. “We kind of had the same, I guess you’d say, attitude about toward the game. There was just a chemistry and approach to football that we shared. And we are both competitive as hell.”

Not that there weren’t annoying little differences between them that cropped up at regular intervals. Like on their rides together to Raiders home games, when Janikowski always insisted upon driving.

“I rode with Bass in his car to every home game we ever played together, and his music that he likes is way different than mine,” Lechler says. “He’s a big techno guy and I’m straight country. When we were riding, I’d get at least one of my songs in, but he’d never listen to one of mine as we were actually pulling into the stadium parking lot. Never once. It had to be his music.”

Kickers can be somewhat eccentric by nature, of course, and Janikowski developed more than a few idiosyncrasies, some of which drove his punter a little nuts.

“He had two things that bothered me,” Lechler says. “One, he wrote his number, No. 11, on his hat 11 times. It made every hat look awful. It just ruined every hat. I’d be like, ‘They just gave you that thing.’ I don’t why, but I like hats and that bugged me that he did that same thing every time. And it was No. 11, so it looked just like tally marks all over the hat. I’d be like, ‘What are you doing, man?’

“Then the other thing was no matter what kind of shape the kicking balls were in that day, he yelled at the ballboys. I actually told the ballboys, ‘Hey, listen, this is part of his routine. Those balls are probably the best balls I’ve kicked in five years, but he’s going to yell at you. I don’t care what you throw out there.’ It’s just what he does.”

As it turns out, Janikowski and Lechler don’t even agree when it comes to picking the biggest or best kick of Seabass’s storied career. Janikowski goes with his 57-yard game-winner in overtime to beat Brett Favre and the visiting Jets in October 2008, the longest OT field goal in NFL history.

“[Raiders coach Tom Cable] looked at me and said ‘Go win it,’ like he really believed in me,” Janikowski says. “But if I don’t make that field goal, they were in such good field position that they could have made one play and they win it.”

Lechler has a different perspective. He’s convinced the 61-yarder that Janikowski somehow nailed in terrible conditions in Cleveland in December 2009 was his finest moment, even if it came in a 23–9 Raiders loss.

“The Jets kick was a big-time kick, but the 61-yarder in Cleveland in the snow, that was the best kick of his NFL career,” Lechler says. “I mean, the wind’s blowing and it’s kind of snowy mix, and it cold and miserable, just typical Cleveland in December. It’s one of the only times I ever jogged out there and thought, ‘He ain’t got a chance to make this one.’ But I put it down and he split the uprights, and I’m like, ‘Holy s---.’”

Going unselected by both, curiously, was the league-record-tying 63-yarder Janikowski converted at the end of the first half on a Monday night in Denver in September 2011, a mark since broken by the Broncos’ Matt Prater, who hit a 64-yarder in ’13.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“He couldn’t pick that one, because he mishit the 63-yarder in Denver,” Lechler said. “He didn’t even get it good.”

Adds Janikowski: “I didn’t even really hit it hard, because in Denver with the elevation, you don’t have to. I can’t even imagine what the record might be if I got to play my whole career in Denver. Seventy yards? I think so, I mean, I’ve got to say it.”

But perhaps the quintessential Janikowski highlight, the one that captures him in all his one-of-a-kind glory, took place in Kansas City’s Arrowhead Stadium on Christmas Eve 2011. The Chiefs and Raiders were tied 13–13 in overtime, but Oakland was driving for the game-winning field goal try. Then a Chiefs fan unwisely tried to get into Janikowski’s head. Or thereabouts.

“We’re warming up on the sideline, and in Kansas City the stands are like right on top of the visiting sideline, and there’s really no room to warm up,” Lechler says. “All of a sudden this big dude throws like a chili cheese nacho and hits Seabass pretty much right in the numbers. And we’re in our white road jerseys. It’s like right on his stomach. Now, he’s not a fat guy, but to have chili and cheese on you in a white uniform, when you’re built like that, it’s not a good look.

“So now he stopped warming up because he was pissed off at the guy, and I’m like, ‘Great, now he’s mad at this guy and distracted, we’re not going to make this kick.’ He’s got the trainers trying to get all that s--- off him and they’re spraying water on it. So now we go out there, and it’s not a deep kick [36 yards], and boom, he kicked it, gives me a quick high five, and then sprints right back to the warmup spot, right to that guy. I don’t know what he said over there but I can imagine what he said. I didn’t see him again until the locker room. That was a great moment right there. That was a fun one.”

“I wouldn’t want to be the next first-round kicker”

Sixteen years after the Raiders rolled the dice on Janikowski in the first round, there was an echo of their bold pick when the Buccaneers chose another Florida State kicker, Roberto Aguayo, in the second round with pick No. 59. That’s the highest selection used on a kicker since the Jets took Ohio State’s Mike Nugent in the second round in 2005 at No. 47. In the selection of Aguayo, the Bucs seemingly gave a vindicating nod to Seabass’s long and prolific career.

“Yeah, I’m still doing it, and if the Bucs get what the Raiders got out of me, that’s a great pick,” Janikowski says. “I still watch Florida State a lot, and he’s going to turn out to be one of the greatest kickers. I think he’s going to have a hell of a career, but I know how much pressure he’s under.”

Though Oakland once again has Italian-born kicker Giorgio Tavecchio on the roster and slated to compete with Janikowski in camp, there’s no sense that Seabass is in any real roster jeopardy, even with his pricey-for-a-kicker $3.96 million salary cap number and two years left on his contract. Janikowski seems energized by the Raiders’ return to competitiveness, and for the past two years he has taken part in Oakland’s off-season program at coach Jack Del Rio’s behest, rather than stay home in Florida until training camp, as was his custom.

He paces himself now, and tries to be smarter about his conditioning and kicking load, but he talks openly about his desire to kick into his mid-40s, as legendary kickers such as Jan Stenerud, Morten Andersen, Gary Anderson and Adam Vinatieri have done.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I'm not even close to being done, the way I feel," Janikowski said. "I have always believed I have the potential to kick as long as I want to kick. I still feel good, and I still love running out there on the field and being under pressure, hearing the fans. Whether they're booing you or screaming for you, I just love it."

Just ahead on his career radar screen is the NFL record for most 50-yard-plus field goals, which he currently holds along with longtime Lions kicker Jason Hanson. Janikowski has made 52 such kicks, on a whopping 92 attempts, and he did it without ever playing in a climate-controlled dome, as Hanson did for his entire career in Detroit. Remember that when his Hall of Fame candidacy is being bantered about.

"Keep in mind, he's been kicking for 16 years outdoors in a stadium that's below sea level, and playing up to four home games a year on a field that still has infield dirt with the A's playing there," says Lechler, who is still punting as he approaches 40 in August. "And he's still top five in the game. He's done it at a high level in a place where it's not groomed for success. To hold on for all that time in Oakland, my hat's off to him. Could anybody else have done that? I don't know."

Those who know him best say Janikowski is fiercely proud, still driven by any slight, both real and imagined, and after being burned by friends as far back as his college days, he has always had difficulty trusting others. He may still be wary, but he's not wearied. And toward the end of his long, sometimes strange trip in the NFL, Seabass has become both a mainstay and an unlikely icon in Oakland, as admired for his perseverance as he is for his production as a Raider.

He revels in being Seabass, and it's not hard to notice that just being in his company puts the people around him in a good mood. If there's a gravitational center in the Oakland locker room, it's wherever No. 11 happens to be standing. In uniform, he's as relaxed and comfortable as an old shoe. Providing it's on his left foot, and laced up tight for kicking.

"We love the guy around here," Penn says. "And I know this, I wouldn't want to be the next first-round kicker to come into this league. Because that guy's got a lot to live up to after Seabass."

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

After many seasons and points, Sebastian Janikowski wants 1 ring

By Vic Tafur

October 29, 2016

TAMPA, Fla. — He remembers the sound as if it were yesterday.

Yesterday was 20 years ago, just up the road here in Florida.

There was a loud thud, then silence. The other players at Seabreeze High in Daytona Beach stopped what they were doing at football practice to see what had just happened. Some soccer player named Sebastian Janikowski was trying out at kicker.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Now the “booms” and 60-yard field goals happen at Raiders practices. Janikowski is 38 years old, in his 17th NFL season, and this year set the league record for most field goals from 50 yards or more (he has 55).

Janikowski, who usually treats media requests like footballs, took some time out last week to reflect on his journey and his future as the Raiders (5-2) prepared to play the Bucs (3-3) on Sunday.

“I don’t feel any difference now when I kick,” he said. “The leg strength ... I am still the same.”

The 6-foot-1, 265-pound Janikowski was 50 pounds lighter back in Daytona Beach but still an imposing and fascinating character.

He had moved from Poland to Florida to be with his dad, who had come to this country to pump new life into his professional soccer career. Sebastian had played for Poland’s Under-17 national team and was offered a million-dollar deal to turn pro with San Lorenzo of Argentina’s First Division.

“I was 16 years old coming to a new country, and all I knew was playing soccer,” Janikowski said. “Didn’t know the language, didn’t know any of the kids, it was pretty tough.”

Soccer made the transition easier, as Janikowski starred for the Orlando Lions club team before moving to Daytona Beach to play for Lions coach Angelo Rossi’s Seabreeze High soccer team. Before trying his foot at football, he set the school record for goals and became one of the cool kids at school.

Come on, how many kids win games with bicycle kicks and 40-yard shots, or have an opposing player leave the game after blocking one of their kicks?

The football team came calling, and Janikowski was a natural.

“Kicking a soccer ball hard always felt simple to me, and I liked football right away. And kicking comes from soccer, so I enjoyed that and the reaction when football people saw me kick.”

He would practice his accuracy kicking footballs at light posts.

“I would kick first for football,” Janikowski said, “and then go run around for three hours at soccer practice. It was a lot of fun, playing, hanging out with my friends and being a kid.”

Janikowski would become quite the fun-seeker and partier at Seabreeze, Florida State and then with the Raiders. But his foot got him out of problems at Florida State (bar fights and a missed curfew before a bowl game) as it helped get coach Bobby Bowden wins. Janikowski became the first player to win the Lou Groza Award, given to the best kicker in college football, twice.

“Janikowski would be an excellent linebacker or tight end,” Bowden once said, “if I thought he wouldn’t hurt his foot.”

Janikowski never looked back on the sport he left behind.

“I made the right decision,” he said. “Love what I am doing. Have always loved what I am doing.”

He opted out of his senior year for the 2000 NFL draft and nearly fainted, like everyone else, when Raiders owner Al Davis took him in the first round.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Was definitely surprised,” Janikowski said. “Being picked 17th. You just don’t see that. But when you look back, I think you can say it paid off. I am in my 17th year. Who would have thought it would go that long?”

“I appreciate Al Davis and the Davis family a lot. They made the right choice, and hopefully I can keep going a while longer.”

The Bucs drafted Florida State’s Roberto Aguayo in the second round this year, the highest a kicker has gone since Janikowski. What advice would Janikowski give him?

“Just calm down and enjoy the game,” he said. “Because when you get drafted that high, there is a lot of pressure on you. Just take it one day at a time.”

Did Janikowski feel pressure?

“Definitely,” he said. “A lot of people were saying, ‘Why did you pick a kicker?’ It wasn’t an easy ride.”

Those questions grew louder when Janikowski was arrested twice in 2000 — he was acquitted of bribing a police officer and later of drug possession — and again for drunken driving in 2002 (he pleaded no contest).

Janikowski and former punter Shane Lechler had some legendary benders — before the days of social media, thankfully. Finally, the drunk-driving arrest and three years of probation slowed him down.

“You learn to be a professional,” Janikowski said. “And then you have kids.” (His twin girls turned 4 in September.)

And then you focus on getting in better shape, as he has the past few years.

“You work out more,” Janikowski said. “When you’re younger, you ride on talent. But in this league, everybody has talent. It’s not going to get you far. So, you work extra.”

Janikowski has played 259 games, the most by a Raider, and he could make a serious run at 300. He is the franchise’s all-time leading scorer with 1,728 points, 12th on the NFL scoring list.

“I just take it year by year,” he said. “See what happens. First you go five years and then you want to hit double digits. Now it’s all about winning the Super Bowl here. I want my ring.”

Lechler is gone, and the transition to new punter and holder Marquette King was not a smooth one. In 2013, Janikowski hit only 21 of 30 field-goal attempts, his lowest success rate since 2005.

“It takes time to get used to it,” Janikowski said. “I had the same holder for 13 years, so I didn’t have to tell him how to put the ball down, where, nothing. If it was windy, Shane knew what to do, knew all the different adjustments. Marquette has been working on that and has done a really good job.”

The past three years, Janikowski is back over 80 percent.

“He finally trusts me,” King said. “Seabass is one of the best to ever do it, and he is still doing it.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

General manager Reggie McKenzie not only kept Janikowski when he came on board in 2012, but also gave the kicker a four-year, $15.1 million extension in 2013.

“He still had that pop in his leg,” McKenzie said. “He had a couple spells where he was inconsistent, but he worked through those. He’s kept his weight down and become more coachable....”

“He and Marquette, they had to make that work, and they learned how to communicate better.”

And as with Lechler, the Raiders again have one of the best kicking combinations in the league.

“Marquette can boom the ball,” Janikowski said. “He and Shane are two of the best legs I have ever seen in the game in my life.”

A former Raiders punter, Ray Guy, made the Hall of Fame last year. Did that get Janikowski thinking?

“It would be a spectacular honor,” he said. “But people mention it and I put up my hand. It matters ... but I don’t think about it or talk about it. It’s not my choice, right?”

It is the choice of Clark Judge and the rest of the Pro Football Hall of Fame Selection Committee, and Judge, a former sportswriter who now works for the Talk of Fame Network on radio, thinks Janikowski doesn’t have much of a shot. Even if he plays for a while longer.

“Jan Stenerud and Ray Guy are the only kickers in, and it took Guy 25 years,” Judge said. “I mean, Morten Andersen is the all-time leading scorer in the league, and he’s not in. What other sport does that?”

“Plus, Seabass didn’t play for any championship teams or have any signature kicks. Which is why Adam Vinatieri will have a better shot than him. But you never know. ... Maybe longevity will make a difference.”

The reason Janikowski is sticking around, as he said, is simple. He wants a Super Bowl ring, and with the Raiders’ 5-2 record this season (and 4-0 on the road), that’s not ridiculous banter anymore.

Why is this year’s team better?

“Determination,” Janikowski said. “Guys want to win. It’s been so long since we’ve been able to do this, go into other teams’ stadiums and keep winning games. The coaches are doing a great job. They put us in great position to win games. And when you win, players watch extra film to get that feeling again next week.”

Janikowski has been coming back for that feeling for 20 years, since that day up the road in Daytona Beach.

Marquette King Is the N.F.L.'s Only Black Punter. How Come?

By Carvell Wallace

February 5, 2016

Marquette King remembers being astonished the first time he stepped onto an N.F.L. field. Even though it was only preseason, there seemed to be about a million more people in the stands than he had ever seen at his tiny alma mater, Fort Valley State University, in Georgia. Trying to remain calm, he kept his head down, and cast his eyes safely on the grass at his feet.

He jogged to the line of scrimmage, hoping to look like he belonged. He wasn't just playing football, he was competing for a job. And even though he had experienced success at every stage of his career, had excelled at tryouts, had dominated pro-days, and impressed scouts who appraised him quietly from behind visors and sunglasses, he knew how merciless N.F.L. camps were for unproven rookies. You could have been the best at every place you played. You could sweat, and bleed, and run yourself ragged, giving every ounce and pushing far beyond your own limitations, and still, at the end of the day, an assistant might greet you at your locker with a sombre look and the words no hopeful wants to hear: "Come with me. And bring your playbook."

King knew that if he failed to execute the next fifteen to twenty seconds of his life with absolute perfection, this could be his last chance to play professional football. As he had done countless times before, he lined up at his spot and prepared to yell out the snap count. But before he could open his mouth, a player on the opposing team, the Dallas Cowboys, took one look at him and shouted.

"A black punter?! It's a fake! It's a fake!"

The opposing players, equally eager to impress their coaches by seeming on top of every nuance of the game, scrambled into new positions, King told me, guarding against the possibility that this black guy, inexplicably lined up at the whitest of N.F.L. positions, was really some backup quarterback or receiver—a speedster who would fake a kick and instead run for the first down, catching their whole defense unaware. Clearly some trickery was afoot.

For King, it was a gift. He actually laughed out loud. Even black players didn't believe that he was a punter. It wasn't the first time he had been viewed with suspicion, and the comedy of the situation calmed his nerves.

He called for the snap, took three precise steps, and dropped the ball perfectly toward his rising right leg. The ball, as it did nearly every time, rocketed into the air, nearly disappearing in the late afternoon sun. He was knocked to the ground as he finished his kick, but when he got back up, the ball was still in the air and his teammates were pounding him on the back.

Ask anyone who knows the N.F.L. well and they will tell you that the twenty-seven-year-old Oakland Raider Marquette King is one of the most impressive punters in professional football. Videos of his performances at kicking camps have almost mythic status among special-teams devotees. And he has increased his consistency each of the three seasons he's played, gradually mastering a precision with his kicking to match his tremendous power.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Marquette King has one of the purest, strongest legs in the league,” John Middlekauff, an Oakland sports-radio host and former N.F.L. scout, told me. Much of the positive reaction to King has centered on his obvious strength.

The performance of punters is judged by two principal measurements: distance and hang time. Hang time is crucial, because the longer a ball stays in the air, the more time the defending team has to get down field to guard against a return. While a typical N.F.L. punt will last about four and a half seconds in the air, King, in workouts, has reached the unthinkable mark of 5.85 seconds. He does well with distance, too: his longest punt in a game is seventy yards, managed against the Ravens, and footage exists of him kicking as far as eighty-seven yards in practices.

King spends considerable time in the weight room, a place not necessarily frequented by members of the kicking squad, and his collegiate forty-yard dash time was less than two-tenths of a second behind that of his team’s fastest runner, the wide receiver Amari Cooper.

The joke about punters is that they usually look like someone from the accounting department who accidentally ended up on the team—in other words, like a pasty white guy who improbably found himself in the company of football men. King has the opposite effect: he is an athletic black man in a spot usually reserved for pasty white guys. It would probably be uncomfortable, if he weren’t so used to being different.

King grew up in Macon, Georgia, and like a lot of kids his initial attraction to football was visual. He now lives an hour’s drive away from where he plays and practices with his team—a distance he chose so that he can decompress before he gets home—and he told me the story of his childhood as we sat on the sofa in his underfurnished Bay Area apartment.

In middle school, he would watch one of his mom’s friend’s sons play football and admire the uniforms and the shiny helmets. His mother, concerned about injuries and academics, would not yet let him play, but King began training on his own, doing two-mile runs around his neighborhood with dreams of being a receiver.

Two years later, he made his high-school team—and quickly decided that after-school practices and position-specific training were not enough to fill his insistent appetite for improvement. Weekend days were spent walking around his neighborhood with a football and a set of cones that he could use to practice receiving routes. He tried to get quarterbacks, receivers, and other teammates to join him for these extra sessions, but he found that most kids, even the athletes, preferred to spend their free time watching TV or playing video games.

When he got bored, he would kick, and he soon became fond of watching the ball rocket off of his foot and into the air. He began to challenge himself. Could he kick it over this ditch? Could he kick it over this tree? He got his parents to measure how long he could keep the ball in the air. He didn’t know yet about hang time and drop technique. He wasn’t thinking of it as a potential career. He just liked being really good at it, and getting better.

He experimented with different techniques. One day, he said, not long after he began kicking, he was playing football with friends and a pass was thrown way out of bounds. King went to retrieve it, but instead of throwing it back, he kicked it. “Damn!” came the response. “Do that shit again!” Eventually the game devolved into neighborhood kids just trying to field King’s explosive punts.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

A new coach took over his team during junior year, and King told him about his kicking. The coach made him the team's kicker, though King continued to play receiver as well. During his senior year, a friend mentioned offhandedly that he could get paid to kick. King says he legitimately thought the guy was making fun of him.

After high school, he went to Fort Valley State, a small historically black college thirty miles from home. He didn't play at all in his freshman year, and had trouble finding time for himself at receiver, competing against more skilled players at the position. Eventually he was told flat out by the coaching staff that if he wanted to keep his scholarship, he had to kick.

Punters don't run as fast or lift as many weights as other football players do. They don't tackle or block. They can't make big hits or game-winning plays. In a football culture that prizes strength, speed, toughness, and, to some degree, violence, a guy whom you can't even touch in a game without being penalized ordinarily commands little respect in the locker room.

He may as well be a professional darts player hanging at the gym with a bunch of M.M.A. fighters. But King either didn't notice this or didn't care; the same internal mechanisms that had him out alone on Saturday afternoons with a football and a bunch of cones while most other kids his age were playing Madden now induced him to throw himself completely into kicking with little regard for ego or social standing. He was simply enamored of the feeling of success when he booted a big one.

When he had bad games, he was known to stay in the stadium long after his friends and family had gone home, putting on a pair of headphones and kicking ball after ball well into the night. Assistant coaches eventually forbade him from staying late, not so much to protect his leg, but because his obsessive work kept them from getting on with their own lives. As King recalls, he responded by surreptitiously finding out where the light box to the stadium was and learning how to break into the weight room after hours.

Before his junior year, he received an invite to Kohl's National Elite kicking camp, a proving ground and showcase for the most promising collegiate kickers, punters, and long snappers in the country. So he got on an airplane for the first time in his life and travelled to Wisconsin, which is where the Legend of Marquette King was born.

His final kicks of the weekend are immortalized in a YouTube video; screams of shock and amazement can be heard as soon as the ball comes off his foot. Word began to spread among the tightly knit kicking community and eventually among N.F.L. executives.

After graduating, he was invited to Raiders camp, where he impressed coaches so much that, despite injuring his foot during the preseason, he was given an unlikely roster spot, and placed on injured reserve for the 2012 season. The next year, he beat out veteran Chris Kluwe in camp, and was given the team's starting job. He became the only black punter in the league, and just the fifth black man in the history of the N.F.L. to be a specialist at the position.

It is difficult to explain why African-American punters are practically unheard of in a league that at any given moment is roughly two-thirds black. It seems possible that many scouts haven't even considered the question.

"Honestly," John Middlekauff said when I asked him about the subject, "I hadn't ever thought of it in those terms. I just think most guys, most talented players, when you grow up wanting to play football, obviously kicker and punter are the last two things you want to do ... and if you are the kicker or punter, and you're the best player on the team, then that means you're also quarterback or running back. You're just also athletic, and you don't necessarily want to do that as you try to get a scholarship to go to college."

What's implied in this, of course, is that punter is not a position you choose, but one you get stuck with because you are not fast enough or strong enough to play elsewhere on the field. The other assumption here is that black football players always have better speed and strength than their white counterparts.

Greg Coleman has a slightly different theory. Coleman was the first black man to play exclusively at punter in the N.F.L. He retired in 1988, and is now a sideline reporter for the Minnesota Vikings. Few punters, Coleman told me over the phone, make N.F.L. teams in their first year after college. They have to keep honing their craft and take another shot at it the following season, and maybe the season after that.

"So if they don't have the support, the financial support, from family to keep training, to maintain that lifestyle, to sustain them for a year, or maybe even two, it's going to be difficult for them to continue."

Perhaps more than all other players, kickers are technical specialists. They have to train early and exclusively at their craft to have a shot at a professional team. Camps can cost as much as four thousand dollars for a week of private lessons and film studies, and even with such training, an N.F.L. career will remain a statistical improbability.

There are thirty-two teams in the league, and they each typically employ one player at placekicker and one at punter. There are, then, about sixty-four jobs to be divided among thousands of kids who train for this one thing. Kickers commonly earn more than two million dollars per year, and they rarely suffer the kind of high-speed collisions endured by those at other positions. At any given time, the oldest player in the league is almost always a kicker. (Currently it's Adam Vinatieri, the forty-three-year old placekicker for the Indianapolis Colts. Morton Andersen, a placekicker for multiple teams, had a career that lasted twenty-five years, an astonishing number when you consider that the average career, according to the N.F.L. Players Association, lasts a little over three years.)

All of this helps explain why a lucrative cottage industry has sprung up catering to parents looking for a way to help their kids pursue N.F.L. dreams by becoming kickers. The Web site for Kohl's Kicking lists more than a hundred and fifty camps scheduled for 2016, and a quick Google search will point you to similar camps that make tremendous promises for the futures of young kickers.

For such an experience, families and loved ones can expect to pay anywhere between three hundred and twenty-five dollars and six hundred dollars per day for attendance, a price tag that does not include travel, merchandise, instructional DVDs, equipment, or other extras. And yet this is a typical path for a young N.F.L. kicker. Which makes King even more of an outlier.

He taught himself, and was invited to his first camp free of charge in his senior year of college. But for those not possessed of his astounding drive and talent, the very possibility of a career in kicking or punting is tied to the financial means of your family. In other words, if you want to play this position, with its low physical impact, you have to be able to afford it.

Greg Coleman came along before the rise of specialized kicking camps. He was drafted in 1976, by the Cincinnati Bengals, and though he exclusively punted in college, he was expected, at the Bengals camp, to try out for receiver and running back spots before kicking. He balked at this, but, being an unsigned rookie, he had little leverage. As he describes it, when he finally got around to taking kicking reps in front of coaches, he was winded and consequently underperformed, thus losing his chance. He was cut before the season began.

He took a job teaching high-school history, in Florida, but maintained a practice routine, learning more about both the craft of kicking and the business of the N.F.L. He got another shot the next year, signing with the Cleveland Browns on January 1, 1977. Cleveland coach Forrest Gregg, like the Bengals coaches before him, wanted to use Coleman as a running back, but the young kicker, now a year wiser, took a stand: he told his coach to either let him kick exclusively or cut him from the team. Gregg gave him his chance.

The next year, though, Gregg was fired, and Coleman was let go, replaced by a younger, white draft pick. By week nine of the ensuing season, Coleman was still living in Cleveland, out of work, and his wife was pregnant. Then he got a call from the Minnesota Vikings. He spent the next nine years punting in Minneapolis, racking up impressive numbers in his career as a precision punter.

Not everyone was happy to see him on the field.

“For a long time,” he told me, “I kept my helmet on, hoping folks would think I was a dark-skinned white boy. You got stuff thrown at you. The adjectives that were hurled ... monkey. The N-word.”

It’s remarkable to hear stories that evoke Jackie Robinson integrating baseball in the fifties from a football player who’s talking about 1978. Some of the same fans shouting racial epithets at Greg Coleman were cheering for the black running backs and receivers on their own teams. It wasn’t a question of integration in football; it was merely the sight of a black man taking space where a white man should be.

“It’s something that I have not talked about a whole lot,” Coleman said, “even after all of these years.”

Coleman is from a generation that was largely taught to handle racism with a quiet dignity. Keep your chin up, and your mouth shut. Do better than they expect you to and silence them with your greatness.

But when he does open up, as he did in a short video he recorded for the Vikings, the pain is very much on the surface. In the video, he talks about the time his black Pee Wee football team won the city championship—the team, remarkably, featured four future N.F.L. players—and was nonetheless denied the chance to compete in the state’s Gator Bowl. Even as a man who prides himself on inner strength, it is clear that being excluded as a nine-year-old because he was born black is a pain that is simply too severe to get over.

Whether or not anyone wants to talk about it, there are races attached to some positions in sports. Running backs and cornerbacks are typically black. Punter, kicker, and quarterback tend to be seen as white positions. Like many aspects of race in 2016, this is changing, but in uneven ways.

When Super Bowl 50 begins, Cam Newton will become just the sixth black quarterback to start in the N.F.L. Championship Game. What explains this? Is it a lack of ability to read defenses and study playbooks on the part of African-Americans? Or is it because the preparation, training, and cultural markers associated with the quarterback position have historically been inaccessible to aspiring black athletes? If the latter is true, then the six men that have achieved this have done so by walking a path that defies probability.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

The same may be said of black punters. If being an N.F.L. punter can be a lonely proposition, then being a black N.F.L. punter can be a downright desolate one. This may be one reason why, despite the relative longevity and safety of the position, so few African-American players have taken up the mantle. Even in a league that prizes mental toughness, the feat requires a whole other degree of it, one that enables you not only to compete with others but with yourself, with systems, and with isolation. You have to be, as John Middlekauff puts it, “A different type of guy.”

It is, in some respects, a familiar story. As racism becomes more difficult to explicitly identify, it becomes more impossible to challenge. How can anyone complain that racism is connected to the dearth of black punters in the N.F.L. when there are black coaches and general managers? When no one has thrown cups of beer at Marquette King or called him the N-word as he took the field?

Still, the story of his journey to the position is one of a man overcoming remarkable odds through sheer force of will. And while it would be difficult to argue that those odds had nothing to do with his race, the fact that he did overcome them lends an ironic credence, for some, to the idea that race no longer need hinder anyone’s success; that all anyone needs to do is what Marquette King and Greg Coleman did—which is to say, the near impossible. This narrative holds particular sway in professional sports, which rely so heavily on extreme discipline and the mythology of the self-made warrior.

Marquette King, meanwhile, is entering a contract year. He made a little over one and a half million dollars in 2015, which places him squarely in the middle of the pack of punter salaries. Still, it is quite a come-up for a kid from Macon, who, as he tells it, had not really heard of the Oakland Raiders before they contacted him.

Despite his stalwart performance and reputation, at the time of this writing, no word has come from the Raiders front office on a long-term deal. It is not unusual for teams to finish managing the heftier contracts of position players against the salary cap before getting around to the punters; most observers seem convinced that he’ll be well taken care of.

He may be on the verge of becoming a wealthy man, and, if he can remain healthy, a long, perhaps even legendary career is not out of the question. But no matter what happens, it’s difficult to imagine him changing much. He has been single-minded for most of his life. He does not live extravagantly, and his studio apartment looks like it could belong to any twenty-seven-year-old guy with a decent job. There’s a TV, some football mementos, a couple of places to sit. The only things on the walls are a few pictures of himself, in games; a handful of jerseys held up with thumbtacks; and a dry-erase board, on which he has written, in careful print, every single one of his goals for the 2016 season.

THE PLAYERS’ TRIBUNE

Can I Kick It?

By Marquette King

November 7, 2016

I’ll never forget it.

August 2012. Oakland Coliseum. We were playing the Cowboys in my first preseason game. I wasn’t even supposed to play in the first half, but our starter, Shane Lechler, got hurt in warmups and the coaches told me I would be the guy a few minutes before kickoff.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

I remember standing on the sideline just staring at the Raiders logo on my teammates' helmets and feeling light-headed. It didn't seem real.

Before I ran out on the field with the punt team for the first time, one of the coaches said, "Whatever you do, don't look in the stands. Just go out and punt it."

So of course I run out there and immediately look up into the stands, and I see the thousands of people watching, and I'm just like, Oh s.

I'm standing back there getting ready for the snap, and I'm so nervous. Then the Cowboys are getting set to rush the punt, and all of a sudden I see one of their linebackers looking at me funny.

He yells out, "Yo, what is this?"

He's pointing at me. Then he's waving to his teammates. I'm just confused.

Then he yells, "A black punter? It's a fake! Yo, it's a fake!"

I just start laughing. That kills all my nerves, and I finally relax and boom it 57 yards for a fair catch.

I can still see the faces of those Cowboys players, looking at me like, What's up with this dude? Where'd he come from?

Well, lemme tell you....

Elementary school, 1995. Macon, Georgia.

We used to play with this big red rubber ball at recess. Not a football, but one of those thick, heavy-duty kickballs with a lot of bounce in them. Remember those? Do kids still play with those today, or are they just chilling on their phones? If you grew up in the '90s, you know what I'm talking about. I mean, this thing was heavy.

Recess was chaos. There was no organization. We didn't play kickball. We played "kick the ball." There was no object to the game other than 20 kids trying to kick it as high and as far as possible. Whoever could kick it the hardest always got the most tries, because all the kids wanted to watch the ball get clobbered and go flying. You didn't get points for it or anything. It was just cool to see a ball get kicked real high. (Again, this was the '90s.) If you managed to kick the ball both high and far, you might get all 20 kids to look up in the sky and go, "Ooooooooooh!" all at once.

That was my whole motivation when I was 10. I gotta wow these kids.

So I started kicking every day after I got home from school, trying to find ways to get the ball higher in the sky. It sort of became my hobby. And I didn't want to just be good or even great at it. I wanted to be the undisputed best ... at kicking a big red ball.

Don't ask me why.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

But I wanted to kick that ball so hard and so far that it'd just disappear into the sky and never come down. When recess came, I wanted the ball passed only to me, and more important, I wanted everyone else to only want to pass to me. They had to know I was the guy with the good stuff.

It wasn't a complicated game, but it turned out to be a pretty important part of my life.

Now, I wish I could tell you that some football coach saw me kicking that red ball at recess and said, "Son, come with me. You're gonna be in the NFL some day."

But that's not how it went down. I didn't even like football all that much. I just liked to play, period. Sitting in front of a TV on Sunday afternoons and watching the Falcons wasn't for me. I loved being outside and moving around. In fact, to this day, standing on the sideline so much during games makes me go a little crazy. You can always see me pacing around or going to grab a drink of water or trying to talk to somebody.

The only thing I'd stay inside for was video games. Playing Madden on PlayStation with my friends is what actually got me into football. And that's especially funny because in Madden, nobody ever punts.

Maybe that's why I started out playing wide receiver. I was a better kicker than anybody on my high school team, so I was still the designated punter, too. But high schoolers aren't like little kids. They don't get as excited when they see a solid boot soar down the field. They want to see deep passes and touchdowns. I knew if I wanted a girlfriend, I was gonna have to get in that end zone. So for a little while my focus shifted from kicking to route-running, footwork and becoming the best all-around athlete I could be.

I knew if I wanted a girlfriend, I was gonna have to get in that end zone.

Then I remember one game when Pike County High came to play us. It started out like any other game until their punter took the field. I'll never forget him. He was this small, skinny guy, and every one of his kicks was just a perfect spiral. He was so consistent — like he had control over exactly where his punts landed, and even how they bounced when they hit the ground. It was the first time I had ever noticed someone with that level of control. His punting skill put our team at a huge disadvantage for pretty much the entire game. And it wasn't because of a giant leg, but because of his technique. I realized there was a lot more to punting than just raw power. I had to change my mindset to understand the technical side of punting. It was almost like having to learn to kick the ball all over again.

I started to take punting even more seriously in college, when I started doing it full-time for my team at Fort Valley State.

I don't know what it is, but kicking a ball is just my thing. It puts me at peace. I'd be up in the dorms hanging out with my friends on a Friday night, and they'd be pregaming and getting ready to go out to the club. I'd have a drink with them, listen to some Future mixtapes on the little laptop speakers for about an hour, then eventually they'd be like, "Come on, let's turn up. We gotta go soon."

I'd be like, "Alright, I'm gonna go get ready. I'll catch you guys later."

They knew I was lying.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

I'd go back to my room, but instead of putting on some jeans and a button-down, I'd pull on my sweatpants and grab my headphones. Then I'd stuff three footballs into my gym bag and walk across campus to the football field. Only problem was, the field was closed after 9 p.m. Lights off, gate locked.

So what'd I do? I would hop the fence and make my way over to the fuse box, and from there I was just on my Jason Bourne. You gotta know the secrets. This was actually child's play. When I would break into the weight room after hours, I had to find a way to unscrew the bolt on the door and then put everything back together again when I left. The fuse box was nothing.

I'd make sure to only switch on a few lights on one side of the field, just so people passing by would figure it was a groundskeeper doing some work or something.

Once my lighting was right, I'd put on my headphones, start my playlist, unzip my duffel bag and feel the leather of the footballs. Then it was on.

I'd be out there for hours. Kick three balls, run and go get 'em. Kick three more. Sometimes the campus police would stroll by at like 11 p.m. and just be looking down at the field like, What's this about?

Then they'd see me kick one like 60 yards and I guess they must've thought, Alright, this guy is pretty legit.

They never said anything.

My friends would see me from their cars on their way back to campus. I know a lot of them wanted to pull over and say something to me, thinking that it was kind of strange for me to be out on the field punting all night. All I can say is that those people probably don't know what it feels like to rip a ball 60 yards into the night sky with only the sounds of Travis Porter bumping in your ears. For me, it was the best feeling.

Once again, I wish I could tell you some NFL scout saw me punting out there at midnight and said, "Son, you got it." But it didn't go down like that.

The week of the 2012 NFL draft, people wouldn't stop banging on my dorm room door asking me where I thought I would go. But I wasn't even sure if I'd get a call from a team. I wasn't coming from some big SEC school. I was at Fort Valley State. I was a punter. All the hype got so distracting that I went to stay at my friend Gary's house just to put my mind at ease. Then my dad picked me up in the morning so I could watch the draft with my family in our living room.

It was seriously like five seconds after the last pick of the draft that my phone rang. It was the Raiders. Finding out I was going to Oakland was one of the happiest moments of my life. I burst out of my house and just started walking up the street, calling up my friends on the phone to tell them that I was going to be in the National Football League.

I was so, so happy, right? I was going to punt for the Raiders.

Then I called my one friend. The honest friend. Everybody got one.

"Hey bro, doesn't Oakland already have a good punter?" he said. "I mean, I think they have like the best punter in the league."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Damn.

I didn't really follow the NFL closely. I was too busy playing. Right away I started looking online to find out all I could about Shane Lechler. He averaged over 50 yards per punt for the Raiders the season before I was drafted. That meant he was really good, for all of you Madden players reading.

So I didn't know what to expect anymore. I didn't know if the Raiders were seriously interested in me, or just using me as a warm body to compete with Shane until the season started. Before training camp started, I felt like I had no chance to make the squad. But when I got to Oakland, I was determined to make the most of my opportunity. I told myself that even if I wasn't going to be the starter, or even make the final cut, I'd use the opportunity to learn as much as I could from one of the best punters in the league.

So that's what I did. I got in rep after rep until things started to come together. I wanted to show all the coaches and players watching that I was listening, and that I was for real. So every day I came in with a chip on my shoulder, trying to show everyone just how good I could be.

The bad news was that I got hurt in training camp and found out I would miss the entire 2012 season. The good news was, the Raiders put me on injured reserve and still kept me on the team. I was so grateful to the coaches who thought I was worth keeping around. That season, I watched everything Shane did on the field. I showed up at the practice facility every day just wanting to soak up as much as I could. By the time 2013 came around, Shane had signed with the Texans, and I was fully rehabbed and ready to show that I could hang with the best of them.

In the span of like two years I went from a raw, undrafted rookie to a starting NFL punter. Since then, I've just tried to get better every day and do my part. Maybe I don't look like the average punter, but that's cool with me, because I'm not trying to be average. I want kids watching the game on Sundays to look at me and say, "Hey, that dude is pretty cool. He's got some swag. I want to be a punter, too."

There's a whole new generation of punters in the NFL who have a little swag.

Brad Wing? Swag.

Bryan Anger? Swag.

I know that, for a lot of fans, the punter running out onto the field is just a signal to get up and get some chips or check fantasy football scores. But the way I look at it, those four to five times I run out there could be the difference between us winning and losing.

Mentally, this position can be just as rough as any of 'em.

When we lose, I take it hard. It doesn't affect me at all when the clock is running, but in the locker room afterward — when I'm sitting beside guys who are exhausted and covered in dirt, sweat and sometimes even blood — I start to replay the game back: Could I have made the difference in the game just by moving my toe a millimeter to the left on that third quarter kick?

For me, fourth down is my chance to be a star. I know I'm not going to lead a comeback drive or create a turnover to swing the game. But I am proud of what I do. I want my teammates to know that I want those wins as bad as every one of them. Kickers don't have to deal with the same level of physical pain as position players, but we feel the same pressure to win as everybody else. Honestly, every time we lose, I have to call my mom on the drive back home just to calm down and stop my brain from wondering, What if I had just done this? Or this? What if?

To the average fan watching on TV, maybe it's only punting. But punting is my entire life. And I still just want to prove that I have the best leg in the neighborhood.

Raiders' Marquette King punts, dances, has fun

By Josh Peter

November 18, 2016

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Dressed in camouflage, Marquette King greeted a visitor at his offseason home this week with a request. He asked that the location of his bachelor pad remain undisclosed.

"I'm like Batman," King told USA TODAY Sports. "I don't want to let them know where I'm at."

But the NFL's only African-American punter, who occasionally dresses up as Superman and the Green Power Ranger, is perfectly happy that more people have discovered who he is. King, 28 and in his fifth year with the Oakland Raiders, has proven to be as adept at attracting attention as he is at punting footballs.

During Oakland's 30-20 victory over the Denver Broncos on Nov. 6, for example, King celebrated punts by mimicking a cowboy riding a horse and performing windmill-arm dance. Video of his dance moves went viral, and King suggested his celebrations are almost involuntary.

"It's like drinking a Coca-Cola," he said while enjoying a final day off during the Raiders' bye week. "You drink it and it's like, 'Ahhhh.' It's like a release."

For King, there's been plenty to celebrate of late.

With the Raiders off to a 7-2 start, he has continued to emerge as one of the best, and unquestionably the most entertaining, punters in the league. He signed a five-year, $16.5 million contract extension in February and then spent a chunk of that money here on his six-bedroom home.

In the living room, a stuffed Elmo sits nestled into the corner of a leather couch. King explained that he won the doll while playing a coin-operated, claw arcade game.

"First try," King said, beaming. "I remember (Elmo) from when I was little. So I felt like, 'He's familiar. He can chill.' "

On the walls of the house, King said, more than a half-dozen photos of him in his football uniform serve a purpose.

"Sometimes, it's like a dream," King said of his life. "Then I get a chance to look at the pictures and I'm like, 'Oh, yeah, I play for the Raiders.' "

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

His path to the pros was unlikely. King, one of only a handful of African-American punters in NFL history, played wide receiver while attending Rutland High School in Macon, Ga.

While practicing receiver routes on his own, King said, he grew bored and started punting. He fell in love and soon took over as his high school's team's punter.

"There'd be times in practice where he'd punt them so high and far, it would stop practice," said Lance Perlman, then head coach at Rutland High. "Guys would be looking and go, 'Holy cow.' He's putting them up in the atmosphere."

But King's powerful leg went largely overlooked by college coaches, partly because Rutland is a small high school that draws few recruiters and partly because Rutland's offense was so good King punted only five times his senior year.

So upon graduating in 2008, King walked on at Fort Valley (Ga.) State, a historically black college. He later earned a scholarship and celebrated after punts like the 80-yarder he once uncorked on his way to the NFL.

Signed in 2012 by the Raiders as an undrafted free agent, King won the starting job the next year. But he said he felt stifled until the arrival of Jack Del Rio, who took over as the Raiders head coach in 2015.

King, who said the previous coaching staff discouraged him from celebrating, got approval from Del Rio's staff to cut loose again.

"I felt like somebody put helium in my body or something because I felt so free," King said. "If you can be yourself, you play light. I feel more powerful on the field. I feel, I don't know, I'm just in a happy place."

Almost everybody seems to be happy with King these days. After all, he's averaging 48.4 yards per punt, fifth-best in the league; averaging 41.8 yards net per punt, tied for sixth-best in the league; and has landed 21 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line, tied for third-best in the league.

And, of course, he leads the league in post-punt celebrations.

"I've always been dancing, man," King said. "I've had coaches in the past tell me, 'You need to calm down. The punter position, you just do your job and walk off the field.' And I'm like, 'What?'"

"I mean, I just put this ball inside the 10 and you think I'm fixing to walk off the field like nothing ain't happened? Shoot, I'm fixing to enjoy this."

Greg Coleman, the first African-American punter in the NFL, said he approves of King's style.

"He has great talent and an ability and a personality to match," said Coleman, who played in the NFL from 1977-88. "You just love to see players have fun in the National Football League with so many restrictions (imposed by the league)."

Yet King said he knows some people object to his style — and he has no plans to change.

"Bro," he said, "I don't want to be like everybody else."

Raiders undrafted rookie Kirkland thrives as extra lineman

By Josh Dubow

November 16, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — After failing to hear his name called during last spring's NFL draft, Denver Kirkland's number is getting called quite often for the Oakland Raiders this season.

Kirkland has gone from the disappointment of being undrafted despite leaving Arkansas early to making the Raiders initially as a practice squad player to becoming a key contributor as Oakland's extra offensive lineman.

Kirkland played nearly half the offensive snaps against Denver on Nov. 6 as the sixth lineman for the Raiders (7-2), with each entry onto the field accompanied by the announcement by the referee that No. 79 is an eligible receiver.

"It's been fun," Kirkland said. "It's just nice to be out there going to war with the boys I practice with every week."

The season has been a lot more fun for Kirkland than the draft. He decided to leave Arkansas early but a poor performance at the combine led to him going undrafted.

Kirkland watched the draft with his family and tried not to get too discouraged.

"I just kept hope alive and I'm here now," he said. "I always had a positive attitude. I didn't want to get down on myself. Now I have to go even harder than ever."

The Raiders showed interest in Kirkland even before the end of the draft, calling him to tell him they wanted him as an undrafted free agent if no team took him.

Kirkland got calls from other teams after the draft but chose the Raiders because of their early interest. The coaching staff liked what they saw from Kirkland once he arrived.

"Denver's been a big, physical guy, tough guy," coach Jack Del Rio said. "We were drawn to him in camp, thought there were some things that were worth developing and that development, obviously, has been accelerated a little bit with him being on the field as much as he is now."

Kirkland got his chance after blocking tight end Lee Smith went on injured reserve with a lower-leg injury on Oct. 5. Kirkland had been promoted to the active roster the previous week because of injuries on the offensive line but didn't get a chance to play until Smith's injury.

With Oakland's other tight ends, Clive Walford and Mychal Rivera, more skilled as receivers than blockers, the Raiders started utilizing the six-lineman package more often.

Kirkland played 27 snaps in his first game against San Diego on Oct. 9 and has looked right at home on the field as part of a line that has been one of the league's best this season at both run and pass blocking.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"He's such a good dude, he's so quiet, and all he does is come to work and grind every single day," quarterback Derek Carr said. "We knew from the beginning, we were like, 'Man, this guy could be special. He could be a really good player.' And so far, he's come into games for us and he's played outstanding."

Kirkland got his most action against the Broncos when he played 42 snaps and was a key part of a running attack that gained 218 yards.

While Kirkland is being counted on mostly as an extra blocker, the Raiders do have a few pass plays in the playbook for him that he hopes get called soon.

"I got hands. I got good hands," he said. "I hope so. That would be a great moment for me."

DL Darius Latham

Latham taking advantage of his undrafted opportunity

By Jimmy Durkin

August 22, 2016

ALAMEDA — Darius Latham never imagined not hearing his name called when he declared for the NFL draft following his junior season at Indiana.

“I probably would’ve stayed in school,” Latham, the Raiders’ rookie defensive tackle, said of the idea of him not being among the 253 draftees.

Latham was a projected late-round pick after a three-year Indiana career saw him accumulate 81 tackles and 7.5 sacks. But he didn’t help his draft stock with a March arrest for operating a vehicle while intoxicated.

After being passed over, the 6-foot-5, 305-pound Latham had interest from several teams.

“I got a lot of calls, but I pretty much had my mind made up where I was going to go,” Latham said.

The Raiders love versatile players on their defensive line, guys who can line up as a 5 technique (on the outside shoulder of the offensive tackle), 3 technique (in between the offensive guard and tackle) and nose (head up on the center). That fits Latham’s game.

“I don’t like being a one-dimensional player,” he said. “I like being able to play on edges, get down and dirty in the trenches like 3 technique and nose, taking on combos and double teams. It’s just a good look to be able to put those type of plays on film.”

Latham played a team-high 37 snaps in last week’s exhibition loss to the Green Bay Packers. Through two weeks of the preseason, the website Pro Football Focus has graded Latham as the top rookie defensive/nose tackle in the league — ahead of all 21 defensive tackles that were drafted.

“He’s strong,” Raiders defensive line coach Jethro Franklin said of Latham. “He plays with good pad level. He’s got a little pass rush. He’s still got work to do. Just take it day by day, continue to work the fundamentals and be disciplined in everything we do and see where it takes him from there.”

Latham got valuable experience against the Packers when he rotated in with the starting defense during the first half. That allowed him to not only play alongside Raiders starters such as Khalil Mack, but go up against Green Bay’s first-string offensive line.

“That’s always good for him,” Franklin said. “It’s just part of the process. Guys periodically will have that opportunity. He’s definitely earned it. He’s just got to continue to build from that and get better.”

The Raiders have an opening and need for some defensive line help with Mario Edwards Jr. sidelined for a few weeks with a hip injury. Latham said that hasn’t changed his approach.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I pretty much had the same mindset always from the start," he said. "Just making plays when I'm in. Take advantage of every snap."

As the snaps keep increasing, Latham's chances of going from undrafted to the opening 53-man roster look pretty good. Latham isn't blind to that fact, but is trying to clear the positive chatter about his play from his mind.

"Nothing's guaranteed," Latham said. "You've got to still go out and work every day. Zone those type of talks out and just keep doing what I'm doing — getting better every day."

Joining Latham in the rotation with the starters last week was fellow tackle Dan Williams. The 15-game starter from last year got heavy over the offseason and had been relegated to second-team work until the Packers game.

Williams has slowly worked himself into better shape and Franklin is starting to see more of the player the Raiders had last year.

"He's getting back," Franklin said. "It's a process. As time moves along, we've just got to make sure we stay ahead of the curve. That's what we're doing."

"Dan's obviously concerned about what he needs to get done to be where he needs to be. And we've got a strong eye on him to make sure we're doing what we can to make sure that he returns to where he needs to be as well."

DE Khalil Mack

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Khalil Mack leads Raiders' sack attack

By Vic Tafur

July 27, 2016

When Khalil Mack gets in his car Thursday and drives to the Napa Valley Marriott for the Raiders' training camp, the defensive end is packing light.

Just some clothes and maybe his guitar to help him relax at night. Rookie roommate Greg Townsend Jr. has been given the list of mandatory snacks.

Most important, Mack's not bringing any mental baggage, none of the accolades from last season or any of the expectations or hype for both him and the team this year.

"I'm still learning, just trying to get better" Mack said, taking a break from his workout at San Francisco's Empower Gym on Monday. "That's the key to all of this."

Running back Latavius Murray now calls Mack "Slash," after Mack became the first player in NFL history to earn first-team All-Pro honors at two positions in the same season (defensive end and outside linebacker). Mack, 25, finished with 15 sacks, one shy of the franchise record, and led all edge rushers in the NFL with 82 quarterback pressures and 54 run stops.

The "Slash" nickname is also appropriate because Mack thinks he was two players last season, and the one wearing No. 52 the first half of the season wasn't all that great.

"I am very critical of myself," Mack said. "Watching the tape of myself last year, it looked like two different players the first half of the season and the second half. This year, I want to start fast and finish strong."

Mack thinks he overloaded himself the first eight games. He had only four sacks in that span, and would roll off 11 over the next six games.

"I switched it up too much the first part of the season, trying to show everything I worked on in the offseason," Mack said. "All these moves and counters. ... So mentally and physically, I made it simple. Just use speed and power and focus on two moves that I was having success with throughout the year. I was able to play faster and longer."

To look at the sculpted physical specimen that Mack (6-foot-3, 255 pounds) is, one would miss what separates him and the league's other great pass rushers: His motor doesn't stop.

"Getting sacks is all effort," Mack said. "Justin Tuck used to tell me that pass rushing is one of the luckiest things in the world. The quarterback can fall in your lap sometimes, and sometimes no matter what you do, you can't quite get to them. But they all count."

It's seemingly rare in sports when a team's best player is also the one grinding the most before, during and after practice. Defensive tackle Dan Williams says the Raiders are blessed.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Khalil is such a hard worker,” Williams said. “You can’t put a ceiling on what he can do. ... Khalil is going to be Khalil, and we all expect him to get more sacks this year. That’s kind of crazy when you think he had 15 last year. But he’s ready to take over the league.”

Mack tunes out compliments, whether it’s from a teammate or a talking head on TV saying the Raiders are going to go from 7-9 to winning the AFC West.

“You hear all different kind of things,” Mack said. “I like to focus on the negatives. Negative things tend to help me grind a lot harder. I don’t like positive stuff too much. ... Not even in my relationships. Man, I don’t want to hear how great things are going from anybody.”

That wasn’t a problem with Mack’s mentor, Tuck. He is retired now, as is safety Charles Woodson, but they groomed Mack to take over the leadership role on the defense, if not the whole team, this season.

Said Mack: “It’s just about being a team player right now, getting everybody on the same page so we can accomplish what we want to. We have the talent, and with a positive mind-set and hard work, anything is possible.”

It’s one of the reasons that he is looking forward to training camp – because of how the team clicked last year and how well the new players have fit in. Big free-agent signings Kelechi Osemele, Bruce Irvin and Sean Smith haven’t needed a transition period.

“What excites me the most is that we’ve put together a great group of guys,” Mack said. “Not only the players, but the coaches. I am excited to work with all the new cats.”

Mack knows he will be a marked man this season, with opposing coaches spending the week before games against Oakland scheming to double-team and erase him.

“You have to welcome the challenge,” Mack said. “But at the same time, being a leader on the team, you have to let the other guys know, ‘Hey it’s not just me on this side of the ball.’ We got big Bruce, I got Rio (Mario Edwards), I got Big Dan, Big Jelly (Justin Ellis) ... We got 27 (Reggie Nelson), DA (David Amerson) and Big Sean on the back end ...

“We got some playmakers and heavy hitters. We’re going to make some noise. ... They say you can’t win them all, but we’re gonna try.”

Raiders’ Khalil Mack: Meet the NFL’s modest megastar

By Jerry McDonald

September 6, 2016

It happened, to the recollection of Khalil Mack, at a gas station along U.S. 1 near his home in Fort Pierce, Florida.

Sandy Mack, Khalil’s father, spied a friend and colleague from the jail house where he worked.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“His name was Hucklebuck, and he was a big dude. My dad was a big dude,” Khalil said following a training camp practice. “My dad was always telling people how many push-ups I could do, and Hucklebuck wanted to see. He said, ‘I’ll bet he can’t do 20.’”

“My dad says, ‘OK, Khalil, go ahead.’ So there I was — outside on the concrete at a gas station, maybe 7 years old. And I pumped out 60 push-ups.”

Khalil’s dad is hazy on the gas station exhibition, but has no doubt it’s true — because such demonstrations were relatively commonplace.

“People didn’t believe me when I said he could do push-ups — and I mean straight up, military-style push-ups,” Sandy Sr. said. “No slouching — I don’t go for that. People would hear about it, they’d ask me and I’d say, ‘Khalil, show ‘em.’ And he’d bounce ‘em out like nothing.”

Going into his third NFL season, the push-up prodigy is all grown up, a bona fide star at age 25.

Mack is on anyone’s short-list of the NFL’s top defensive players, along with Houston defensive end J.J. Watt, Denver linebacker Von Miller and Los Angeles Rams defensive tackle Aaron Donald. He was named All-Pro at two different positions — defensive end and linebacker — and his 15 sacks included a five-sack explosion in an upset win over the eventual Super Bowl champion Broncos.

Within a year or two, general manager Reggie McKenzie will present Mack with a contract that is expected to make him the first defensive player in NFL history to average $20 million a season.

None of which Mack is comfortable discussing. Quarterback Derek Carr, the offensive cornerstone of the franchise and also in line for a major payday in the near future, uses humor to disarm teammates who joke about his impending wealth and stardom.

“I try and laugh it off because I’m not smart enough to not say anything,” Carr said. “He just deflects it.”

Mack’s strategy is to give no discernable reaction. Without fuel, the fire will cease.

“He ignores every bit of it,” fullback Marcel Reece said. “He just looks straight ahead.”

In contrast to Watt, a cottage industry when it comes to commercials, media time and branding, Mack, according to his older brother, has turned down commercial opportunities as well as a guest appearance on HBO’s “Ballers” starring Dwayne “The Rock” Johnson.

“He wants to be known as the best before he gets endorsements, and he doesn’t feel like he’s done anything yet,” Sandy Jr. said.

Ask Mack about the pot of gold that awaits and he recoils like an adolescent being asked about his first girlfriend.

“I’m not comfortable talking about that stuff. That’s just not me,” Mack said. “I like to grind and not think too much about the good stuff. I like to focus on the stuff I need to get better at.”

Toward that end, Mack agreed to pull out a laptop computer to give a mini-clinic to his interviewer. He did so on one condition: No game clips of him making sacks or tackles for losses. Mack would only show the plays where he made a mistake.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Out of a file labeled “KHALIL BAD,” Mack cues up a play from last Nov. 15, a 30-14 loss to the Minnesota Vikings in Oakland.

Minnesota quarterback Teddy Bridgewater fakes a handoff to Adrian Peterson and rolls to his right.

Mack hesitates when confronted with right tackle T.J. Clemmings and tight end Kyle Rudolph, and Bridgewater rolls free to the right. The pass is completed for a short gain along the sideline.

“I could have gotten to the mesh point right there, the quarterback and running back exchange,” Mack said. “My angle was bad, and I played it too flat. I could have made it a lot easier for our cornerback David Amerson out there on the edge.”

Mack runs the same play back and forth, shaking his head slightly.

“I’m looking at my footwork, hand placement, I’m thinking about all those things,” Mack said. “I know the next team will go right to this play to see the stuff you don’t do too well.”

Next, Mack slices inside the guard and tackle and has a clear shot at Bridgewater. One problem: He takes a swipe at the ball, and Bridgewater gets away.

“These are the ones you have nightmares about right here,” Mack said. “I had the sack, and I let it go. You’ve got to make those, man. I was trying to reach for the ball instead of tackling. That could have been 16 sacks.”

Another play, another split-second hesitation, another chance for Mack to self-correct.

“See, this is nasty right here,” Mack said as Peterson takes a handoff for a short gain. “I thought it was going to be a play-action pass, and I waited instead of just blowing him up.”

It goes on like this for a few more plays before he closes the laptop and ends the lesson. Mack has made his point. He could have been better. Should have been better. Much better.

“That would have been 17 sacks ... 18 ...,” Mack said. “When you’ve got a chance, you’ve got to capitalize.”

Khalil Mack arrived in a big way on Feb. 22, 1991, the second of three sons to Sandy and Yolanda Mack.

“He was 10 pounds, 8 ounces, and they thought he might be diabetic because he was such a big baby,” Yolanda said. “But he was just a healthy baby. There was no fat on him anywhere. He already had a muscular frame — he had muscles on his calves.”

As his older brother Sandy Jr. said, “He was ripped when he came out of the womb.”

It runs in the family. Sandy Sr. is a solid 6-foot-1, 285 pounds. Sandy Jr., once a powerful high school running back nicknamed “Mack Truck,” is working toward his certification as a personal trainer. Yolanda says LeDarius, the youngest of the three at age 19, more than holds his own in the weight room.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

At the same time, church and Bible study were a constant presence in their life.

“We were expected to help others,” Sandy Jr. said. “My parents were big on believing God would open doors for us, and Khalil never took that for granted.”

Sandy Sr. worked in corrections and later as a program specialist for at-risk youth, while Yolanda was a teacher.

Through childhood and adolescence, Khalil’s personality remained consistent. He was quiet, humble and respectful. Yolanda said there was never an issue with teachers at school and that one day in his freshman year at Westwood High, Khalil came home wearing a T-shirt that said “Citizen of the Month.”

As Christmas neared, the more loquacious Sandy Jr. would make sure his parents knew his gift preferences in order of importance, while Khalil seemed fine with anything that came his way.

The only way his parents could tell if Khalil didn’t like a gift is if he didn’t use it or wear it, because he never complained.

“He was always content with what he had,” Yolanda said. “He was always a peacemaker and his own leader. He never followed the crowd. I didn’t have to worry with Khalil about peer pressure.”

Yet when it came to sports, the otherwise laid-back Khalil transformed into a fierce competitor. Dad made sure of that.

Whether it was push-ups, basketball or brain teasers, Yolanda said her husband wanted the boys competing and striving to be the best, never doing anything halfway.

“He told us all the time, ‘If you’re going to do something, be the best,’ ” Khalil said.

Sandy Mack grew up competing against his twin brother Sammie and wanted the same for his sons, even if Khalil at times would be a little overexuberant.

“When we played basketball when he was young, I had to remind him, ‘You can’t be jumping on top of my head. I have to go to work tomorrow,’ ” Sandy said. “He really wants to be very good at what he does, and he’s been like that since he was a little kid. Real quiet, but when we played basketball or football, he was like a Tasmanian devil. He has a focus that is out of this world when it comes to sports.”

While the Mack boys played youth football, Sandy was reticent for Khalil to play for fear he might hurt someone. He’d been toughened up in backyard sessions with Sandy Jr., who said he went “beast mode” on his younger sibling.

When Khalil did play youth football, he ended up breaking the collarbone of a 12-year-old opponent on a tackle.

Sandy Jr. recalled the time he and his brother promised their late grandfather they would play in the NFL. Yet as Khalil got into high school, basketball was his first love, and he didn’t play football until his senior year.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

With his son recovering from a torn patellar tendon, Sandy wanted Khalil to concentrate on graduating rather than playing football.

“I was thinking maybe the military for Khalil,” Sandy Sr. said. “All I knew was I wanted him out of Fort Pierce.”

That changed when first-year Westwood coach Waides Ashmon got a look at Mack and inquired why an athlete with the most impressive physique in school was not playing football.

Khalil told Ashmon to call his father, and the coach instantly whipped out a cellphone and promised Sandy Sr. his son would go to college for free if he played football his senior year.

The late start hurt recruiting, but Ashmon’s promise was kept when Buffalo came through with a football scholarship.

So Mack went from Florida to freezing winters in Buffalo, as usual, without a whisper of complaint.

“He was 1,300 miles away from us, and he never once called to ask for anything. Not a dime,” Sandy Sr. said. “He’d always say, ‘No, I’m good, pop.’ “

Mack impressed his coaches by working diligently, arriving early for meetings and breaking out a highlighter to go over practice plans and defensive assignments.

On the field, Mack began to realize his football career wouldn’t necessarily end at Buffalo.

During one practice, Mack ran around the blocking attempt of James Starks, a running back who went on to play for the Green Bay Packers.

“He told me, ‘Man, you’re strong. You’re going to the league,’ ” Khalil said. “That started to get me thinking.”

Mack began comparing himself with other players from the Mid-America Conference and watching players such as Von Miller, the No. 2 pick in 2011, and Dion Jordan, taken No. 3 overall in 2013.

“I knew they were probably playing against better people, but the NFL looked like something I thought I could do,” Khalil said.

A big game in a nonconference loss to Ohio State removed any doubt, and when Mack was available when the Raiders picked at No. 5 in the first round in 2014, McKenzie didn’t hesitate.

Khalil impressed veteran teammates as much with his attitude as his work ethic, even as a rookie.

“Khalil came in, picking my brain as soon as he got in, wanted to be great, and wanted to put in the extra work,” left tackle Donald Penn said. “He’s not a ‘me’ guy. He’s a team guy.”

Said veteran Marcel Reece: “I’ve seen first-round picks come in here and think the world should be handed to them. They’re prima donnas. They don’t think they have to work. They don’t think they have to practice. Khalil does what everyone else does — and then some.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

As a rookie, Mack stood out as a run defender, and while he pressured the quarterback consistently, he had just four sacks.

The only glitch came when the Raiders finally won their first game of the season against Kansas City after starting the season 0-10. After Sio Moore sacked Alex Smith with 28 seconds to play, the linebacker and Mack were busy performing a dance while the Chiefs quarterback rushed to the line of scrimmage to run a play.

Justin Tuck called timeout to prevent the Raiders from receiving a potentially crippling penalty.

It was a scene entirely in character for Moore, who offered regret with one-liners following the game. Mack, on the other hand, was mortified and embarrassed.

“Now,” Sandy Jr. said, “you’ve got to beg him to celebrate.”

Khalil instantly made an impression on Jack Del Rio, who took over for Dennis Allen and interim coach Tony Sparano in 2015. Del Rio knows a self-starter when he sees one, having been the position coach for Ray Lewis with the Baltimore Ravens from 1999-2001.

“With Khalil, the beautiful thing is that he’s got natural humility,” Del Rio said. “He loves this game, and he’s driven to play great. He wants to develop the skill level. He’s working tirelessly to do that.”

If there were any doubts that Mack was making a bull rush to stardom, they were erased in 2015, when he consistently stuffed the run and finished second to Watt in sacks with 15.

As he enters this season, Mack is trying to be more vocal, but his voice still occasionally trails off to a whisper and his general demeanor has not changed.

Teammates are occasionally awe-struck.

“It’s funny: Khalil doesn’t trash talk, he’s a very humble person, and he’s a really good guy,” tackle Menelik Watson said. “But once he gets into football mode, he’s going to rip your head off. It’s just that he’ll rip it off in a polite way.”

During training camp, Penn had been working on a pass blocking maneuver he was convinced gives him leverage, a quick jab he was sure would put Mack on his heels. Instead, Mack simply went lower than seemed humanly possible and blew past Penn.

“This dude, he somehow kept his balance,” Penn said. “He was two inches off the ground and kept rushing. I was all set to fall on top of him, and he just kept going. I asked (line coach) Mike Tice what I should do. He said, ‘I don’t have anything ... good luck.’ “

Former Raiders linebacker Bill Romanowski said Mack’s ability to play both the run and the pass sets him apart from other edge players.

“If I had to compare Mack to anyone, it would be Von Miller,” Romanowski said. “Von may have a tiny edge in the pass rush because he’s a little smaller and a little quicker, but he can’t play the run like Mack. I think Mack is the more complete player all-around.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Miller, last year's Super Bowl MVP, signed a six-year, $114.5 million contract with a reported $70 million guaranteed.

The Raiders have Mack under contract through the 2017 season, and it's conceivable the four-year, $18.6 million deal he signed as a rookie will be extended as an annual salary at some point in the near future.

It's a huge commitment, but unlike a risky free-agent signing, the Raiders know exactly what they're getting in terms of character and commitment.

"You've got to keep your stars. You pay it, and then you adjust the salary structure from there," NFL Network analyst and former general manager Charley Casserly said. "Sometimes you try and beat the market and sign a guy early, but I don't think they'll worry about that with Mack. You don't worry about it when a guy's worth it."

Herm Edwards, a former NFL head coach and ESPN analyst, compares Mack's skill on the edge with Hall of Fame outside linebacker Derrick Thomas, whom he coached in Kansas City.

"When you pay that kind of money, it's great for the locker room if it's a guy you drafted," Edwards said. "The Raiders know what they have. They know what his DNA is about."

Included in Khalil's DNA, according to his mother, is a penchant for coming home to Fort Pierce, visiting with neighbors and the same tight circle of friends he's always had.

"I know that what he does has a lot of pressure that comes with it," Yolanda said. "He's worked hard for his accomplishments and knows that what he has can be here today and gone tomorrow. Our wish for him has always been to be balanced — live a balanced life."

Watson thinks the $20 million a year threshold may be a bargain when it comes to Mack.

"Shoot, with the effort, intensity and attention to detail he puts in, he might be a $30 million a year a guy," Watson said. "I really don't think there's enough money (under the salary cap) to give him what he's worth."

McKenzie understands that his boss would not look kindly at the sight of Mack in another uniform.

"Mark (Davis) would come beat me across the head if I let some Hall of Fame-type player leave the building," McKenzie said.

Mack doesn't plan on changing any time soon, regardless of fame and fortune. Anyone who saw him doing push-ups at a gas station years ago wouldn't be surprised.

"It's how I was raised. My parents put me in a nice position, but that's all it is — a nice position," Mack said. "You've got to put in the work. You've got to humble yourself."

THE UNDEFEATED

Is Khalil Mack The New Lawrence Taylor?

By Jason Reid

September 23, 2016

Fletcher couldn't believe he was about to go there. It used to be that if reporters asked the former Pro Bowl linebacker to compare up-and-coming players with Hall of Famers, he'd shut them down quicker than ball carriers foolish enough to run at him. Over a 16-year NFL career, Fletcher never got caught up in the hype. But now Fletcher was about to break his own rule.

Toward the end of an interview Monday about Khalil Mack, the Oakland Raiders' outstanding third-year defensive end/outside linebacker, Fletcher delivered the money quote. "You can compare him to L.T.," he said.

Uh, New York Giants legend Lawrence Taylor? Arguably the greatest defensive player in league history? That L.T.?

"Yeah. You heard me," Fletcher said. "You know me, so you know I'm hesitant to say that. But, yeah, L.T. He did it for so long. And not just for so long, also the way L.T. did it. But you look at the film, there are similarities. So many similarities."

By dropping those initials, Fletcher essentially dropped the mic.

For a defensive player, there's no higher praise than to have your performance compared favorably with that of Taylor, the onetime iconic outside linebacker who helped the Giants win two Super Bowls. The thing is, Fletcher's assessment seems right on point. Mack is that good.

At only 25, Mack has rocketed to stardom. Following a strong rookie year, he changed positions in 2015 and emerged as one of the game's most productive pass-rushers. Even long-suffering Raiders fans have hope again. Oakland actually expects its playoff drought to end after 14 seasons, and Mack is at the forefront of the revival. He wouldn't want it any other way.

"We can't waste any time," Mack told The Undefeated recently at the Raiders' training facility in Alameda, California. "We're trying to get good right now. Today. Not tomorrow. So you just go out and do it."

Time after time, Fletcher stopped the film to focus on No. 52. He had to make sure his eyes weren't deceiving him.

Often on passing plays, Mack tossed aside left tackles en route to sacks. Running plays to Mack's side were similarly ineffective. Blockers couldn't move him. In countless hours of film study, Fletcher hadn't seen even a handful of defensive players with Mack's all-around game.

"What jumps out at you, what you really see on the film, is just how explosive and strong he is," said Fletcher, now a CBS Sports analyst. "He has that strong lower body. He's able to really get underneath pass-blockers. He's relentless. For a kid, and you have to remember he's still a kid, his strength is just phenomenal."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“There have been a ton of talented pass-rushers who’ve come into the league. There have been a lot of young guys who have had speed and quickness off the edge. But you don’t see guys who have that combination of brute force as well as athleticism. That combination is just rare. That’s why you start thinking of L.T.”

Mack’s statistics also conjure thoughts of L.T.

Last season, Mack finished second in the NFL with 15 sacks. No player had more sacks in one game than the five he totaled in Week 14 against the Denver Broncos. A deeper dive into the numbers further supports Fletcher’s position.

Mack had 39.5 percent (15-of-38) of Oakland’s sacks. Only Robert Ayers of the Giants (41.3) had a higher percentage of one team’s sacks, according to ESPN’s Stats & Information. Mack also had 17 disrupted dropbacks (sacks, interceptions, batted passes and passes defended). That was the eighth-highest total. All numbers that add up to one thing: dominance.

Mack became the first player named an Associated Press first-team All-Pro at two positions — defensive end and outside linebacker — in the same season. Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio wasn’t surprised. “First, he’s got the natural ability,” Del Rio said. “And guys who have that natural gift, and work as hard as he does, will typically continue to improve. I thought he was that kind of player coming out of the draft.”

Shortly after the Raiders hired Del Rio in January 2015, he met with Mack to discuss changing his position. It turned out to be a monologue more than a discussion.

Both Del Rio and new Oakland defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. had been Pro Bowl linebackers. Although Mack was impressive as an outside linebacker, especially against the run, after Oakland selected him with the fifth overall pick in the 2014 draft, Del Rio and Norton had other ideas. As a hand-down right end who rarely dropped into coverage, Del Rio explained, Mack could make a bigger impact for the Raiders. That’s all Mack needed to hear.

“You’ve got a love for the game. And whatever you can do to help your team win, because that’s what it’s about, do it to the best of your ability,” Mack said. “You always want to make that statement. Coach Jack came in and put me in that position.

“It was positive for me because I love to go forward, rush the quarterback and wreak havoc in the backfield. It’s just a love for me. So the switch really wasn’t even a switch for me, at least not mentally. It was just freeing me up to go forward a lot more.”

Mack credits Raiders defensive line coach Jethro Franklin with his continued development. Each day after practice, they carve out time to refine Mack’s pass-rushing technique, everything from footwork, hand placement and leverage. And Mack is still rock solid against the run. It’s pretty much unfolding just as Del Rio envisioned.

“He really made a big step last year in his understanding of how to rush and finish, and Coach Franklin working with him on different rush moves has really helped,” Del Rio said. “Because he’s such a powerful guy, stacking up the run comes very natural for him. The area where we should continue to see growth is in his skill level at rushing the passer. It becomes more innate as you get reps. And he’s definitely working at his trade.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

That being said, the Raiders aren't exactly off to a fast start — Mack or no Mack.

Through two games, Oakland (1-1) has given up a whopping 1,014 net yards. Opponents are averaging 34.5 points. Part of the problem is that Mack has no sacks.

Clearly, Del Rio and Norton have some fine-tuning to do on defense. Not surprisingly, Mack has taken responsibility for the slow start. He plans to do more.

"I'm just always thinking about what I can do as a leader on this team," Mack said. "That's what I have to do."

The Raiders aren't concerned about Mack. After all, even L.T. had quiet stretches early in his career. Well, every once in a while, anyway.

"It's not about one or two games — it's about the whole season," Fletcher said. "Over a whole season, there just aren't a lot of football players who can do all the things he does, and at the level he does. Those are the guys you want."

Mack is the right guy for the Raiders. And before he's finished, he may be a guy who winds up in the same class as Taylor. Or at least closer to it than anyone else.

Experience Keeps Latavius Murray Grounded: 'I Know How Fortunate I Am'

By Scott Bair

November 18, 2016

ALAMEDA – The Raiders made Josiah Moore an honorary captain prior to their Week 9 clash against the Denver Broncos. The boy battling an adverse heart condition became a Raider for a weekend via the Make-A-Wish Foundation, and attended a Saturday practice, a Sunday night game and was part of the pregame coin toss.

He spent time with several Raiders, including Derek Carr, Khalil Mack, Seth Roberts, Reggie Nelson and Latavius Murray. Before the game, he pulled Murray close and asked for a favor.

“He asked me to score some touchdowns for him, and I asked him how many he wanted,” the Raiders running back said. “He said three.”

That’s a difficult request. The touchdown total isn’t unrealistic or easily attained. Scoring three would be difficult, not impossible. Murray promised to give it a shot.

He first found the end zone from a yard out in the second quarter, extending the ball just across the goal line. Murray powered a second touchdown through from the same distance. The Raiders were a yard from pay dirt again in the fourth quarter, and Murray leaped over both lines to reach the end zone, giving his team a three-score lead and fulfill a promise.

It was a proud moment for Murray, who was awesome in a 30-20 victory over the Broncos. He finished with 20 carries for 114 yards and three touchdowns for Moore.

“I know how fortunate I am, and I know what kids in the Make-A-Wish program have to go through,” Murray said on CSN California's Raiders Insider Podcast. “Any way that I can help make a kid’s day, I’ll do it. Just being a part of something bigger than myself is always important. You want to give back whenever you can.

“That’s what it’s all about, and it really meant something that I was able to do that for him.”

Murray doesn’t let these moments slip. He knows playing in the NFL’s a privilege afforded to precious few, and that opportunities to play and produce should be cherished. That’s why he’s excited to contest the Houston Texans on Monday night in Mexico City, where he has acted as a team ambassador for promotional events.

That’s why you won’t hear complaints about lower carry counts or contract insecurity here. At his core, Murray’s a guy grateful for this chance.

He still thinks about opportunities missed, which is why he didn’t plan an exotic vacation last week during the Raiders bye. He went back to Onondaga, a small town in upstate New York, to watch his high school in the state playoffs. Onondaga Central hadn’t reached these heights since Murray was a Tiger.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Murray had his number retired, but never won a state title. Onondaga Central didn't this year either. They lost a heartbreaker, but a homecoming was worth the long flight east. It's a place where Murray could recalibrate and mentally prepare for the season's home stretch. Onondaga is a comfort zone impossible to duplicate.

"I feel at home every time I go back there," Murray said. "The community and the high school there have shown great support, and that's why it was special to go back. That town is a part of the person and the player I am."

Onondaga's pull is strong, not just because he has close friends and family there. His rock resides there, too.

His mother Tawanna Wright is a stabilizing force in her son's life, and at times set him on the correct course. She wanted him to attend Central Florida over local options and pursue his preference to play running back despite also being recruited as a linebacker.

She also kept him upbeat after he tore a knee apart playing pickup basketball while at Central Florida, an injury that put Murray in a funk. He lost the 2010 season rehabbing multiple torn ligaments, which prompted a decision to come home and play for nearby Syracuse. Wright pushed hard for an about face and eventually got one. Murray went back to Central Florida, flourished and became a draftable impact starter.

"The best part of Latavius is his mom," UCF coach George O'Leary said, via the Orlando Sentinel. "She's a very sound, sturdy woman and that's why he's back here."

While Murray's ego doesn't overinflate, Wright tries to keep him centered and grounded to this day.

"It's a constant reminder for both of my sons but more so for Latavius because people in his position can become arrogant when fans put you on a pedestal," Wright said. "You have to always remind them to stay humble. You can be up one minute and down the next."

"Use your gifts as a tool, and always be humble about it. Success is a gift that isn't easy to come by. Staying humble will open the door for more blessings."

The door is open wider than a few years back.

Murray was a sixth round pick who spent his rookie year in Oakland sidelined with injury and most of his second season buried on the depth chart. His third year earned a Pro Bowl spot, and his fourth has featured decreased totals as the Raiders have split carries between Murray and rookies Jalen Richard and DeAndre Washington.

While some Pro Bowler may demand the rock, Murray likes the rotation. All three backs remain focused on being efficient with carries they get, though Murray paces that pack when healthy. He won't come close to last year's 306 touches, but doesn't mind considering the Raiders' steady production on the ground and his efficiency with ball in hand. The young additions, Murray says, have given the run game a jolt.

"DeAndre and Jalen continue to push me and do great things when they step on the field," Murray said. "They bring explosiveness and make guys miss. I'm trying to take things from them and continue to learn. We continue to compete in that running back room, and that's why I think we've had success."

That success has contributed to a 7-2 record that has the Raiders in position to make a playoff push. Murray was on terrible teams to start his pro career so, as you'd guess, he isn't taking these wins for granted.

"I still have those moments where I realize where I am in life and the opportunities I have in front of me," Murray said. "I was talking to Jalen about it during the (Broncos) game.

"We playing were in primetime, with the whole country watching. Here I am, a kid from Onondaga Central, from a little town in upstate New York. Jalen said he felt the same way. I said, 'never stop feeling that way, because it's going to separate you from guys in this league who may get comfortable. Always love the feeling, and revel in the knowledge that you're fortunate to be in such a great spot.'"

Unlikely Raider Reggie Nelson earns respect from peers

By Paul Gutierrez

September 9, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- The Oakland Raiders needed a veteran presence in the back of their secondary this spring in the wake of Charles Woodson's retirement. And while free safety Reggie Nelson was out there, blowing in the wind of free agency, he was not really seen as an option.

Not with his ties to the Cincinnati Bengals, for whom he had just played in his first career Pro Bowl after his eight interceptions tied for the league lead. And not with his relationship with new Miami Dolphins defensive coordinator Vance Joseph, who was Nelson's position coach in Cincinnati.

All of which is what made Raiders defensive backs coach Marcus Robertson's trip to USC's pro day to check out Su'a Cravens all the more fortuitous. Robertson ran into Joseph at the workout and the topic turned to Nelson, whom Robertson saw as "a Bengal, through and through."

Besides, if he was going to leave Cincinnati, surely he'd join Joseph in Miami, no?

That's when Robertson found Raiders defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. at the USC workout, and the two made a call to Oakland's front office to let brass know of Nelson's availability.

A two-year contract worth as much as $12 million later, and Nelson was the 32-year-old heir apparent to Woodson ... in more ways than one.

"I knew of him, respected the player, but now that I'm here with him every single day, I love the person even more," Robertson said of Nelson during camp. "When you think about losing a guy like Woodson, and then you get a guy with [Nelson's] type of experience in the football game, his ability to go out and make plays -- he's done it year in and year out -- and then on top of that, he's a team player?"

"He gets these guys. He's an outstanding communicator and he does things right. I couldn't ask for anything more."

Nelson's influence has already been felt, even if he missed the entire offseason program and was slowed somewhat in the preseason as he rehabbed a knee injury.

While Nelson is entering his 10th season, it is his first in Oakland, yet his new teammates voted him one of four captains, along with quarterback Derek Carr, center Rodney Hudson and All-Pro defensive end/outside linebacker Khalil Mack.

"We hit it off pretty good," Nelson said this week with an understated smile. "It's a great group of guys around here. You know, I'm not a guy of too many words so I'll just lead by example and continue to keep my head down and work."

"I mean, it was a shocker when I found out I was a captain ... to be voted amongst your peers, that's a great thing. How they look at you."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Thus far, it's been in awe. Even on the other side of the ball.

"If you had to replace Charles Woodson, he's the guy you'd want to do it with," Carr said. "He's someone who's a leader on and off the field. He has no problem getting into anybody's face on the field, while at the same time, two seconds later, those same guys will listen to him and joke with him. That's a fine line that's hard to get and he has it.

"We all know his talents. I joked with him just like I did with C-Wood. I said, 'Hey man, back in the day, I was a big fan of yours back in college.'"

Carr laughed.

"He's a great player," Carr said. "But not only that, he's a great person [and now] he's a teammate of mine and not chasing me around like he did Week 1 last year."

Indeed, Nelson, who was a first-round pick of Raiders coach Jack Del Rio when he was with the Jacksonville Jaguars in 2007, picked off Carr's backup, Matt McGloin, in last season's opener after Carr left with a hand injury.

Del Rio talked about Nelson as a "calming influence" in the secondary.

"Communication is the No. 1 key," Nelson said. "When I got here, that was my thing: communicate with me. I'm new to the defense, so tell me if it's the wrong check or not. The guys have been doing that and I got it down pat, and that's the main thing that I emphasize when I'm back there with anybody, Karl [Joseph] or Nate [Allen] or Keith [McGill].

"Just communicate with me and we'll be all right. As long as we're on the same page, nobody can stop us."

"I just try to be Reggie, man," he said. "You can't replace a guy like Charles."

But the Raiders can lean on Nelson in Sunday's season opener at New Orleans, just as they leaned on Woodson. Besides, Nelson already has an interception of Saints quarterback Drew Brees.

"As far as starting fast, you're in control of that," Nelson said. "You've got to come out and hit people in the mouth and continue to do it. You can't just do it one down; you've got to continue to do it [or] they're just going to keep on coming back. When they come back, you've got to do it again."

Raiders didn't sign guard Kelechi Osemele to be a nice guy

By Jerry McDonald

September 9, 2016

ALAMEDA — The name Kelechi Osemele used to bring a grimace in the defensive meeting room of the Raiders.

As the left guard of the Baltimore Ravens, Osemele won no friends with his penchant for picking unsuspecting defenders off when they least expect it.

"You watch K.O., and he's the guy that plays to the whistle and gets in the last shove," Raiders defensive tackle Justin Ellis said. "You don't really like him too much unless he's on your team."

Which is exactly what happened when the Raiders signed Osemele to a five-year, $58 million salary with $25.4 million guaranteed on the first day of free agency, an average salary of $11.7 million which is the highest ever paid to a guard.

Osemele makes his regular-season start Sunday when the Raiders visit the New Orleans Saints.

His mission is clear. At 6-foot-5, 330 pounds, Osemele is a big, powerful and at times malevolent addition who is expected to add toughness and an edge to the Raiders offensive line.

"We're going to try and finish, be in your face, intimidate you and let you know that it's going to be a real long day," Osemele said. "It's not going to be one of those things where you're going against some fat, lazy offensive lineman. You're going to get it to the whistle every time."

Line coach Mike Tice referred to Osemele in an unflattering term having to do with the posterior of the anatomy — except in this case he meant it as the highest of praise.

"We felt like in our room, we needed that," Tice said. "Adding a guy like Kelechi brings that. It permeates and it's contagious. Soon it spreads to through the room, the guys in the huddle, and we think it's real important."

With Osemele at left guard, in between left tackle Donald Penn and center Rodney Hudson, along with right guard Gabe Jackson and right tackle Menelik Watson, the Raiders are determined to not only protect Derek Carr but dramatically improve a running game that finished 29th in the NFL.

There have been growing pains in the preseason. Osemele's arrival pushed Jackson to the right side, and Watson missed all last season with a torn Achilles'.

In Week 3 of the preseason, there were glimpses of what the Raiders hoped to be — in particular a 31-yard burst by DeAndre Washington courtesy of a thoroughfare created by Osemele and Hudson.

"That was the first play where I thought, 'That's what it's supposed to feel like,'" Osemele said.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Osemele said his playing style was formed at an early age.

“Since I was growing up in youth football in Texas, that’s how we played,” Osemele said. “If you’re playing offensive line, you’re supposed to be physical, you’re supposed to be nasty, you’re supposed to be aggressive.

“You’re supposed to be stronger than the guy across from you, and he’s supposed to be faster than you are. So what you do is get your hands on him make him pay for trying to run away from you the whole damn game.”

The presence of Osemele should help Jackson, a third-year player who at 6-3, 335 making a seamless transition to playing on the right side after being a left guard throughout college and the NFL.

Osemele, a left tackle for the Super Bowl champion Ravens following the 2012 season, was moved to guard and watched Pro Bowl guard Marshall Yanda closely.

“The main thing is getting around Gabe and letting him see how I finish,” Osemele said. “You feed off that as an offensive line. You see a guy get a pancake, and it’s contagious energy. You have guys burying people at the whistle, diving around the pile. Everyone wants to be a part of the action.”

Osemele’s style is reminiscent of Steve Wisniewski, an eight-time Pro Bowl guard who was despised by opponents until the moment they joined the Raiders, at which point they made a beeline to shake his hand.

When Osemele came to the Raiders, the first player to greet him was defensive end Denico Autry.

“When we played the Raiders, there were a couple of times where I pancaked him, then he got up and I speared him,” Osemele said. “He wanted to let me know not to do that to him in practice, that we’re teammates now.”

Autry declined to recount the skirmish before he broke into a smile and said, “He’s just a rough, nasty, physical guy . . . and he’s going to be great for us.”

Raiders’ Kelechi Osemele hopes to make big mark on ex-team

By Vic Tafur

September 28, 2016

The pancakes — made by the Raiders’ Kelechi Osemele repeatedly knocking over defenders and lying on them — had become stale after a few weeks, so he tried something new in Nashville on Sunday.

On a fourth-quarter reverse run by receiver Johnny Holton, the 6-foot-5, 330-pound guard got in front and saw two safeties in his path. Osemele flung 216-pound Kevin Byard in the direction of 207-pound Da’Norris Searcy, who not only went down, but also was injured on the play.

“They looked like a couple of bowling pins,” right tackle Vadal Alexander said, laughing.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

For his next trick, Osemele might give a defensive player a noogie after a successful block.

“Yeah, you know, anytime you can get out there on somebody that’s 50 pounds, 100 pounds lighter, it’s exciting,” Osemele said. “It’s like picking on your little brother. You get out there and you want to do some damage, so it’s fun.”

Osemele gets to go against his former brothers Sunday, as the Raiders travel to Baltimore. Osemele played for the Ravens in his first four years and won a Super Bowl with them in his rookie season. Though the Ravens are 3-0, they are averaging only 82 rushing yards per game. Osemele is missed.

“K.O. is a special player,” Baltimore running back Justin Forsett said in a conference call. “He goes out, he tries to dominate every play. He’s physical. You’re going to see guys getting pancaked and he’s standing over them. He’s kind of that mouthpiece out there, that headhunter that you want on the offensive line.”

Osemele is one of the huge (pun intended) reasons that the Raiders are second in the NFL in rushing at 148 yards per game, a season after they were ranked 29th. Oakland also has allowed only two sacks.

“We bring it to you all game,” Osemele said. “When you go against us, you’re going to be relieved when the game is over.”

When Osemele is not pushing defensive linemen backward and then jumping on them when they hit the ground, he is letting the players who get away hear about it. On Sept. 18, Atlanta linebacker Sean Witherspoon saw Osemele coming on a Latavius Murray run and got out of the way.

“He made a business decision,” Osemele said. “And I reminded him of it the rest of the game.”

Osemele is the classic case of wanting someone on your team because you don’t want to go against him.

“He’s very violent,” quarterback Derek Carr said. “He’s a violent football player. One of, if not the most, violent football players I’ve ever been around, seen, played with, played against, all the above. You love for a guy like that to be protecting you.”

Osemele has been looking forward to this Sunday ever since he signed with the Raiders in the spring.

“They’re a physical team,” Osemele said. “That’s a lot of where my playing demeanor came from, that ‘build a bully’ mentality and there’s some bullies out there. ... AFC North, smashmouth type of football, so that’s what we’re going to get. It’s going to be a physical game.”

Osemele, 27, signed a five-year, $58.5 million deal with Oakland after Baltimore essentially backed away from the negotiating table.

“The numbers just didn’t come anywhere close,” Osemele said. “Yeah, it hurts your feelings a little bit because you spent the last four years there. There have been a lot of ups and downs, winning the Super Bowl there and to kind of find out that’s probably not where you’re going to end up can be a little emotional.”

That’s not the only thing bugging the giant. Osemele was only a two-star recruit coming out of Houston’s Langham Creek High School and was recruited by only a couple of schools before signing with Iowa State.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Never made the playoffs, so it was hard for anyone to get noticed by a big school,” Osemele said. “I was just a two-star guy with schools like Rice and UTEP looking at me. I definitely have had a chip on my shoulder about that and carry it with me wherever I go.”

Retired Longham Creek coach Mac Woodfin said Osemele built up that chip — and those shoulders — after not getting through his freshman fitness test.

“He couldn’t get around the track one time.” Woodfin said. “He was a huge, clumsy kid. He couldn’t handle his body weight. And now he’s an animal. He was very smart, matured quickly and worked extremely hard.”

Woodfin said coaches would look in the weight room two hours after school and see Osemele still in there.

“I came in and worked on days we didn’t have to. I got better and better and some guys stayed the same,” Osemele said. “My mentality was always physical. I wanted to get as many knockdowns and pancakes in a game as possible.”

One can imagine high school players shaking in their cleats when they first saw Osemele on the other team. Raiders tight end Lee Smith said it’s the same now, in the NFL.

“I know the defensive guys didn’t like him too much during training camp; he doesn’t have that off switch.”

RB Jalen Richard

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Raiders rookie RB Richard, veteran TE Smith hit it off in camp

By Vic Tafur

August 6, 2016

A football team is a brotherhood. That goes for the 53 men on the roster when the season starts, not necessarily the other 37 players who are at training camp currently wearing jerseys.

But Jalen Richard, an undrafted running back out of Southern Mississippi, has found an ally, someone who comes up to him after a nice run at practice and congratulates him. What makes it especially unusual is that it's not another running back but starting tight end Lee Smith.

"It's been really cool," Richard said. "Lee talks to me all the time, tells me I am doing a good job and to keep pushing."

The 5-foot-8 Richard and 6-foot-6 Smith are both from the South, Smith growing up in Powell, Tenn. Richard said teammates were giving them a hard time about their accents and they formed a bond.

"It is kind of crazy," Richard said, smiling. "We were messing around one day, and then he pulled me over for a real conversation."

Smith offered Richard tips on how to be a pro, mixed in with stories about life on his ranch with his wife and kids.

"All the players know everybody's not going to be able to be here the whole time," Richard said. "So some people tend not to build relationships because of that. But then you have the ones that don't worry about that at all, and treat you like you're going to be here forever. Lee is one of those guys."

Here's a secret: Smith, a sixth-year veteran, wasn't drawn to Richard because of his accent.

The tight end, after practice one day last week, pointed to the rookie catching tennis balls from a machine.

"There are a lot of rookies in there right now who have never played a down in this league taking a shower," Smith said. "And this kid's out here working. You know what I mean? You kind of gravitate toward certain kids, you respect them and their work ethic. He's special."

During practices, Richard has shown some wiggle and a nose for the hole, and has been lining up with the third-team offense, behind starter Latavius Murray and fifth-round pick DeAndre Washington.

Richard has even gotten to line up with starting quarterback Derek Carr a few times. It's a long way from coming to the team's rookie camp in May on a tryout, and getting a contract after it.

"I am just trying to take advantage of every opportunity I am given, and hopefully more opportunities come," Richard said. "

Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio has been impressed.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“We have a lot of reps in camp. A lot of different guys get opportunities. Yeah, I would say he’s done a nice job with the looks he’s gotten so far.”

Richard ran for 1,098 yards and 14 touchdowns on 185 carries (5.9 per carry) his senior year, and also had 284 yards and two touchdowns receiving. He thinks catching the ball is his strength.

Richard didn’t think he did well in the Raiders’ offseason workouts, “because I wasn’t comfortable with the offense, but I am now.” He also did well for himself returning kickoffs Saturday, which improves his chances of making the roster.

Richard, at 207 pounds, is three pounds heavier than Washington. Otherwise the rookies are carbon copies of each other. Both say being a smaller player works in their favor against defenses.

“It’s definitely an advantage if you know how to use it,” Richard said. “It’s crazy how identical DeAndre and I are as far as size, weight and skill set. We use our size to our advantage, because guys can’t really see us behind the (offensive) line. We are very precise in our cuts and we have great vision.”

While Washington was drafted, Richard wasn’t, and only two teams offered him tryouts (the Raiders and Bucs) because of his size.

“I am just happy for the opportunity,” Richard said. “It’s definitely cool to be out here now with Derek Carr and Khalil Mack.”

And it’s nerve-racking as well.

“It’s just football all over again, that’s what I tell myself to calm myself down before practice,” Richard said. “I tell myself, ‘I’ve been doing this since I was 5 years old.’”

And if that doesn’t do the trick, Richard will hear a deep voice yelling encouragement after a play.

“I really appreciate Lee’s words,” Richard said. “He’s like my big brother now.”

Jalen Richard’s ascent with Raiders a surprise even to him

By Vic Tafur

November 17, 2016

Jalen Richard says he is a perfectionist and his own harshest critic. So when the Raiders’ running back was asked what the biggest surprise has been in his rookie season, he didn’t hesitate.

“Me,” Richard said. He was dead serious.

“I surprised myself and now I have reached a point where, ‘OK, you can do this,’” Richard said. “I mean, I always had confidence in myself, but now I am at the top tier of the whole world that plays football. How do I measure up?”

At 5-foot-8, Richard has measured up just fine. He ran for a 75-yard touchdown on his first NFL carry, in the opener in New Orleans. He has 279 yards rushing and 123 receiving backing up starter Latavius Murray. And Richard has seized both the kick- and punt-returner jobs.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"It's caught me off guard how well I am doing," Richard said. "I was also surprised by how much confidence the team had in me so fast. I wasn't even on the radar going into training camp."

That he wasn't. The Southern Mississippi alum came to the Raiders' rookie camp in May on a tryout basis. The coaching staff liked his wiggle and burst and told him to stick around. And then he made the roster in September despite the fact that the Raiders had drafted DeAndre Washington, another 5-8 back who is very similar to Richard.

"A guy like Jalen, to step up and play as big as he has ... (when) just to be here was a shock because it was a tryout," head coach Jack Del Rio said. "Then, he comes into camp and he tears it up. The opening game, he makes huge plays to help us win, and he hasn't looked back."

Richard didn't think the coaches were going to play him much when he made the roster.

"You drafted DeAndre, you have Taiwan (Jones), you've got Jamize (Olawale) that can play running back and you have" Murray, Richard said. "I didn't think I was going to get an opportunity ... and then I didn't touch the ball in New Orleans until the fourth quarter.

"It just so happened I took it 75."

That run was made possible by a vicious block by guard Kelechi Osemele, who still might be shoving the defender into the ground if the team hadn't needed to fly home.

"Our linemen are enforcers," Richard said. "Especially K.O. He is out there just trying to whoop up on anybody. I am very thankful for this line because they make me look good."

Richard looks fast and has quickly gotten used to the speed of the NFL compared with college ball.

"When you settle down, the game still moves fast, but you're able to react better," he said. "It's like muscle memory; I'm moving along with the speed of the game and things are clicking. People don't get faster when they get to the league, they get smarter.

"Whether you're a running back or a linebacker, see it, hit it. No hesitation."

That's true times 10 in the kick-return game, when opposing players are sprinting downfield with one target in mind: the returner.

Richard had a 47-yard punt return — the longest by a Raider since 2012 — on Oct. 2 in Baltimore and a 50-yard kickoff return against Kansas City two weeks later. The past two games, he has looked one block or one move away from breaking one for a touchdown.

"I am getting closer and closer," Richard said. "I know I am due for one. Just steadily taking the coaching from (special-teams) coach (Brad) Seely, and going vertical first. Sometimes I have a bad habit of going lateral first, and then trying to get vertical."

Either way, it has been better than what the Raiders have had. Oakland's last punt return for a touchdown was Dec. 21, 2008, by Johnnie Lee Higgins, and the last kickoff return for a TD was Oct. 16, 2011, by Jacoby Ford.

"I hope I bust one really soon," Richard said. "Monday night in Mexico would be the perfect time."

Raiders' Jalen Richard's journey from UDFA to NFL rookie makes for extra meaningful homecoming

By Courtney Cronin

September 10, 2016

ALAMEDA – Jalen Richard is right. It's hard to script a story better than this one.

The last five months have been among the most challenging the Raiders rookie running back has ever faced, and that's saying a lot for a player whose career could have been derailed by constant, nagging injuries throughout his four years at Southern Mississippi.

The type of praise he's received from veteran teammates to Oakland offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave isn't often bestowed upon an undrafted rookie free agent whose journey began on a tryout basis in May. Yet here he was last Saturday, pacing nervously while keeping an eye glued to the clock, unwilling to believe that he had come this far to make the team's 53-man roster even after the NFL's deadline for cuts had come and gone.

"I was walking through the locker room and got a couple of congratulations from different players, but in my head I'm like, 'Man, it ain't 1 o'clock yet and I don't have the general manager or coach telling me this so I don't know,'" Richard said.

Maybe that uncertainty stems from watching other opportunities he's had nearly slip away, sometimes because of his own doing. Just over a year ago, this moment of excitement and possibility was a distant dream.

It felt like there had always been something standing in between the 5-foot-8, 207 pounder and a breakout season as a Golden Eagle: injuries, grades, himself.

"It wasn't really until last year that he came from a guy that we weren't sure if he was good enough to be a starter to being a first team all-conference running back," former Southern Miss head coach and current Tampa Bay Buccaneers offensive coordinator Todd Monken said. "That's how far he came."

Richard tried to steady the scale of a major balancing act that included football, maintain his health and wellness, majoring in psychology and a social life. Following a junior season where he missed five games due to a thumb injury, Richard joined a fraternity and quickly found himself off the team because of how badly his grades had slipped, almost making him ineligible for the upcoming year.

There, on the cusp of what he needed to be his best season yet to bolster his resume for NFL scouts and prove his ability as a downhill running back that can do more than catch passes, Richard was suspended for the spring until he could get himself in better academic standing.

"We owed that to him," Monken said. "Discipline is the greatest form of love you can bestow upon anybody. All we did was show him how much we love him. If you don't care then you just let it slide and hope it all works out. He was capable of doing it. He just needed to refocus on what he wanted out of his last year of football, his last opportunity."

Tough love forced Richard to reevaluate his priorities and mature at a rapid rate. This time, he wasn't going to let himself get in the way of his future.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

The time he spent focusing on academics allowed him to return in time for fall camp. During Southern Miss' turnaround season in 2015, Richard experienced his own, racking up his first 1,000-yard rushing season (1,098) with 14 touchdowns.

Hitting rock bottom was not only critical for his maturity but helped him pull through the high stress process of going from an undrafted rookie to making an NFL roster.

"That's what I used everyday to stay focused and determined," Richard said. "How I dug myself out of a hole in college and really had to get it from ground zero, coming in as an undrafted free agent and a tryout guy, I knew I was going to be at ground zero. I just had to figure out a way to preserve and get that done."

The outcome of fighting to prove his worth on a daily basis makes this story so much sweeter, and his homecoming this weekend when the Raiders play the Saints in his native Louisiana all that more meaningful.

Richard had never been to an NFL game before the first preseason snaps he took against Tennessee on Aug. 27. Despite growing up in Saints territory with his formative years spent between Baton Rouge and Alexandria, Richard was a loyal Cowboys fan.

Sunday will be his first time in the Super Dome.

"I come from Alexandria, (Louisiana), a small town," he said. "Not too many people make it out of the city, so me being a figure of that back home is real good to me."

Whether he is among one of the 46 Raiders that dresses out for the season opener, Richard's triumph is shared by those around him. His mother and father were the first to receive a phone call after the running back made final cuts. There were tears shed then. Those are likely to return for his family and friends when they see Richard run onto the field in his No. 30 jersey.

After missing a bulk of training camp and Oakland's first two preseason games due to a knee injury, Richard made up for lost time in the final two exhibition meetings, totaling 10 carries for 45 yards, three receptions for 14 yards, a returned a punt for 25 yards and three kickoffs for 72 yards.

Where he goes from here to prove himself as a complimentary change up for Latavius Murray is the next chapter on his triumphant journey.

"As I told him, he's going to be the poster child for going and talking to young people about preserving and making mistakes along the way and overcoming it," Monken said.

"Its only the beginning. He can write his own story, we'll see how it goes from here."

Sons of Pasadena Sean Smith, Marcus Robertson reunite with Raiders

By Paul Gutierrez

August 22, 2016

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- The memories are more feelings now than actual stories.

"Competing," Sean Smith recalls. "Just competing. He always pushes the kids to go out there and compete. And you always want to do well in your community, because everybody talks and you definitely want to be one of the most talked-about guys around the neighborhood."

Smith was talking about being a youngster growing up in Pasadena, California, and taking to the tutelage of another native son of the 'Dena, All-Pro defensive back Marcus Robertson, as part of Robertson's football camps at the Jackie Robinson Community Center in the late 1990's.

So Smith reuniting with Robertson in Oakland all these years later -- the cornerback was one of the Raiders' most prized free-agent signings this offseason and Robertson is Oakland's defensive backs coach -- has a hint of serendipity.

"Not saying it was easy, but I just picked up the phone and said, 'Hey, Sean, I want to put you in this silver and black. What you gonna do?'" Robertson recalled his recruiting pitch being to Smith this spring.

"The relationship with Sean is a very simple one, because we're like, home team."

Indeed, the Muir High School grad leaned on his Pasadena roots to pitch the Raiders to the Blair High School alum.

And it worked. Because after four seasons with the Miami Dolphins, who drafted him in the second round in 2009 out of Utah, and three more seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs, Smith is in Oakland with a four-year, $40 million contract with $20 million guaranteed.

Smith is part of a rebuilt Oakland Raiders secondary, opposite fellow cornerback David Amerson. The unit also includes veteran free safety Reggie Nelson, who came over as a free agent from the Cincinnati Bengals, and first-round draft pick Karl Joseph at strong safety.

Smith remembered talking with Robertson when he was with the Dolphins, and Robertson was coaching with the Tennessee Titans.

"After the game, we chopped it up, man, I was like, It would be 'love' playing for you," Smith said. "All Pasadena guys are kind of alike -- we think alike, we act alike -- so it would be great to play for a coach who's from your area, knows everything about you and you're on the same page mentally."

Smith has 10 interceptions in seven seasons. But it is his physicality, more than his ball skills, which give quarterbacks, receivers and offensive coordinators fitful nights.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

At 6-feet-3, 218 pounds, Smith is huge for a cornerback and looks like a skinny outside linebacker draped all over wideouts.

"Sean is a, he's a student of the game," said Robertson, who had 24 interceptions as a free safety during a 12-year career with the Houston Oilers, Tennessee Titans and Seattle Seahawks from 1991 through 2002.

"He's got a very high football IQ. The things that he possesses in his size and his length, I think make up for a little bit of the short areas of quickness and things of that nature, because he's so difficult to get around, he's so difficult to throw over. And then you put in the football IQ of it, he understands football. So when you talk about pattern-matching and things like that, he's got it."

The normally talkative Smith was at a loss for words when told of Robertson's praises, especially about the high football IQ.

"I was always told that talent will only take you so far and eventually it will fade away," Smith finally said. "The game is played from the neck up, and when you're young, you don't really understand that because you're just used to using your athleticism and just reacting out there and making plays.

"But as you get older, you can see the game from a different angle; you can slow it down and I try to tell guys all the time, 'You guys are way more athletic than I ever was. But mentally, I'm able to slow the game down and see things that kind of help me out to where I can make a play faster than you guys would, because you guys don't see it as fast as I do,' if that makes sense."

Makes perfect sense. Almost as if Smith was now a camp counselor for Robertson at the Jackie Robinson Community Center.

Raiders CB Smith 'wouldn't be here today' without WR background

By Scott Bair

August 22, 2016

Raiders cornerback Sean Smith was a pretty good receiver way back when. One heck of a running back, too. That's how he earned a scholarship to Utah, as an All-American scoring machine for Pasadena's Blair High.

The Utes recruited Smith as a running back but eventually focused him on receiver to capitalize on an athletic 6-foot-3, 220-pound frame. The shuffle didn't produce much and, after a falling out with a coach, Smith was moved across the line of scrimmage for good.

That's a major move with just three years college eligibility and NFL dreams, a last resort that changed his career for good.

After just two years at cornerback he was a third-team All-American, entering the workforce as Miami's second-round pick. Smith had seven years gainful employment in Miami and Kansas City, before joining the Raiders this offseason on a four-year, $38 million contract. His playing background brought him to this point.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I wouldn't be here today if I didn't play offense," Smith told CSNBayArea.com last week. "Switching from receiver to corner, it's crazy how much that can help you."

Thinking like a receiver has made him an excellent cover corner. He picked up the position's mental aspects in a snap, which allowed him to flourish quickly. Smith offered some insight into his pre-snap routine and how he hones in on what the receiver might do based on his experience playing offense.

Smith said he quickly eliminates possibilities on the route tree based on formation and the receiver's positioning.

"You start breaking things down, and then analyze them through the defense we're running and where my help is going to be," Smith said. "I've now crossed a bunch of options off the list and, before the snap, I'm confident he'll run one of a small number of routes. I'll focus on defending those and react to anything else. The majority of the time, it ends up being the routes you expect."

Smith takes pride in his football acumen. Predicting routes comes easier than most, but Smith still spends significant time in the film room identifying tendencies of specific opponents and how to best defend them with his size and skill set.

Smith's size and athleticism offers a solid baseline, but a cornerback's technique, an effort refined over time in college and the pros. That's when he believes the position switch was truly complete.

"I played boundary corner and in college, you only get maybe three routes," Smith said. "I'm a big guy, and I could press and take things away. When I got to the NFL and the boss tells you to play in the middle, you really have to learn the nuances of playing cornerback."

Smith played safe early in his NFL days, often worried about getting beat. He gained confidence from experience and detail work, and started playing more aggressive.

It hasn't produced a high interception count – he has just 10 in seven seasons – but has developed an excellent cover man. Smith's completion percentage allowed now hovers in the low 50s and the passer rating against him hasn't been above 86 since 2011. Getting over on Smith is hard work. He's become a reliable player who can defend all receiver types.

The Raiders aggressively sought his services this offseason, considering him an excellent scheme fit. They were also hoping to add a leader to the position group, and got one who sets a solid example for a young corps.

"I'm just trying to get the guys to trust what they see, and don't be afraid to get beat," Smith said. "If you believe in yourself and your reads, you'll play well."

Cornerback Sean Smith a big part of Raiders' optimism

By Vic Tafur

August 24, 2016

He can't hide, so he's not going to try.

At 6-foot-3, 220 pounds, the Raiders' Sean Smith stands out among NFL cornerbacks. He knows some of the weight of the team's lofty expectations falls on his shoulders, and he welcomes that.

Smith can't hide, especially when the big free-agent signee walks in and sits down in Oakland's quarterbacks meetings. Derek Carr did a double-take the first time.

"He'll come in the quarterback room when he doesn't have a meeting and sit in," Carr said. "He'll ask questions, and we'll bounce ideas off each other. It's the first time I've ever had a defensive back do that.

"He's by far one of the smartest defensive players I have ever gone against or been around."

Carr's no dummy himself, evidenced by his not being goaded by the then-Chief's trash-talking the past two years.

Sean Smith's interception totals don't stand out — no more than two in a season — but that's a reflection of opposing quarterbacks opting not to throw in his direction.

Smith, 29, has taken to yelling at quarterbacks because most receivers don't engage in trash-talking — maybe Smith's saddest discovery about the NFL.

"It's crazy, I thought there would be much more trash-talking than there is," Smith said. "But it's quiet out there. Guys show up, do their jobs and go home. In college, you used to go back and forth....

"So I talk to the quarterbacks. They have the ball anyway. I used to always talk to D.C. Between plays, yelling at him, 'Come at me! Let's do this!' We used to go back and forth."

As Smith would tell the receivers, it's not easy looking this good. Never has been.

Smith didn't even have a position to look good at his first two years in college at Utah.

It wasn't until he was moved to cornerback that Smith started to emulate a famous Raider and thought about a future in the NFL.

"At that time, Nnamdi Asomugha was hot," Smith said. "He was the big corner. There weren't a lot of big cornerbacks at that time; everyone wanted that next Nnamdi, a corner over 6-feet tall. ... I used to always watch Nnamdi, seeing how he played and trying to imitate that on the field."

Smith has an inch and 10 pounds on the since-retired Asomugha, and with the move of Brandon Browner to safety in Seattle, he is the biggest starting cornerback in the NFL. He is a big reason that Raiders teammates, coaches and fans are talking playoffs.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I love his competitiveness," head coach Jack Del Rio said. "Sean's a long athlete. He is a veteran with an understanding of who he is and where he fits in this league. He brings that knowledge of playing that position at a high level for a long time in this league."

Some point to Smith's size and aggressiveness, but his quick feet have paved this road for him.

"I always had good feet. I was a running back in high school, 'offensive weapon' I believe was the term we used," Smith said, smiling.

Smith was one of 18 players on the Blair-Pasadena football team, and had 2,500 all-purpose yards his senior season.

"I never had any intention of playing running back at Utah. That just wasn't the position for me," Smith said. "I begged and pleaded if I could move to receiver."

The Utes' staff moved Smith during his redshirt freshman year, but he got into a heated argument with his position coach.

"The situation carried on, and I said, you know what, I am done with offense," Smith said. "I went to my coach and said, 'I am a big guy, let me play safety.'"

Roll credits?

Nah.

"I wasn't a good tackler," Smith said. "So they said, 'Let's try corner.' I was like, 'Corner?! I don't know if I can do that.' But it ended up working out. I picked up the technique pretty fast, and having played receiver, I understood the splits and what routes a guy might run, so I was ahead of the curve on that."

Smith had four interceptions his sophomore season, and five interceptions and nine passes broken up the next year in Utah's 13-0 2008 season.

Smith was drafted by the Dolphins in the second round in 2009, and it was with Miami that he learned again that being a very good football player doesn't come easy. Another former Raider, 2014 interim coach Tony Sparano, played the starring role.

Sparano was the head coach and current Jets coach Todd Bowles the secondary coach, and neither loved Smith's attitude.

"I smiled at everything, good and bad," Smith said. "Just having the time of my life."

A benching his second year awakened Smith to the extra work needed in the NFL.

"They were patient with me, and worked with me to become the player I am today," Smith said. "They would call plays out before they happened, and taught me how to watch film."

Smith watches so much film now, he can see the future.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Have to, dealing with the smaller, shiftier receivers,” Smith said. “Those guys come out of their breaks so well, it forced me to watch more film and try to understand tendencies and formations. What routes do guys run 2-by-2 versus 3-by-1, so I can anticipate when to stop (running) versus just reacting.

“Bigger guys take longer to stop, so you can just use athleticism to cover those guys.”

Smith is able to get his hands on a receiver right away and control him, as opposed to letting the receiver get a clean break on his route.

As far as trying to throw the ball over him, forget about it.

“It’s really hard,” Carr said. “If you want to throw a go-route, especially in the NFL, 90 percent of the time it has to be before 40 yards. Because the safeties are so fast, anything past that they are going to kill your receiver.

“With Sean, you can’t really throw that ball on a line because he is so tall. If you want to drop one in on him, you have to bring it from the sky ... and that just gives the safety more time. It’s just really hard playing against him.”

Smith will pull the chair out, too, backing off and not pressing so that he can jump the route and go for the interception.

“If you already know where the guy is going to be,” Smith said, “you might as well play off and keep your eyes on the quarterback and try to beat your man to the spot.”

So, don’t tell Smith that he’s a good fit for Ken Norton’s in-your-face defense.

“I fit any defense,” Smith said. “Is that a compliment or are people trying to say I can only play a certain way because I am big? I am a very smart individual that works on my technique every day....

“This is a good defense. It allows you to press. We have great edge rushers, so as long as I give those guys a few seconds, we’re good.”

It Was The Journey

By Robert Mays

March 29, 2016

Joe's Brewery, known simply as Joe's around the University of Illinois, sits at 706 South Fifth Street in Champaign, at the eastern edge of the college-bar hub that lines the town's main thoroughfare. A faded orange canopy shields the beer garden just outside the door. Inside, a list of 21 burgers makes up a bulk of the dining options. It's a place packed for $3 U-Call-Its on a weekend and barren at noon on Monday, but on this afternoon in early March, it's what Jihad Ward wants for lunch.

Champaign-Urbana sits about 140 miles south of Chicago. Outside of the university's small sphere of population, it's beset by farmland on all sides. The campus is spacious but not sprawling, bustling in a few areas but quiet in most. In choosing his Division-I home, Ward sought calm, and he knew he'd found it here.

Before coming to play defensive end for the Illini, the north Philadelphia native spent two years at Globe Institute of Technology, a junior college whose campus is situated in New York City's Garment District only a short stroll from Times Square. His first semester in Champaign, Ward's walk to practice consisted of the seven-block stretch between Bromley Hall and Memorial Stadium. That's the same distance from the 28th Street stop on the 1 Train to the Manhattan Mini Storage on the borough's west side that housed Globe Tech's practice equipment between sessions. At Illinois, the jaunt from Bromley was the entirety of his daily commute. In New York, snagging his pads from a storage locker was just one leg of an 11.5-mile trip from his school-provided townhouse on Staten Island to practice at the Chelsea Ballfields, which were occasionally unavailable because of a youth soccer practice. Getting there meant a short bus ride, a trip across the Upper Bay aboard the Staten Island Ferry, a quick shot on the 1 through Manhattan, and finally, that relative breeze of a seven-block walk.

When practice ended, Ward and the Knights lugged their gear back to storage before trudging nearly a mile down 29th Street to a Bally's Total Fitness near Penn Station for a lift and a shower. Clean but exhausted, they stumbled to classes at Globe, which often ended around 9 p.m. From there, it was a short walk to the 42nd Street station, a subway ride to the ferry, and finally, the slow float back to Staten Island. In all, it was a 24.5-mile round-trip commute—nearly three of those miles on foot—and around 200 minutes in transit over a five-day week.

"That's why people quit," Ward says. "They didn't quit because the team sucks, or this or that. They quit because of the grind." After two years of that grind, wide-open, slow-paced Champaign felt like a haven. "Here," Ward says, "there was nothing but quiet."

As he finishes the thought, Ward—an honest 6-foot-5 and a trim but sturdy 300 pounds, cloaked entirely in charcoal Illinois athletic gear—lifts his burger from its plastic red basket. Ranch and barbecue sauce spill out the sides of the bun. In junior college, players aren't provided meals. Many of the players at Globe were broke, and finding a next meal wasn't always certain. Bubba Burgers were the unaffordable item Ward craved enough to pilfer from the nearby grocery store.

Opinions of Ward as a player cover an expanse. His standout week at the Senior Bowl led Mel Kiper to project him as a first-round pick in February. Others see an inexperienced, position-less project that doesn't deserve a thought in the first two rounds. Ward hasn't paid much mind to any of the noise. Barely 22, with a patchy beard that betrays a soft but rumbling tenor, his past has purged him of self-doubt. Whatever concerns skeptics have voiced, none of them can touch the ones he's already faced.

"Somebody complain about food, I've been through it," Ward says. "Somebody complain about traveling, I've been through that. Somebody complain about not having a father, I've been through that. Somebody complain about violence or shooting, I've been through that too. I ain't afraid of nothing. I've been through everything."

Globe Tech's players were scattered around the boroughs and New Jersey, but for two years, Ward lived with 19 teammates in neighboring two-story townhouses at 104 and 106 Townsend Avenue on Staten Island. A modest $3,000 rent was the appeal of each cream-colored, green-roofed building, where six players inhabited the upstairs with another four on the first floor.

The bus stop was only a few steps down the street, and with two lines running they never waited long. Rides cost $2.75, which many of them simply didn't have every day. To ensure passage, they deployed an array of tactics. The simplest, because non-college students rode for free, was flashing an old high school ID. As Ward filled out his 6-5 frame, suspicion grew, and when the MTA issued specialized passes for high schoolers, the plan was scrapped. Some mornings, he'd grab a fistful of pennies and toss them in the change slot.

Free ferry rides provided a brief respite, but the real problem waited for them across the water. "We get off the ferry, and now, we have to worry about the train," Ward says, before pausing. "That's gonna be tricky." Subway stations around Whitehall were lined with police, both MTA and NYPD. Initially, says Tyruiq Gordon, a fellow Philly native who was a year ahead of Ward at Globe, they would try to reason with workers, explaining they were willing to give what they had, even if what they had wasn't enough. "For the most part, they were lenient toward us because of the situation," Gordon says. "We weren't just hanging around." On days when that failed, players would get creative. Even at 280 pounds, Ward would slip into a turnstile with a teammate, conjuring two Metro Card swipes out of one. Like attacking a double team, the key to squeezing onto the subway was getting skinny. "It's a technique going through them things," Ward says. In times of desperation, the Knights were left with one final, undesirable option. "If you had to hop, then you hopped," Gordon says of a move that could come with a $100 fine. "When it came down to it, you couldn't miss practice or class."

"You know the movie Warriors?" Ward asks. "We did the same thing."

Empty pockets hindered travel, but the hardest days were the ones that led to empty stomachs. Groceries came from a now-defunct Waldbaum's around the corner. On his most desperate days, Ward would haul a duffel bag to the store and collect the cheap essentials—pancake mix, milk, bread—before paying, sneaking back inside, and snagging luxuries like hot dogs and french fries. "He [wouldn't] eat for two days and not say anything to me," says Cameron Chadwick, Globe's head coach. "He was one of those kids, he wouldn't ask you. He'd just go without."

During Ward's first season living at 104 Townsend there were three other players from Philadelphia and six from Hampton Roads, Va. Those shared roots created the earliest bonds, but it was hunger—both for food and a future—that ultimately fused them. Gordon and others showed Ward the way that year, and when they were gone, the mantle was his. "It's not really teaching someone," Ward says. "You just see it. We've got each other's back."

For Chadwick, Ward became another set of eyes when he couldn't be around. If the house wasn't clean or neighbors complained about noise, he knew to call his Pied Piper, the guy who rounded up players, got them fed and to practice every day. That year, fellow Philadelphian Tyrin Stone-Davis was 3,000 miles away at Pierce College in Los Angeles, but when he joined Ward at Illinois, he felt the same pull. "Just his presence, period," Stone-Davis said of Ward's influence. "He just leads by action, and people rally behind him." Stone-Davis is nearly a year older than the man he now describes as his brother, but that never mattered. There was comfort to be found in Ward's quiet ambition, and Stone-Davis clung to it. He still does. "I just feel safe around him," Stone-Davis says. "He never lied to me. He's never done me harm. I trust him. I love him. He wants the best for me."

Walk from 28th St. to Manhattan Mini Storage (29th St. and 11th Ave.) to Chelsea Ballfields (28th and 10th)

The Chelsea Ballfields are a fenced-in artificial surface near the High Line, outfitted with a track, backstop, and soccer fields. And during Ward's first season at Globe, in the fall of 2012, it's where the team held most of its practices. Compared to the arduous walk from the storage unit to De Witt Clinton Park on 52nd Street in Hell's Kitchen, home to spring practices that year, the two blocks felt like nothing to veterans like Gordon. When Chadwick ran into scheduling conflicts, he'd sometimes audible to Pier 40, at a field that adjoins a trapeze school, but that season Globe Tech football called two main locations home: practices in Chelsea, games at Union City High School in New Jersey, on a roof surrounded by a net to keep balls from plummeting off the side.

Next to the turf patch at the Ballfields sit a trio of basketball courts, much like the ones where Ward spent most of his childhood. Kareema Ward is a single mother with five children. "Jihad" was the name of a childhood classmate, and it would become the name of her first child. There was no religious connection at the time—Kareema didn't convert to Islam until 11 years ago, long after Jihad was born—but her education as a Muslim has brought new meaning to his name. In her purse, she carries a piece of lined notebook paper with 17 highlighted Islamic phrases, a constant resource for lessons she's still learning. She knows what most will think. They hear "Jihad," all they imagine is decrees of holy war and violence. But jihad can also mean to strain, to strive, to persevere. Now, when Kareema hears her son's name, she thinks of all he's done in his own struggle.

Until age 14, he'd never played a down of organized football. Before his sophomore year at since-closed Edward Bok Technical High School, the basketball coach approached Frank Natale, then in his first-year as Bok's head football coach, about a tall, muscular basketball player he thought would fit with Natale's plans. That summer, a 6-foot-3, 240-pound Jihad Ward was getting snaps for the Wildcats at wide receiver and safety. "He was 6-4 at D-back wearing no. 84," laughs Gordon, who played running back for nearby University that year. "He looked out of place."

Apocryphal tales have emerged about Ward's positional history, in the way they do about players who've spent time on the outskirts of college sports before ending up at a major program. He's only played defensive line for three years is a tempting way to inflate Ward's potential. It's also not true. He spent his second season as a standup end in Natale's 5-2 defense, and with an eye on getting Ward's hand in the dirt, Bok transitioned to a 4-3 when he was a senior.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Ward was second-team All-City as a junior, but Division I interest ended before it could start when coaches learned about his grades. Natale ensures that Ward was a fixture in class, but still, his GPA hung just below 2.0. Chadwick, who'd been named Globe's head coach the previous year, had history recruiting in Philadelphia, and eventually he and Natale got in touch. He made the trip to see Ward play at an all-star game at Lincoln Financial Field, but he'd been sold long before. Players built like that don't land in junior college. A defensive end from the start at Globe Tech, Ward played well enough for his teammates to elect him a captain the spring following his freshman season.

Eight hundred fifty miles away, Bill Cubit was one of several members of the Illinois coaching staff scouring JUCO tape for defensive linemen. Poring through his Hudl account, Cubit, a Philadelphia native, came across a tape from a school he'd never heard of. He might have kept going if not for seeing his hometown next to the player's name. A few plays on the grainy tape were all Cubit needed.

Cubit reached out to Ward through Illinois's Twitter account and passed along his number. His first question after Ward called was a crucial one: American cheese or Cheez Whiz? Silence followed.

"On your cheese steak," Cubit said.

A short pause.

"American cheese."

Cubit was satisfied.

Until Ward came to Illinois that fall for his official visit, the only proof Cubit had that he even existed was shoddily recorded game footage and a voice on the other end of the phone. There was more evidence that the Loch Ness monster is real. The day before Illinois' game against Wisconsin, a hulking figure walked into a banquet room at Champaign Country Club for the team's Friday meal. "When he walked through the door, I was as relieved as anybody," Cubit says. "And I turned to somebody and said, 'Now that's what they're supposed to look like.'"

A handful of schools pursued, but Illinois is where he felt wanted most. Along with a reprieve from life in New York, Ward yearned for people who cared. He didn't always have them growing up in Philadelphia. When he was 17, a paternity test revealed that the imprisoned man he thought to be his father was not. Jihad eventually did get in touch with his dad, and when his family threw a party to celebrate his acceptance to Globe, he extended an invitation. The man arrived with the smell of beer lingering on his breath and handed his son a congratulatory $20 bill. Ward hasn't seen him since.

In Philadelphia, distrust and dismissal seeped into all of life's cracks. With Cubit at Illinois, there was support, a shared vision. "He told me the other day, 'You can't feel money,'" Kareema says. "But you can feel when someone loves you."

Ward's first padded practice in Champaign was the second day of the team's fall camp. He knew how established, pedigreed Division I might view a JUCO castoff, and from the start, he wanted to announce his presence. A broader goal came with it, though. "When I do a rep against people, when I get off the ball, people feel me," Ward says. "I don't say much, but people feel me. "You're going to feel how I felt for those two years, through my whole life."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Practice started with an inside run drill, the linemen, linebackers, and backs gathered on one side of the field. On the first snap, Ward knifed into the backfield and buried running back Donovan Young into the turf. Stone-Davis was across the indoor facility with the rest of the wide receivers. “All I heard was Wooooo! Woooo!” Stone-Davis says. “Everybody just turned their head and looked.” What they saw was Ward, letting out an out-of-character roar in Young’s face as he was peeled off the ground. “He felt like he’d arrived,” Stone-Davis says.

Illinois was thin on the defensive line, and co-defensive coordinator Tim Banks says the staff did all they could to get Ward ready to play early that season. “I think we knew after the first practice,” Banks says. “This kid was freakish, in terms of his movements. And he went hard.” By the fourth game of the season, an injury made Ward one of the Illini’s starting defensive ends.

He remained there all year, earning Honorable Mention All-Big Ten along the way, but when new defensive line coach Mike Phair arrived the following spring, he quickly developed grander plans. Like many who’d only seen him on film, Phair was jarred by Ward’s size in person.

He saw a player that even at 6-foot-5 had the flexibility to maintain pad level and keep leverage. Throughout the spring, he experimented with Ward inside, where the quickness and length that allowed him to survive on the edge became an even more significant advantage against interior offensive linemen. “He’s dangerous there,” Phair says. “I thought he could really cause some problems for an offense. And I thought he did a really good job learning how to play those spots inside.” A bump to tackle was just another course in Ward’s rapid defensive line education. Those practices would be his only spring football experience in major college football, and that lack of background is what has teams intrigue about his room for growth. “I’m just now learning techniques and schemes,” Ward says. “Getting off the ball, getting vertical, those types of things.”

By the time Illinois played Iowa in its sixth game of the season, Ward was playing a considerable portion of his snaps at defensive tackle, and that week is when Phair saw it all coalesce. Ward finished that game with 11 tackles, including nine solo. In years past, players that appeared to fall between the cracks of positional designations were downgraded for it. Now, with stars like Muhammad Wilkerson, Calais Campbell, and Jurrell Casey blurring lines and erasing ballcarriers, versatility is en vogue. Phair spent five years as an NFL defensive line coach before arriving in Champaign, and when looks at Ward, he sees an instant pro. “It won’t surprise me when he plays right away for whoever drafts him,” Phair says.

Walk from Bally’s Total Fitness to Globe Institute of Technology (38th St. and 7th Ave.)

Globe’s entrance is on 38th Street. Wedged between two stores specializing in rhinestones and beads, “Garment Center Capitol” is carved into the stone above the door. When Cubit visited, following Illinois’s 2013 season, he thought he was lost. Ward’s thoughts were even blunter: “I was like, ‘This is the school?’”

The school is three floors of beige walls, with a few rows of computer paper reading “Welcome to Globe Institute of Technology” taped behind a receptionist’s desk acting as a banner. The rounded letters are filled in with black marker. It’s a tough sell for head coach Cameron Chadwick, and he knows it.

Chadwick is from Union, N.J. A high school star, poor grades made junior college his only outlet after graduation. He landed at Nassau Community College, and from his housing in Hempstead, the trudge to the Garden City campus was more than 3.5 miles. After two seasons, he transferred to Rutgers, where he played defensive back under head coach Terry Shea. Three years with NFL Europe's Prague Panthers followed, and after a short stint in real estate, Chadwick felt the pull of coaching. He was hired as Globe's defensive coordinator in 2008 before finally taking the head job in 2011. "I feel like this is where I belong," Chadwick says. "I was [these players] 20 something years ago."

The main sales pitch for Globe Tech is two-prong. Prong 1 starts—and ends—with the chance to attend school in New York City. Prong 2 is about how much it costs. Last season, Globe's opponents included Stevenson College, Dean College, and Albright College. The average yearly tuition for those three schools is $33,000 a year. Lackawanna and Albright are considerably more affordable, but neither gets to Globe's annual asking price: $11,000.

Getting players to campus is a start, but keeping them is far from a certainty. In those days, with the trek to and from Manhattan, Chadwick estimates that he lost about the half the players he'd recruited before the season. "You take an 18-year-old kid straight out of high school, stick him in the heart of New York and say, 'OK, now you have to do everything yourself,'" Gordon says. "It was definitely a shock." The travel was a deterrent for some of Ward's teammates, but what sent many of them scurrying was learning that a portion of their credits wouldn't pass NCAA compliance. Following his freshman year, Washington, Tennessee, Kentucky and Illinois all showed interest in Ward, but some balked at Globe's accreditation.

Chadwick ensured that all they needed was additional course materials, and the concerns would be alleviated, but Ward saw it as another rejection. He was devastated. All those hungry nights, all the cunning work to make his way onto the train, all his success on the field, it had been in vain. "It really hurt me because I busted my ass to be where I was," Ward says. "I was so excited that I had a full scholarship somewhere." Chadwick did what he could to calm the unrest, and in time, Illinois was able to accept enough of Ward's credits to accept him. After coming to Globe Tech with a 1.8 GPA, he left with a 3.4, and he's on track to finish his degree at Illinois in sports management this spring.

Conference room 409, where Ward signed his letter of intent, has been unchanged since. An old Dell desktop sits in one corner, a black file cabinet in another. Two posters—an eagle for "Leadership" and group of cyclists for "Perseverance"—hang on adjacent walls. A blue Globe Tech banner fills out another, behind the long table where Ward put pen to paper. Documenting it all was Chadwick with a cell phone, the signing day cameras a world away. "After we signed him, [Jihad] must have thanked me for five, six weeks, for giving him the opportunity," Cubit says.

Even now, as Ward spends more time with former college stars entrenched in the same stretch of their lives, he can't believe what he hears. He never says anything, content to keep his head down and his mouth closed as he plugs away. Quietly, he's incredulous. "It's a regular day to them," Ward says. "It's not a regular day to me. I'd never had a practice on no college football field, in a big stadium." He says the moment he arrived at Illinois, he knew this was the future. The hardest days were behind him. But even now, short clips will land in Cubit's text messages, of Ward alone in the practice facility. "He could be a $100 million man, and he'd still feel like he's worth a penny," says Stone-Davis. "That's Jihad."

Walk from Globe Tech to 42nd Street/Times Square // 1 Train to Whitehall Terminal // Staten Island Ferry to St. George Ferry Terminal

Tourists lingered in Times Square long after the 9 p.m. let-out time for Globe's classes, but the worst of the noise was long past. After another adventure to secure a seat on the train, Ward arrived at

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Whitehall Terminal and waited for the next ferry back to Staten Island. Sitting on the hard plastic seats of the ferry, he'd pass the Statue of Liberty, softly lit from below as a few straggling tourists gathered near the window to snap a picture.

"Like I tell everybody," Ward says, "I just want peace at the end of the day."

He found it at the end of every night in New York, but at Illinois, he discovered it in every aspect of his day. He knows football has changed his life, but he doesn't deny he's the one that allowed it to.

"There was so much stuff happening in my life. There's always something trying to break you down," he says. "But I made it through."

The only sound on the ferry was the low hum of the engine. It was a calming churn. Staring out the window, he saw the soft light on the Lady to which so many began anew. When he looked into the sky, he saw hope.
