GAME PREVIEW

The Oakland Raiders will hit the road this weekend to begin the final quarter of the regular season against the Kansas City Chiefs at Arrowhead Stadium on Sunday, Dec. 10 at 10:00 a.m. PT. Sunday's game will conclude the season series between these two longtime AFC West rivals, as the Raiders won their first matchup in Oakland back in October.

This week's game starts a stretch of three road games in the final four weeks of the regular season for the Raiders, with the team also traveling to Philadelphia to play the Eagles (Week 16) and Los Angeles to play the Chargers (Week 17) after a home game next week against the Dallas Cowboys.

Last Sunday, the Raiders won their matchup with the New York Giants by a final score of 24-17. For the second straight week, the defense held the opponent under 300 yards of total offense, allowing just 265 yards to the Giants. The unit posted three sacks on the day with LB Bruce Irvin and DE Khalil Mack leading the charge as they each posted one sack-fumble that resulted in a turnover. DL Denico Autry also got in on the action, posting his third sack in two games. RB Marshawn Lynch paced the offense, tallying his first 100-yard game as a Raider, rushing for 101 yards on 17 carries and one touchdown, a 51-yarder to open the scoring in the first quarter. WR Cordarrelle Patterson led the team's receivers, totaling 97 yards on four receptions, including a 59-yard catch and run late in the game, helping Oakland seal the victory. WR Johnny Holton hauled in his third touchdown of the season and RB DeAndré Washington also rushed for a 9-yard score. P Marquette King was once again effective throughout the contest, averaging 50.0 yards per punt and pinning the Giants inside their own 20-yard line twice.

Next week, the Raiders will host their final home game of the regular season with a matchup against the Cowboys on Sunday Night Football. The Chiefs will host the Chargers at Arrowhead next Saturday night.

RAIDERS VS. CHIEFS

WHAT TO WATCH FOR VS. KANSAS CITY

- The Raiders' offense continuing to lead the NFL in 20-plus-yard touchdowns since 2016. The Silver and Black have 13 20-plus-yard scores this season, and also lead the NFL with 27 such touchdowns since 2016's campaign.
- The Raiders' rushing committee crossing the 100-yard barrier for the eighth time this season and for the fourth consecutive game.
- The Raiders' defense holding their opponent to less than 300 total net yards in three consecutive games for the first time since Weeks 15-17 in 2012, when the team held the Chiefs, Panthers and Chargers to 119 yards, 271 yards and 210 yards, respectively, in consecutive games.
- DL Denico Autry recording a sack in three consecutive weeks for the first time in his career. Autry set a career high with his fourth sack of the season in Week 13. No trio of defenders has tallied more sacks (8.0) than Autry, LB Bruce Irvin and DE Khalil Mack since Week 12.
- QB Derek Carr tossing one touchdown to extend his streak of throwing at least one touchdown to 14 games.
- Carr posting a passer rating of at least 100.0 for the sixth time this season. Carr currently owns 18 such games, the seventh most in franchise history. The team is 15-3 when Carr throws for a passer rating over 100.0. His next game will tie him with Tom Flores for sixth-most in club history.
- Carr tossing at least two touchdowns for the fourth time this season to earn his 30th multi-touchdown performance of his career, which would tie for the eighth-most in NFL history through a player's first four seasons with Jeff Garcia and Kurt Warner.
- Carr tossing three touchdowns for the 15th time in his career. Fifteen such games through a player's first four seasons would tie for fourth-most in NFL history with Carson Palmer, trailing Peyton Manning by only one game for third.
- TE Jared Cook recording his third 100-yard day in 2017. It would mark the first time in his career recording three 100-yard performances in one season.
- Cook hauling in seven passes to earn his 50th reception of the season. It would be the third season in Cook's career recording at least 50 receptions and first since 2014.
- WR Michael Crabtree recording his seventh 100-yard game as a receiver in Silver and Black and first of the 2017 campaign. Seven such games would tie him for 10th most in franchise history with Willie Gault.
- Crabtree hauling in a touchdown reception for the seventh time this season. His next will tie Clem Daniels for 14th-most as a Raider.
- LB Bruce Irvin recording a sack in three consecutive games for the first time this season. Irvin last did so in 2016 from Week 11-13.
- Irvin recording a sack-fumble for the third consecutive game for the first time in his career. Irvin's nine forced fumbles since joining the team in 2016 rank second in the NFL.
- RB Marshawn Lynch rushing for at least 100 yards for the second consecutive game for first time since Nov. 9 and Nov. 16 of 2014, when he rushed for 140 yards and 129 yards, respectively, against the Giants and Chiefs.

- Lynch rushing for a touchdown in three consecutive games for the first time since the remaining three games of his 2014 season. Lynch's four rushing touchdowns since Week 9 are tied for the most in the AFC.
- DE Khalil Mack recording a sack in four consecutive weeks for the first time this season and first since tying an NFL record last season by registering a sack in eight straight games. Mack's sack would tie him with Derrick Burgess for sixth on the club's all-time list (38.5).
- Mack recording a sack-fumble in consecutive weeks for the first time since doing so in three straight games in 2016 (Week 12-14).
- Mack recording at least a partial sack against Kansas City for the fourth consecutive game.
- WR Cordarrelle Patterson leading the team in receiving yards for the third consecutive game after finishing with 97 yards in Week 13. His 97 yards receiving were the second-most in his career and most since his rookie season.
- Patterson leading continuing to lead the NFL among wide receivers in yards after catch. Since Week 12, Patterson has racked up 128 yards in YAC on just seven receptions.
- T Donald Penn extending his starting streak to 169 consecutive games, the longest active streak among NFL offensive lineman.

A WIN WOULD...

...make the Raiders 7-6 on the year to remain in a tie for first place in the AFC West. The Raiders control their own destiny moving forward, and can win the AFC West with a victory over both the Chiefs this week and the Chargers in Week 17, if they are able to beat either the Cowboys or Eagles in Week 15 and 16.

HEAD COACHING MATCHUP

JACK DEL RIO

Jack Del Rio was named the 19th head coach in the history of the Oakland Raiders franchise on Jan. 15, 2015. The appointment marked a homecoming for Del Rio, who was raised in nearby Hayward, Calif. Now in his 32nd year in the NFL and his 21st season in coaching, Del Rio has played for, coached with, and learned from some of the best coaches in all of football.

Last season, Del Rio guided the Raiders to a 12-4 record, marking the franchise's first 12-win season since 2000. The Raiders earned a postseason berth for the first time since 2002 and landed an NFL-high seven players on the AFC Pro Bowl squad. Del Rio was selected as the recipient of the Maxwell Club's Greasy Neale Professional Coach of the Year Award, becoming the sixth Raiders coach to earn NFL Coach of the Year honors. In addition, he was named the AFC Coach of the Year by Kansas City's Committee of 101.

As defensive coordinator with the Denver Broncos from 2012-14, Del Rio was part of three-straight AFC West titles and helped lead Denver to an AFC Championship and appearance in Super Bowl XLVIII following the 2013 campaign.

Prior to joining the Broncos in 2012, Del Rio spent nine seasons at the helm in Jacksonville. During his head coaching tenure (2003 to 2011) with the Jaguars, the club ranked sixth in the NFL in yards per game allowed (317.3) and eighth in points per game allowed (20.3). Under Del Rio, the Jaguars made two playoff appearances in 2005 and 2007, highlighted by the club's first postseason win in eight seasons with a 31-29 road victory against the Pittsburgh Steelers in a 2007 AFC Wild Card Game.

During his lone season as a defensive coordinator with Carolina in 2002, he inherited the NFL's worst defense statistically (371.4 yards per game allowed) and turned it into the league's second-ranked unit (290.4 yards per game allowed). As linebackers coach for the Baltimore Ravens from 1999-2001, Del Rio tutored a talented group that included Peter Boulware, Ray Lewis and Jamie Sharper.

A veteran of 11 seasons as an NFL linebacker, he was selected in the third round (68th overall) of the 1985 NFL Draft by New Orleans and went on to make the NFL's All-Rookie Team and earn the Saints' Rookie of the Year award. For his career, he played 160 games in the regular season and totaled 1,078 tackles, 12 sacks and 13 interceptions.

Del Rio was a four-year starter at the University of Southern California, where he earned consensus All-American honors as a senior and was runner-up for the Lombardi Award, given to the nation's best lineman or linebacker. A standout catcher on the USC baseball team, Del Rio was drafted by the Toronto Blue Jays in 1981. He was inducted into the USC Athletic Hall of Fame in May 2015.

Del Rio was a three-sport star in football, baseball and basketball at Hayward High School in Hayward, Calif. Born on April 4, 1963, in Castro Valley, Calif., Del Rio and his wife, Linda, have three daughters, Lauren, Hope and Aubrey, and a son, Luke.

ANDY REID

Andy Reid entered his fifth season at the helm of the Chiefs in 2017. He was hired as the club's 13th head coach in franchise history on Jan. 7, 2013. Reid joined the Chiefs after 14 seasons as Head Coach/Executive Vice President of Football Operations of the Philadelphia Eagles where he compiled a 130-93-1 (.583) regular season record. He added six division titles, five NFC Championship appearances and one Super Bowl appearance. In his coaching career, Reid's teams have made the playoffs 18 times (20-17 record), and he has coached in three Super Bowls and eight NFC Championship games. He owns three NFL Coach of the Year titles.

In 2016, Reid led the Chiefs to a 12-4 record and an AFC West title for the first time since 2010. The team finished a perfect 6-0 against its division foes. It was the club's best record since 2003. The Chiefs earned a first-round bye in the NFL playoffs and hosted a home AFC Divisional Game. Under Reid, Kansas City has qualified for the playoffs in three out of four seasons.

In 2015, Reid's Chiefs rattled off 10 consecutive regular season wins to finish 11-5 and earn a playoff berth for the second time in his three seasons with the club. The Chiefs defeated the Houston Texans 30-0 in an AFC Wild Card game in Houston marking the team's first playoff win in 22 years. Reid and company advanced to the AFC Divisional Round. The club's 10 straight wins after starting just 1-5 marked the greatest turnaround in a single season in NFL history. Reid's efforts earned him AFC Coach of the Year honors.

Reid was originally introduced as the head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles on Jan. 11, 1999, after spending seven seasons as an assistant coach with the Green Bay Packers under Head Coach Mike Holmgren. During his seven years with the Packers, Reid served as the tight ends coach and assistant offensive line coach (1992-96) and as quarterbacks coach (1997-98). During his two-year stint as quarterbacks coach, Reid worked with Packers quarterback Brett Favre. In his first NFL coaching role, Reid oversaw the tight ends while assisting Offensive Line Coach Tom Lovat.

Prior to joining the NFL ranks, Reid's final collegiate stop was also in the Show-Me State as he coached the offensive line at the University of Missouri (1989-91). Prior to his stint with the Tigers, Reid spent two years working with the offensive line at the University of Texas - El Paso, and before that, he held the same position with Northern Arizona. In 1983, Reid took the position of offensive coordinator and offensive line coach at San Francisco State, helping the Gators lead the nation in passing and total offense for three consecutive years (1983-85).

A tackle and guard at Brigham Young University from 1979-81, Reid entered the coaching ranks as a graduate assistant at BYU under Head Coach LaVell Edwards in 1982. It was in that time at BYU that Reid began his association with Holmgren, who served as the quarterbacks coach for the Cougars. While playing for the Cougars, Reid was also a columnist for the Provo Daily Herald.

A native of Los Angeles, Reid prepped at John Marshall High School in Los Angeles and went on to go to Glendale (Calif.) Junior College before attending BYU.

COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

The Raiders – who began play in the American Football League in 1960 – enter their 58th year of professional football competition, including the last 47 as a member of the National Football League.

In six memorable decades – the 1960s, '70s, '80s, '90s, 2000s and 2010s – the Raiders have been dominant in professional football since Al Davis first pledged in 1963 to build the finest organization in pro sports.

During these decades of dominance, the Raiders have won an AFL championship, four American Football Conference championships, and three world championships of professional football, participated in five Super Bowls, played in 14 championship games, won or tied for 17 division championships, had 22 playoff seasons, finished 35 seasons at .500 or better and played in 41 postseason games.

Pro football's dynamic organization placed first in the AFC West in 2000, 2001 and 2002 despite playing among the toughest schedules in the NFL in each of those seasons. With their appearance in Super Bowl XXXVII, the Raiders became the first NFL team to have had a season end in the Super Bowl in four different decades.

The Raiders are the only team to have been in Super Bowls in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s and the 2000s.

The Silver and Black are the only AFC team – and one of just two NFL teams (Minnesota) – to have a season that advanced to the conference championship game in the '60s, the '70s, the '80s, the '90s and the 2000s.

The Raiders are one of only three original AFL teams to have captured three world championships of professional football with Super Bowl victories. The Raiders are one of only four AFC teams to have won more than one Super Bowl since 1980.

In their five Super Bowl appearances, the Raiders have been led by four head coaches and started four quarterbacks.

With four postseason victories, the Raiders were the first of the AFC West teams to win multiple postseason contests in the new millennium by six years.

Since 1963, when Al Davis first took over the failing Oakland franchise that had struggled to win only nine of 42 league games in the initial three seasons of the new AFL and pledged to build the finest organization in sports, the Raiders have dominated professional football in terms of consistent victory. During the memorable 57 years in Oakland and Los Angeles, the Raiders have won 462 league games, tied 11 and lost 407.

“Commitment to Excellence” has never been an idle phrase to those who have proudly represented the Raiders organization during the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium as shown by their domination of pro football.

More than 20 of the great players who proudly wore the Silver and Black, as well as Owner-Leader Al Davis and legendary Head Coach John Madden, have been enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. The Raiders have also produced six Coaches of the Year.

In addition, 70 Pro Bowl players have earned 195 Pro Bowl selections representing the Silver and Black. In 1970, as the Raiders began their second decade of play, the merger between the AFL and NFL became a reality on the field. In the 1970 through 2012 period of interconference play, the Raiders have compiled a remarkable 92-77-1 record against present National Football Conference rivals.

Another innovation came to professional football in 1970 – “Monday Night Football.” The Raiders’ domination of this prime-time television series has seen the Silver and Black build an incredible 38-27-1 record in Monday night play. In the 43 years of this series, the Raiders are 16-8-0 in “Monday Night Football” games at home.

Through the decades – the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s, 2000s and now the 2010s – the Raiders have had the greatest players, the greatest coaches, the greatest plays and participated in the greatest games in the annals of professional sports.

Challengers to Raider domination of professional football will arise as they have in the '60s, '70s, '80s, '90s and the new millennium. The Raider organization will continue to meet these challenges.

REGGIE MCKENZIE

THE GENERAL MANAGER

Reggie McKenzie, a former draft pick by Raiders Owner Al Davis as a player, enters his 31st season in the National Football League and his sixth as General Manager of the Silver and Black. McKenzie was named to the position by Owner Mark Davis on Jan. 10, 2012, becoming the first General Manager of the franchise since Al Davis was hired as Head Coach and General Manager in 1963. Owner Mark Davis rewarded McKenzie with a four-year contract extension in July 2016, and McKenzie went on to be named the Executive of the Year by the Pro Football Writers of America and Sporting News in 2016.

McKenzie has overseen significant changes in the organization's scouting, player personnel and football operations departments, while bringing refined football acumen to the Silver and Black. Adhering to a strategy of building a competitive roster through the draft while making strategic acquisitions via free agency and trades, McKenzie is in his sixth season at the helm having already earned plaudits from some of the most respected voices in football.

UNDRAFTED GEMS

Every preseason, hundreds of undrafted free agents vie for a spot on their team's 53-man roster. Reggie McKenzie has brought in numerous players that were not drafted, developing them into significant contributors for the Silver and Black.

- In 2017, P Marquette King is tied first with 14 punts inside the 10-yard line and ranks third in gross average (49.2). In 2016, he led the NFL with 38 punts traveling over 50 yards. In 2015, set a franchise record by placing 40 punts inside the 20-yard line. In 2014, King set Raider franchise records in punts (109) and yards (4,930).

- WR Johnny Holton has blossomed in his second year and has become known as a home-run threat. Holton averages a staggering 28.6 yards per catch in 2017 and ranks third on the team with three touchdown receptions.

- On RB Jalen Richard's first career carry, he rushed 75 yards for a touchdown. With his 75-yard touchdown, Richard became just the fourth player ever to record a 75-or-more-yard rushing touchdown in his NFL debut, joining Oran Pape (1930), Alan Ameche (1955) and Ottis Anderson (1979). He has added three total scores and combined for 1,133 scrimmage yards in 28 career games.

- WR Seth Roberts has totaled four game-winning touchdowns in his career (Week 2 of 2015 vs. Baltimore, Week 12 of 2015 at Tennessee and Week 1 of 2016 at New Orleans). The Raiders are 10-0 in games when he records a touchdown reception (12-0 including two-point conversions).

LATE-ROUND STEALS

"It definitely helps. When you play on Sunday and a guy goes down and that player that you have running on special teams now can play a position and you're not afraid to put him in, it gives you depth. They may not be the starter. These young guys, you really have to give them a couple of years to figure out what they really are. Some of them, you have to throw them in because of where you are as a team. Let's all hope that not only the guys at the top of the draft but the guys at the bottom, if we can get a couple of those guys to give us some production within the first three years, that would be great." - Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie on getting production from lower-level draft picks

THAT'S WHAT THEY SAID

"My approach is old school. I'm a roll up the sleeves type of guy that wakes up early in the morning like iron workers, and comes prepared to get the job done." - Reggie McKenzie, introductory press conference, Jan. 10, 2012

"He has the courage of his convictions about players that Ron Wolf had, including blunt assessments of their talent. But Reggie also has the patience of Ted Thompson; he adheres to the draft-and-develop model of team-building. The latter means trusting scouts to constantly fill a pipeline of young talent, empowering coaches to play and develop young players, and identifying core players to secure contractually for the future." - Andrew Brandt, Monday Morning Quarterback (MMQB), March 12, 2014

"He is an exceptional evaluator of talent. Just has a great skill for it, especially for guys already in the NFL who might be flying under the radar. He was my right-hand man for all those years, a big reason why the Packers were good all those years." - Ron Wolf, April 24, 2012

"You can see this foundation starting to build there with the things Reggie [McKenzie] has done. He goes and hires Jack Del Rio, and I think that's a pretty good situation. They have a ton of cap space and an opportunity to build. All of a sudden you look at the AFC West, and they're kind of on the rise and you're very familiar with the AFC West so you know. It's very competitive." - Andy Reid, March 24, 2015

SILVER AND BLACK IN PRIME TIME

- The Raiders will play two more prime-time games in 2017 (five total) following their most recent victory over the Dolphins on NBC Sunday Night Football on Nov. 5: an NBC Sunday Night Football contest with the Dallas Cowboys on Dec. 17 and the Raiders' first-ever Monday Night Football game on Christmas Day against the Philadelphia Eagles.
- The Raiders will appear on Sunday Night Football one more time in 2017, marking the second consecutive season that Oakland has been scheduled for at least one Sunday Night game. Last year against the Broncos, the Raiders won their 18th contest on Sunday Night Football following a 30-20 victory over Denver's ball club. In 2013, the Raiders participated in the latest NFL game ever played when they hosted the San Diego Chargers on Oct. 6. Due to an Oakland Athletics' postseason game at Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, the Raiders moved their game to an 8:35 p.m. PT start, marking the latest start time in NFL history.
- The Raiders, 19-19 all-time in Sunday night contests since 1978, are 1-0 against the Cowboys on Sunday night, and faced both the Redskins and Dolphins for the first time on a Sunday Night Football stage earlier this season, winning against Miami and falling to Washington.
- This will mark the Raiders' 67th contest on Monday Night Football and second consecutive year after playing in the first Monday Night Football contest outside of the United States last season in Mexico City, Mexico against the Houston Texans. The Raiders will be visiting the Philadelphia Eagles to play their first-ever Monday Night Football game on Christmas Day. It will also be the Raiders' first matchup with the Eagles on Monday Night Football. The only Monday Night Football game the Raiders have played against one of the four current NFC East franchises was a contest against the Washington Redskins on Oct. 19, 1970 at home in Oakland. The Raiders won that game, 34-20.
- Oakland holds a 38-27-1 all-time record in Monday Night Football contests. The Silver and Black last played on Monday Night Football on Nov. 21, 2016 vs. the Houston Texans. The Raiders won that contest, 27-20.
- On Thursdays, the Raiders are 10-10 all-time, including a 3-4 record on Thanksgiving Days. In 13 Thursday games vs. the AFC West, Oakland is 9-4 and 2-2 against the Chiefs.
- The Raiders have won two out of the last three Thursday Night Football meetings against the Chiefs, after beating the club, 31-30, with zero seconds left on the clock in their instant Week 7 classic and beat them at home in 2014 by a score of 24-20. In their Week 7 victory this season, WR Amari Cooper posted the second-most receiving yards in a game (210) by a player in club history. Cooper's 210 yards are second most in the NFL this season.

The Raiders also tie for second in 2017 with 13 touchdowns of at least 20 yards. Take a look at the chart below for more:

Cook has surpassed 30 receptions in Week 8 for the seventh consecutive season, one of two active tight ends to do so (Jason Witten), and currently sits first on the team with 43 for 2017, 11th-most among all tight ends. His 546 receiving yards ranks seventh among tight ends.

PLAYING THE FIELD

In 2017, the Raiders have routinely put themselves in good position to score points, as they rank 4th in the NFL in average starting field position. On the flip side, the Raiders are also efficient in limiting their opponents' starting position, as they currently rank 11th in the league in average opponents' field position. All three phases are counted on to establish good field position, and the Raiders' special teams has played its part through the Week 12.

TEAM NOTES

COOP AND CRAB

Now in Year 3 together, WRs Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree have continued to give NFL secondaries trouble. In 2016, Crabtree and Cooper became the first Raiders' receiving duo to both record at least 1,000 yards in the same season since Jerry Rice and Tim Brown did so in 2001.

In the Raiders' Week 2 win against the Baltimore Ravens in 2015, Cooper (seven receptions, 109 yards and one touchdown) and Crabtree (nine receptions, 111 yards and one touchdown) became the first pair of Raiders receivers to each post 100 receiving yards in a game since Jan. 1, 2012. This also marked the first time since Dec. 31, 2005 that the Raiders had two receivers with 100 receiving yards and one touchdown each. Coupled with the duo's 281-yard effort in Week 8 of 2016 against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Cooper and Crabtree now have two games where they have both gone over 100 yards.

Together, "Coop" and "Crab" averaged 10.8 receptions and 137.7 yards per game in their prolific 2016 campaign. Here is a look at their combined production from last season:

Notes

- The two players have recorded 16 100-yard receiving games combined since 2015 (Cooper has 10 and Crabtree has six).
- Both players have caught at least four passes in 26 of the team's 43 games played together since 2015. The Raiders are 14-6 when they have combined for at least 10 receptions in a game.

FLASH

Signing with the team this past offseason, WR Cordarrelle Patterson has brought another weapon to an already versatile and explosive offense. Patterson joined the Silver and Black No. 2 all-time in average kickoff return yards, checking in with 30.4 per return, second to only Gale Sayers. Below is a chart of where 'Flash' ranks in 2017 among NFL kick returners.

----- 2017 AVERAGE KICK RETURN YARDS PER RETURN -----

Rank	Player	Yds./KR	K-Ret	K-RYd
1.	Patterson (Oak.)	29.0	14	406
2.	Lewis (NE)	28.9	14	404
3.	Cooper (LARm)	28.7	26	747
4.	Daye (Cle.)	26.6	14	373
5.	Switzer (Dal.)	26.1	18	469

A two-time member of the Associated Press All-Pro First Team (2013 and 2016) as a return man, Patterson has registered five touchdowns on kickoffs, and is tied for the longest play in NFL history with his 109-yard score on Oct. 27, 2013. Patterson is the only player in NFL history to have four scores on kickoffs of at least 100 yards. His five career kickoff return touchdowns are listed below.

----- PATTERSON'S CAREER RETURN SCORES -----

Date	Opponent	Distance (Yards)
09/15/13	Chicago Bears	105

11/15/15	Oakland Raiders	93
12/6/15	Seattle Seahawks	101
11/20/16	Arizona Cardinals	104

At 6-foot-2, 220 pounds, Patterson offers an unorthodox option out of the backfield. In Week 6 against the Chargers, Patterson cruised to the house for his sixth career rushing touchdown. Each of his rushing scores have come from at least 30 yards out and are listed below.

----- PATTERSON'S CAREER RUSHING SCORES -----

Date	Opponent	Distance (Yards)
12/1/13	Chicago Bears	33
12/22/13	Cincinnati Bengals	35
12/29/13	Detroit Lions	50
09/7/14	St. Louis Rams	67
09/17/17	New York Jets	43
10/15/17	Los Angeles Chargers	47

Patterson is also one of just four players since 2013 to record at least six 30-yard touchdown runs, and is the only wide receiver amongst those four to do so. Nicknamed for the flashy plays he makes, 'Flash' averages 45.8 yards per touchdown rush, and an incredible 50.3 yards per touchdown overall on 18 career scores.

KEEP YOUR CARR CLEAN

The offensive performed at an elite level for the entirety of the 2016 season. The unit posted a league-best 18 sacks on the year and, as the Silver and Black were the only team to allow less than 20 sacks in 2016. Their 18 sacks surrendered mark the fewest by the club since the 1970 AFL-NFL Merger.

Since QB Derek Carr entered the league in 2014, the team's 97 sacks allowed are fewest in the NFL. In addition, the Raiders' 69 sacks surrendered since 2015 are also the fewest during that time span.

ONE OR NONE

With five clean sheets in 2016, the Raiders' offensive line also ranked at the top of the league in games with one-or-fewer sacks allowed. The Silver and Black posted 10 games with one or zero sacks allowed. Here is how Oakland compared to the rest of the league when hitting that mark:

1t.	Oakland Raiders	10
1t.	Chicago Bears	10

Twelve weeks into the 2017 campaign, the offensive line has surrendered just 18 sacks, the sixth-fewest in the NFL. In Week 2, they posted their first clean sheet of the 2017 season against the New York Jets and added their second and third clean games of the season in consecutive weeks against the Chiefs and Bills in Week 7 and 8.

PAVING THE WAY

The line picked up where they left off in 2016, after finishing sixth in the NFL in rushing yards per game (120.1), and have rushed for at least 100 yards in seven contests this season, including a season-best 180 in Week 2 against the Jets.

The Raiders' stable of backs currently rank 18th in yards per rush in 2017, averaging 4.15 yards. Last season, returning second-year RBs Jalen Richard and DeAndré Washington shined in their rookie campaigns, making the Raiders just one of two teams to roster two running backs both averaging over five yards per carry (min. 80 attempts). Of running backs with at least 80 carries, Richard paced the NFL with an average carry of 5.92 yards. Between the two rookie rushers, they accounted for 958 yards rushing on 170 attempts (5.64 yards per carry), added 309 yards receiving and five total touchdowns.

Oakland's offensive line was also extremely successful in blocking for FB/RB Jamize Olawale in 2016. Olawale has set a career high with two rushing touchdowns while leading all running backs and fullbacks with a 18.9 receiving average (min. 10 receptions). In Week 8 against the Bills, Olawale scored his first touchdown of the 2017 campaign, punching the ball in from one yard out.

CARR'S SHOP

In 2017, the Raiders' offensive line has once again been dominant in pass protection, allowing QB Derek Carr and company an abundance of time to survey the field and make big plays, helping the offense rank first in 20-plus-yard touchdowns (12) this season. Shown below is where the Raiders rank in sacks surrendered per attempt in 2017.

DAMAGE CONTROL

Surrendering three fewer sacks in 2016 than the next-closest team, Carr and company also managed to minimize yards lost on all sacks. The Raiders lost just 86 yards total on sacks in 2016, 60 less than the New England Patriots and New York Giants, as the maulers in the middle were the only team to tally less than 100 yards lost on sacks last campaign.

KHALIL MACK

SILVER AND MACK

As the Raiders' first-round pick in the 2014 NFL Draft, DE Khalil Mack had lofty expectations in his rookie season and he met them all and more. Mack finished third in Associated Press Defensive Rookie of the Year voting. Proving to be one of the NFL's best run defenders and generating pressure on quarterbacks that didn't always show up on the stat sheet, Mack was selected to the Pro Football Writers of America, Sports Illustrated and NFL.com All-Rookie Teams.

Mack finished second in the NFL in 2015 with 15 sacks, but it was 2016 that became the year of the Mack. He earned a spot on the Associated Press' All-Pro Team for the second consecutive season and was named the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year, becoming the first Raider to win the award since Lester Hayes in 1980.

FIVE-SACK GAME

Mack tied a franchise record set more than 32 years ago and set a career high with five sacks in Week 14 at Denver in 2015. His incredible performance matched Howie Long's five sacks on Oct. 2, 1983. Below is a look at the top single-game sack performances in franchise history:

Player	Sacks	Date
Khalil Mack	5.0	12/13/15
Howie Long	5.0	10/2/83
Kameron Wimbley	4.0	11/10/11
Anthony Smith	4.0	9/12/93
Anthony Smith	4.0	10/18/92

Mack became the first player with five sacks in a game in which his team won by three points or fewer since sacks became an official stat in 1982. All of Mack's five sacks came in the second half against Denver, tying for the most sacks in a half since 1991. Here is a look at the most sacks in a half since 1991:

Player	Sacks	Date
Khalil Mack (Oak.)	5.0	12/13/15
Vonnie Holliday (GB)	5.0	12/22/02

Since sacks became an official stat in 1982, only six other players have recorded more than five sacks in a game in NFL history. Mack is the sixth player to record five sacks and one forced fumble in a game. The most recent player to do so was Adrian Clayborn for the Atlanta Falcons in Week 10 this season. Below is a look at the six players to record five sacks and one forced fumble in game:

----- NFL SACK LEADERS SINCE 2015 -----

RECORD-TYING STREAK

In 2016, Mack's Defensive Player of the Year campaign was highlighted by his record-tying sack streak. From Week 6 through Week 14, Mack registered in sack in eight consecutive games. He tied an NFL record and became just the second player in club history to do so since sacks became an official stat in 1982. Here are Mack's incredible numbers during his eight-game span

His 53 TDs rank second most by any NFL player through his first two seasons, trailing only Dan Marino (68). And although his 2016 season was cut short due to injury, he continued his stellar start to his career by throwing 28 more TDs in his third season. His 98 TDs are also 10th-most in the NFL since 2014.

MARSHAWN LYNCH

BEAST MODE

After an injury-riddled 2015 campaign, the Beast went into hibernation for the entirety of the 2016 season. Now in 2017, a whiff of home has brought the Beast, RB Marshawn Lynch, out of retirement and placed him into the Silver and Black uniform, the team he grew up watching as an Oakland native. The Oakland Technical High School and Cal Berkley grad joins the Raiders as a five-time Pro Bowler. Lynch is also a two-time member of the Associated press' All-Pro Teams (First Team in 2012 and Second Team in 2014).

Lynch currently owns 32 career 100-yard games, ranking fourth among all active players behind only Adrian Peterson, Frank Gore and LeSean McCoy, despite not playing for all of 2016, while also tying for the second-most multi-td games among active rushers with 13 such games. Below is a chart of Beast Mode's career:

With 57 rushing touchdowns since the beginning of the 2011 season, RB Marshawn Lynch ranks first among all rushers in the NFL. That includes his 2015 season in which he only took the field seven times due to an abdominal injury, and being retired for the duration of the 2016 season.

From 2011 to 2014, only four running backs totaled double-digit rushing scores in multiple seasons, with Lynch being one of them. Of those four, only Lynch recorded 10+ scores in all four consecutive seasons, amassing an incredible 48 touchdowns in that span, 14 more than the next closest running back. Lynch led the NFL in rushing scores from 2013-14 with 12 and 13 touchdowns.

With 9,670 yards on the ground through 138 games in his career, Lynch currently ranks sixth among all active rushers in the NFL.

6	Chris Johnson	9,651

Additionally, Lynch leads all NFL rushers in missed tackles since 2013, per Pro Football Focus. Lynch has forced an incredible 278 missed tackles since 2013. With 245 entering 2017, he had 66 more than any other running back in the NFL during that span, all without Lynch playing a single down during the 2016 campaign.

NOT DONE YET

Lynch powers through 2017 just 330 yards shy of breaking the 10,000-yard barrier for his career. On his 51-yard touchdown run in Week 13, Lynch became just the second active player, joining Adrian Peterson, to register 80 career rushing scores.

Additional Notes:

- Surpassed 2,000 yards receiving for his career in Week 4
- 1,000 yards on the ground would make him 22nd player in history with seven such seasons (2nd active player - Adrian Peterson)

AMARI COOPER

FIRST-ROUNDER

WR Amari Cooper enters 2017 looking to build upon his prolific career start. He was tabbed as the Raiders' first-round draft pick in the 2015 NFL Draft and the fourth-overall selection. He was the highest wide receiver taken in the draft and the first receiver taken by Oakland in the first round since 2009.

After enjoying one of the most dominant careers a wide receiver has ever had at the college level, Cooper saw that success translate to the NFL, as he became the first Raiders rookie to ever reach 1,000 receiving yards. Cooper also holds the franchise records for receptions and 100-yard games (five) by a rookie. Cooper continued his success in 2016, becoming just the third player in NFL history to post at least 70 receptions and 1,000 yards in each of his first two seasons.

HISTORICAL COOP

Cooper became the first WR in NFL history to surpass 500 yards receiving in the first six games in each of his first two seasons.

Cooper posted five 100-yard outings as a rookie, a franchise rookie record and tied with Keenan Allen (2013) for the most by any player 21-years-old or younger. His nine through his first two seasons are tied for eighth most in NFL history.

His five 100-yard games are tied for the second most by a rookie since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger (leader: Odell Beckham Jr., seven in 2014).

Cooper became the first NFL rookie since 1961 (Mike Ditka) with three 100-yard receiving games in his team's first six games.

Cooper joined DeSean Jackson (2008) as the only NFL rookies in the past 30 years with two 100-yard receiving games in their team's first three games.

In Week 3 at Cleveland in 2015 (8 rec., 134 yds), Cooper became the first Raiders rookie with 100 receiving yards in back-to-back games since James Jett (Nov. 21-28, 1993).

COOPER 200

In Week 7 against the Chiefs, Cooper put together what was arguably the best game of his career, compiling 210 yards (second-most in club history) on 11 receptions (19.1 avg.) and added two touchdown receptions. His performance will go down in history as one of the greatest Thursday performances in NFL history, ranking third all-time in receiving yards in a Thursday contest.

Cooper was 21 years old for the duration of his rookie season, making him one of the most electric receivers his age to play in the NFL. He holds the all-time record for receptions by a wide receiver 21 or younger. Listed below are more of his recent accomplishments before his 23rd birthday.

- Cooper's 72 receptions are the most ever by a wide receiver 21 or younger. Only RB Reggie Bush (88) and TE Aaron Hernandez (74) posted more.
- Cooper's 1,070 receiving yards are the second most by any NFL player 21 or younger, trailing Randy Moss' 1,313 yards in 1998.
- Cooper's six receiving touchdowns are tied for the eighth most by an NFL player 21-or-younger (record: Randy Moss, 17, 1998).
- Among WRs in NFL history before age 23, Cooper ranks second with 155 receptions and fourth with 2,223 yards.

NOT COOPED UP

In 2016, Cooper led the NFL with five touchdown receptions of at least 30 yards, while also finishing second in the NFL with 15 receptions of at least 25 yards (franchise record). Additionally, Cooper also recorded 21 receptions of at least 20 yards. Since then, Cooper added two 30-plus-yard touchdown receptions in Week 7, giving him the third-most 30-plus-yard touchdown receptions since last year's campaign.

MICHAEL CRABTREE

CRAB CROSSES THE BAY

When the Raiders signed WR Michael Crabtree in April 2015, they immediately upgraded their offense with a proven performer. After being selected by the San Francisco 49ers in the first round (10th overall) of the 2009 NFL Draft, Crabtree caught at least one pass in 120 straight games played before his streak ended in Week 12. Before joining the NFL ranks, "Crab" turned in one of the most prolific receiving careers in college football history, winning the Biletnikoff Award - given to the nation's most outstanding wide receiver - in each of his two seasons at Texas Tech. He was the first and only player to win the coveted award twice.

Career Highlights

- Became the first 49ers player since WR Terrell Owens in 2003 to post a 1,000-yard receiving season, tallying a career year in 2012 with 85 receptions for 1,105 yards and nine touchdowns.
- Registered two 100-yard receiving games in the 2012 postseason with three touchdown receptions.

MARQUETTE KING

PUNTING KING

Since entering the NFL as an undrafted free agent, P Marquette King has put up numbers among the NFL's best in both gross average and punting yards. With 4,107 punting yards in 2013, King finished sixth in the league and led the NFL in gross punting with an average of 48.9.

King continued his punting success into 2014, ranking at the top of the league in punts, punting yards and punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. In 2014, he set Raider franchise records for punts (109) and punting yards (4,930).

His 40.7-yard net average in 2015 was a career best until last season, when he finished eighth in the NFL with an average of 41.4. King also ranked second in the NFL in gross punting among all qualifiers (min. 40 punts) with an average of 48.6 yards. He currently ranks fourth in the NFL in 2017 in gross average (49.1) and is tied for first with 13 punts downed inside the 10-yard line.

PLAYER OF THE WEEK

After his impressive performance in Week 7 of 2016 against the Jacksonville Jaguars last year, King earned AFC Special Teams Player of the Week honors. In Week 7, King ranked first in gross average (54.6) and net average (50.6), second in punts inside the 20-yard line (four) and fourth in longest punt (60). It marked his second career Player of the Week Award for King, as he also won it in Week 16 of 2015 vs. San Diego.

King also rushed 27 yards, at the time the longest by a punter since 2010, on fourth-and-24 off a bad snap in the fourth quarter to extend the game-winning touchdown.

PINNED DEEP

In Week 12 against the Denver Broncos, field position played a large role into what the Broncos were able to do offensively, and in large part due to the fact that P Marquette King pinned the team inside the 10-yard line four times out of his six punts. The field position helped the defense in setting a season-low 217 total yards allowed.

He is just one of six other players since 2001 to have four such punts in a game with six-or-less total punts. He also is tied first in the league with 14 such punts this season, while no one has downed more kicks inside the 10 in a single game in 2017.

KING PIN

In 2015, King set a franchise record by placing 40 punts inside the opponents' 20-yard line. With just four touchbacks, King became the third NFL player since 1976 with at least 40 punts inside the 20 and four-or-fewer touchbacks.

King's 40 punts inside the 20 marked the second time he cracked the top-five on the all-time franchise list after doing so in 2014:

Punts	Player	Season
40	Marquette King	2015
34	Marquette King	2016
33	Shane Lechler	2008
32	Shane Lechler	1985
31	Marquette King	2014
30	Shane Lechler	2009

King continued to impress with his control in 2016, pinning opponents inside the 20-yard line 34 times. He also ranked near the top in punts taken over inside the 10-yard line, finishing first in 2015 with 18 such punts, and tying for second in 2016 with 16. Since 2013, his 50 punts downed inside the 10-yard line are third best in the NFL. Additionally, no AFC punter over the last two seasons has pinned their opponent inside the 5-yard line more than King, as he finished with an AFC-best six such punts in each of the last two seasons. His 12 total since 2015 are second most overall in the NFL.

HISTORICAL PUNTER

In 2013, King became the third punter in franchise history to lead the league in gross punting with an average of 48.9. It was the eighth time since 1974 that a Raiders punter has led the league in the category. Shane Lechler accomplished the feat four times, and newly-inducted Hall of Famer Ray Guy did it three times. Below is a look at the seasons a Raiders punter has led the league in gross average:

Raiders 24, Giants 17: Oakland moves into tie for first in AFC West

By Matt Schneidman

December 3, 2017

OAKLAND — This was the type of game that made you want to shield your eyes, change the channel and maybe even flick on some Tiger Woods preseason golf instead.

You probably wouldn't be the only one.

Whatever happened at the Coliseum on Sunday hardly resembled football for the majority of the afternoon, let alone football played by one team now tied for first place in its division. Yet that's exactly where the Raiders (6-6) sit after a 24-17 win over the Giants (2-10). It was ugly, but it's a win. And now, we get a Raiders-Chiefs tilt next Sunday in Kansas City with both teams sitting at .500, neither those two teams nor the Chargers seemingly with any desire to run away with the division.

Asked how he'd explain the turnaround from losers of four in a row to tied for first in the AFC West, Derek Carr kept it frank.

"The NFL," he said with a laugh. "Crazy. You gotta stay the course. There's a lot of adversity that happens every season. You wish you could just go out and win 'em all and do it in a good way. But that just hasn't been our road this year."

Despite the mess this one devolved into for the first three quarters, the game started anything but for the Raiders.

Marshawn Lynch reached his fifth-highest rushing total of the season in just three carries. He took the Raiders' first three plays from scrimmage 60 combined yards on the ground, the third 51 yards to the house to open the scoring. The Giants went three-and-out on their first three drives, and this one looked headed for a massacre. Yet the Raiders sat below .500 for a reason heading into Sunday, and they kept the visitors in the game far longer than they should've.

Sans Michael Crabtree and Amari Cooper, Derek Carr couldn't get anything going in the air. Not even Jared Cook picked up steam, facing the worst team in the league at defending tight ends. The uber-efficient Carr from a week ago lost some steam, middling in between the worst and best versions he's shown us this year.

Lynch passed his previous season high of 76 rushing yards with a six-yard carry late in the second quarter, but nothing else gave Oakland's offense even the slightest signs of life. The defense, however, kept a Geno Smith-led Giants team in check — as it should.

"You knew their record wasn't well, but we still went out there with the mentality that they're capable of winning a game in the NFL," Raiders' linebacker NaVorro Bowman said. "... For the defense to start the game like that and make plays that we needed, playing good football in December is really what you need."

New York, trailing 10-7, had a chance to take the lead before halftime after wrecking Marquette King at the Raiders' nine-yard line before he could get a punt off.

Yet just in time, with the Giants facing second down on Oakland's four-yard line, Khalil Mack decided to be the Mack of old. He burst around the edge, almost ripping off Smith's right arm while strip-sacking the quarterback to reverse possession. The ball didn't even touch the ground, Mack snatching it from Smith's grasp and securing it to preserve the lead.

"Khalil made two good plays on me," Smith said. "I wish I could have those back, but unfortunately those are things you've got to learn from."

If you thought the third quarter couldn't get any uglier than the first two, you were wrong. Trying to describe it here might just hurt your eyes.

It included some fumbles, some punts, some terrible throws and some conservative play-calling. The score remained 10-7, the Raiders trying again and again, failing again and again to put away a dumpster fire of a team.

Luckily for the hosts, DeAndre Washington injected life into their offense with a nine-yard touchdown run early in the fourth. The fireworks continued, this time from the team in white, when Smith found rookie tight end Evan Engram for a 10-yard touchdown. The two-win Giants refused to go away.

Carr was in danger of not throwing a touchdown in a game he played for the first time since Dec. 8, 2016 against the Chiefs. Right on cue, he found Johnny Holton from nine yards out with under four minutes left, stretching the Raiders' lead back to 10. Earlier in the game, Holton lost a fumble. This, he felt, was redemption.

"I felt like I had to make a play for my team," Holton said. "I didn't come out as good as I wanted to come out, but we won the game."

Holton's touchdown was just enough for the Raiders to escape with a seven-point win in the end.

With the Chiefs' loss to the Jets earlier Sunday, Kansas City is now 6-6 after starting 5-0. The Chargers, after starting 0-4, are also 6-6. With Oakland at .500, too, the AFC West is a disaster up top.

The Raiders, somehow, somehow, have a chance to claim sole possession of first place next weekend. A trip to Kansas City awaits, their own chance to start pulling away right there for the taking.

KEY PLAYERS

Marshawn Lynch: The Raiders' running back tallied his most rushing yards of the season, amassing 101 yards on 17 carries. His 51-yard touchdown on Oakland's third play from scrimmage salvaged an otherwise dreadful first three quarters for the hosts. Lynch also caught two passes for 20 yards in his best game as a Raider.

Cordarrelle Patterson: Without Michael Crabtree or Amari Cooper, Patterson stepped in with four catches for 97 yards. His biggest play of the day came late in the fourth, when he took a short pass from Carr 59 yards down the sideline and inside the Giants' 10-yard line. Patterson's burst of speed set up Holton's touchdown, which came three plays later.

Marquette King: In a game that lacked offense for three quarters, King was dominant again. He averaged 50 yards on four punts, booming a long of 62 and downing two punts inside the 20-yard line.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

The only punting gaffe wasn't even King's fault, when he was mauled inside his own 10, forced to take the hit with no time to get a kick off.

KEY PLAYS

Khalil Mack strip-sack: The Giants had a second-and-goal from Oakland's four-yard line just before halftime, and a chance to take a four-point lead with the Raiders receiving the second-half kickoff. The reigning Defensive Player of the Year annihilated Smith's right arm, ripping the ball away without letting it even touch the ground. Oakland's second fumble recovery of the game preserved its lead into the break, a pleasant surprise for the Raiders considering their otherwise miserable first half.

DeAndre Washington touchdown run: The Raiders couldn't put the Giants away after scoring on their first drive of the game, but Washington's nine-yard touchdown run gave the hosts their first two-score lead of the game. He took a handoff from Carr right up the gut, spun off a tackle and found paydirt for a 17-7 lead with just over 10 minutes left in the game.

Washington recovers onside kick: After Aldrick Rosas' 52-yard field goal cut Oakland's lead to seven with 1:38 left, Rosas tried an onside kick as the Giants' last hope. Washington, the unsung fourth-quarter hero, pounced on it to seal the game. He also received the last three carries of the afternoon, gaining two yards on third-and-one to ice the game for good.

EXTRA POINTS

Jalen Richard muffed three punts on the day, all which the Raiders recovered, and let a punt he should've caught roll to the one-yard line. After his third fumble, the Giants didn't punt again, so we didn't see if Jack Del Rio planned to go with another returner.

Clive Walford had three catches for 10 yards before Sunday. Against New York, he caught four passes for 57 yards, a pleasant surprise for the Raiders' passing attack.

Raiders beat Giants, 24-17, claim share of first place in AFC West

By Matt Kawahara

December 3, 2017

Early Sunday afternoon, the crowd at the Coliseum erupted into cheers at the sight of the score of a game being played in a stadium thousands of miles away.

The Chiefs, who have spent all season with at least a share of the AFC West lead, had lost to the New York Jets. Several hours later, quarterback Derek Carr knelt to drain the final seconds from a 24-17 win over the Giants — a victory that allowed the Raiders to seize a share of first place in the division.

With the Chargers also beating the Browns, there is a three-way tie among 6-6 teams atop the AFC West after Week 13. The Raiders have a .500 record for the first time since Week 4, with a showdown in Kansas City looming next Sunday.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

“All the goals that we set when the season started are right there in front of us,” head coach Jack Del Rio said.

The Raiders played a 2-5 stretch this season and have their offense and defense both ranked in the bottom half of the league in yardage. Yet they share a predicament with the Chiefs, who began the season winning five straight before stumbling, and the Chargers, who started 0-4.

“The NFL, you know, crazy,” Carr said. “You have to stay the course. ... You wish you could just go out, win them all, and do it in a good way. But that hasn’t been our road this year.”

Sunday’s was not one of the prettier wins. Marshawn Lynch recorded his first 100-yard rushing game as a Raider and the defense held an opponent under 300 total yards for the second game in a row. But Oakland led just 10-7 after three quarters, and needed two late touchdown drives to dispatch a pesky two-win Giants team.

DeAndre Washington’s 9-yard touchdown run with 10:18 remaining had Oakland’s kickoff team dancing. But the Giants countered with a nine-play, 88-yard drive capped by Geno Smith’s 10-yard touchdown pass to tight end Evan Engram, closing to 17-14.

On the ensuing drive, Carr found Cordarrelle Patterson for a 59-yard catch-and-run up the left sideline. It was Patterson’s second big play in the final minutes in two weeks, and it set up Carr’s 9-yard touchdown pass to Johnny Holton, who had lost a fumble earlier in the game.

“I felt like I had to make a play for my team,” said Holton, who had three catches for 39 yards in a game the Raiders played without top receivers Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree. “I didn’t come out as good as I wanted to come out, but we won the game.”

Del Rio cited Patterson’s catch as one of three key plays that stood out “like grown-man ball.” Another was a 21-yard catch by Lynch that set up Washington’s fourth-quarter touchdown, a play on which Lynch caught a short pass from Carr and juke a pair of Giants defenders.

Lynch surpassed his season high in rushing before halftime and finished with 17 carries for 101 yards, his first 100-yard game since Oct. 22, 2015. He carried the ball on three straight plays on Oakland’s opening drive, bursting up the middle on the third behind a block by guard Kelechi Osemele for a 51-yard touchdown — the fifth-longest scoring run of his career and his longest run overall in a Raiders uniform.

“We had the look that we wanted,” Carr said. “We ran it power scheme. Backside linebacker came to play ... the safety fit on the same side and Marshawn was able to pop free.”

But while the Giants failed to record a first down on their first three drives, the Raiders could not put them away. Smith, starting in place of Eli Manning, led an 11-play, 74-yard touchdown drive to close the first quarter, finishing the day 21-for-34 for 212 yards and a touchdown.

Smith, though, was sacked three times and fumbled twice. Linebacker Bruce Irvin forced the first fumble, which was recovered by NaVorro Bowman and led to a 39-yard Giorgio Tavecchio field goal that gave the Raiders a 10-7 lead. Smith’s second fumble was the last big play cited by Del Rio.

The Giants appeared poised to at least tie the game after they’d swarmed punter Marquette King at the Raiders’ 9 with 46 seconds left before halftime. But two plays later, Khalil Mack knifed into the backfield, hit Smith and wrestled the ball away as they went to the ground.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

“They’re knocking on the door right there,” Del Rio said. “They’re certain to get points, or have a high likelihood of getting some points. To snuff it out right like that, take the ball off him, that was huge.”

Instant Analysis: Raiders alive in AFC West hunt after win over Giants

By Scott Bair

December 3, 2017

OAKLAND – The Raiders don’t look like a team worthy of playoff consideration. Yet, here they are, right in the thick of things after Sunday’s 24-17 victory over the New York Giants and a little help from an old rival.

Kansas City lost its sixth game in seven tries on Sunday against the New York Jets, turning the AFC West into a late-season free-for-all.

The Raiders, Chiefs and Chargers have six losses through 12 games, and winter football will determine the champion of strange, strange division.

The Raiders play the Chiefs next week and close the season against the Chargers, giving them an opportunity to control their fate in the division. They bookend difficult games against Dallas and Philadelphia, meaning there’s significant work ahead before postseason prospects become realistic.

They’ll have to play a whole lot better than they did Sunday. The Raiders were bad. The Giants were worse. Both teams tried to give it away, but mistakes on both side kept it interesting late.

The Raiders (6-6) went up two scores late, and hung on to secure their first winning streak since starting the season 2-0 and their first time at .500 or better since Week 4.

That’s the good news for Raiders fans. The bad news: This remains a flawed football team, with holes, inconsistency and talent deficiencies at key spots.

They certainly missed top skill players Amari Cooper (concussion, ankle) and Michael Crabtree (suspension). Remaining receivers were largely ineffective save a big Cordarrelle Patterson catch and run and, if not for Marshawn Lynch, the offense might’ve been permanently stuck in neutral.

Lynch was effective for a second straight game, with 101 yards and a touchdown on 17 carries. He also had two catches for 20 yards.

The defense, however, was a saving grace.

That unit had key takeaways to keep the Giants’ score low. Khalil Mack and Bruce Irvin harassed Giants quarterback Geno Smith most of the day, and were integral in this victory.

Marshawn Lynch kicked started this game with every game of an opening touchdown drive. He ran for two yards, then seven and then went 51 for a touchdown. Left guard Kelechi Osemele opened a huge hole and Lynch blew threw ii into open space, where he rumbled for the game’s opening score.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

It was his longest as a Raider, and an important play in a lackluster first half for offense and special teams.

This outcome might've been different without two huge defense plays.

The Giants were in field goal range and pushing for more when Bruce Irvin stripped and sacked Smith. NoVorro Bowman recovered to kill that drive and the offense turned that into a field goal.

The Giants gained possession inside the Raiders' 10-yard line after Marquette King had to eat a punt attempt with a man in his face, but Khalil Mack stole the ball right back in his best play of the year. He had an easy sack lined up, and went straight for the ball. He ripped it away from Smith, and kept the Giants from scoring late in the first half.

The Raiders weren't getting those types of defensive plays earlier in the year. An improved pass rush has led to more takeaways and easier scoring opportunities. That must continue, and the offense must find elusive rhythm if the Raiders hope to go on a late-season run and seriously challenge for the division title.

Raiders tied for 1st in AFC West after 24-17 win over NY Giants

By Michael Gehlken

December 3, 2017

OAKLAND, Calif. — Marshawn Lynch stepped inside to make one defender miss.

He juke'd outside to avoid another.

On third-and-7 in the fourth quarter, the Raiders running back turned a short pass Sunday into a 21-yard gain, offering a blend of open-field agility and straight power when driving into the New York Giants' secondary. Two plays later, his team celebrated a touchdown.

The Raiders hoped Lynch would be a difference maker in January and February.

He started their December with an effort to keep their hope alive.

Lynch saw 17 carries for 101 yards, including a 51-yard touchdown on the opening series. He closed his action with a clutch conversion, helping lift a short-handed Raiders offense over the Giants in 24-17 win at the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum.

The Raiders (6-6) now sit in a three-way tie with the Los Angeles Chargers and Kansas City Chiefs atop the AFC West with four games to go. They'll face the Chiefs next Sunday at Arrowhead Stadium, while the Chargers host the Washington Redskins (5-7).

This was Lynch's first 100-yard rushing game since coming out of retirement in April.

OAKLAND RAIDERS GAME RECAP CLIPS

"He's getting stronger as the season goes on," running back DeAndre Washington said. "With more carries, he is just getting stronger. It's hard to tackle that man for four quarters. You know what I am saying? He is going to wear you down regardless if he is getting 2 yards or the 50-yarder like he busted today. ... At this point in the season, we are really going to need him."

It wasn't always pretty Sunday.

Giants safety Landon Collins and cornerback Brandon Dixon each dropped an easy interception of quarterback Derek Carr. New York failed to recover any of Jalen Richard's three fumbles on punt returns. Richard recovered one; safety Keith McGill II fell on the others. A breakdown in protection led to punter Marquette King being tackled late in the second quarter, giving New York possession at the Raiders' 9-yard line. The offense struggled on third down without wide receivers Michael Crabtree (suspension) and Amari Cooper (concussion, ankle).

Bowman thought the Giants would start Eli Manning at some point in the game

NaVorro Bowman talks about recovering a turnover and the Giants not starting Eli Manning. Cordarrelle Patterson says any of the Raiders' wide receivers can step up and perform at any time.

But the Raiders found a way.

On the second play following the aborted King punt, defensive end Khalil Mack bent the edge and sped past right tackle Chad Wheeler. Mack attacked the football rather than settle for a sack, tugging the ball away from quarterback Geno Smith as the two fell to the ground.

Mack forced five fumbles last season. This was his first of 2017, and it may have saved the season.

Coach Jack Del Rio said that Mack's takeaway to save a score, Lynch's third-down conversion and wide receiver Cordarrelle Patterson's 59-yard catch-and-run late in the fourth quarter were examples of "grown-man" football that stood out in the win.

Del Rio on why Marshawn Lynch has an extra "pep in his step"

Oakland Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio explains why he thinks running back Marshawn Lynch is playing on another level right now.

Offensive coordinator Todd Downing oversaw the orchestration of Patterson's screen play. Carr said that he, Downing, offensive line coach Mike Tice and wide receivers coach Rob Moore collaborated in the play's design, drawing it up on the sideline. The Raiders ran it on the first play of a fourth-quarter series that directly followed a Giants touchdown.

Carr capped the drive with a 9-yard score to wide receiver Johnny Holton.

"It was just a screen route," Patterson said. "We ran it all game, but we just did it out of a different formation. (Downing) said, 'Just get the ball, and we are going to score a touchdown.' Unfortunately, I got caught and I don't like getting caught. So I was mad after that, but we got the win. At the end of the day, that's all that matters."

In Cooper and Crabtree's absences, Patterson caught all four targets for a team-high 97 yards. Tight end Clive Walford set season highs with four catches for 57 yards. Less obvious efforts came from cornerback Dexter McDonald, who broke up a third-down pass in consecutive third-quarter drives, or Washington's recovery of a final onside kick.

The Raiders have won consecutive games for the first time since Weeks 1 and 2 this season.

"We're learning how to win games," Carr said. "As long as we can get hot, right around now, this is the time to do it."

Marshawn Lynch powers Raiders past Giants 24-17

By Josh Dubow

December 3, 2017

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Marshawn Lynch turned back the clock to his Beast Mode days and powered the Oakland Raiders back into first place in the AFC West.

Lynch had a 51-yard touchdown run and his first 100-yard rushing game since coming out of retirement, leading the Raiders to a 24-17 victory over the Giants on Sunday in New York's first game without Eli Manning starting in 13 years.

"He's still got it," Raiders linebacker NaVorro Bowman said. "Just to see him running the way that he's run for so many years. I know exactly what that defense is facing, and he's a hard tackle."

Lynch's big game helped Oakland (6-6) overcome the absences of starting receivers Michael Crabtree (suspension) and Amari Cooper (injury) to win consecutive games for the first time since the opening two games of the season.

The win moved the Raiders a three-way tie for first place with Kansas City and the Chargers despite a four-game losing streak earlier in the season. Oakland still has trips to the Chiefs and the season finale at Los Angeles that will go a long way in determining their playoff hopes.

"You have to stay the course," quarterback Derek Carr said. "There's a lot of adversity that happens every season. You wish you could just go out and win them all and do it in a good way. That just hasn't been our road this year. It's been a little bit more difficult, a lot of it because of ourselves. But we're in a situation where all of our goals are right in front of us."

The Giants (2-10) are playing for the future, having made a quarterback change this week and facing speculation about the job security of coach Ben McAdoo. New York hasn't fired a coach during the season since 1976.

"I'm going to coach this team as long as my key card works," McAdoo said.

Geno Smith lost two fumbles before throwing a touchdown pass in the fourth quarter to Evan Engram for the Giants (2-10) while Manning spent the day on the sideline watching.

New York benched Manning earlier in the week, ending his streak of 210 straight regular-season starts, and he spent his first game as a spectator since Nov. 14, 2004, walking around the sideline with no helmet and listening to the play calls with an ear piece.

Smith finished 21 for 34 for 212 yards.

"I just hate to lose," Smith said. "I don't want to lose at all in anything. I was upset that we lost. I felt like we had some opportunities and we couldn't take advantage of them."

Lynch delivered his biggest game since ending his retirement and joining the hometown Raiders this season, gaining 101 yards on 17 carries. His 51-yard run on Oakland's opening drive staked the team to the lead and his 21-yard catch and run on a third-down pass in the fourth quarter set up a 9-yard TD run by DeAndre Washington that made it 17-7.

Lynch has averaged 93 yards from scrimmage since returning from a one-game suspension with four TDs in four games.

"I've seen a little more pep in his step," coach Jack Del Rio said. "I can't speak for him. I just know what I see. It's been good. I welcome it and we're taking full advantage of it."

Carr then engineered the drive that put the game away, throwing a 59-yard pass to Cordarrelle Patterson that set up a 9-yard TD to Johnny Holton . Carr finished 22 for 36 for 287 yards.

BLOWN CHANCES

The Giants were inside the Oakland 30 twice in the first half and came up empty thanks to strip sacks by Oakland.

New York drove to the 29 midway through the second quarter when Bruce Irvin broke free and knocked the ball loose from Smith for a fumble recovered by NaVorro Bowman.

The Giants then got a break when Marquette King was tackled at his 9 when he tried to get a punt off. But Khalil Mack came in and ripped the ball away from Smith on a sack and fumble recovery.

DROPPED PICK

The Raiders took a 10-7 lead late in the second quarter thanks to a dropped interception by Landon Collins. Carr's second-down pass went right to Collins, who couldn't hold on near the 10. Two plays later, Giorgio Tavecchio kicked a 39-yard field goal for Oakland.

BUTTERFINGERS

Oakland's Jalen Richard had three fumbles on punt returns, but the Raiders managed to recover all of them, with Richard getting one and Keith McGill the other two.

The Raiders Are Not Getting Ahead of Themselves

By Jenny Vrentas

June 5, 2017

On Friday afternoon, Bay Area native Jack Del Rio cautiously mentioned that he has NBA Finals tickets for Game 5 of Warriors-Cavaliers. Of course, at that point in time, with the Warriors still undefeated in the NBA playoffs and fresh off a convincing Game 1 win (they're now up 2-0 after Sunday night's Game 2 victory), the obvious response was: If there even is a Game 5...

Del Rio wasn't having that. "I'm not getting ahead of things," he said firmly. He was talking about the Warriors, but he could have been talking about his own team.

In the annual offseason riddle—which AFC team can challenge the Patriots?—the Raiders are an overwhelmingly popular pick this year. They were for much of last season, too, until the moment quarterback Derek Carr fractured his right fibula on Christmas Eve. They have an explosive offense that can keep pace with anyone; the reigning Defensive Player of The Year, Khalil Mack; and the offseason addition of Marshawn Lynch, a physical presence that diversifies their offense.

For the first time in a decade and a half, the Raiders are entering the season as a contender. That's why, while filling in for vacationing boss Peter King during this quiet early-summer week in the NFL, I thought we'd start out in Oakland with one of the hottest teams of the moment. But Del Rio is, yes, not getting ahead of things.

Case in point: On Friday, the day of their sixth OTA practice this spring, the Raiders head coach spent time talking to the team about what a winning mindset is. Invest time in your relationships; don't take anything for granted; the habits you create now will allow you to play well when the season comes.

"We have so much to do and so far to go and so much work ahead of us," Del Rio says, "that we can't really worry about anything like expectations or how good we can be or thoughts about where we are going to play."

That's the other thing making this season unique for the Raiders. The future Las Vegas Raiders will continue to play in the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum as Bay Area lame ducks for at least two years—though season tickets for 2017 nonetheless sold out, the San Francisco Chronicle reported last week. Their new home in Vegas is scheduled to open in 2020, and where they'll play in 2019 is anyone's guess (they only have stadium lease options in Oakland for 2017 and 2018). Del Rio says he's addressed the pending move with his veterans exactly once, at the start of the offseason program. And he'll address it once more, for the rookies. After that, he says, there's nothing else to talk about.

"It's really easy for me," Del Rio says. "I grew up about 10, 12 miles from here, so it's not hard for me to stand up in front of the team and say: These are my people, these are my family and friends, and I'm telling you what I need. We are going to give our very best to where we are, and that's where we are here and now, and not worry about things in the future."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“You are talking about three years from now,” he continues. “It really serves no purpose to talk about something that’s going to happen in three years when you are talking about an NFL team. That’s the message, and every time I get asked about it, it’s the same message. We are here, and we are going to focus on the here and now. We are all about returning ourselves to greatness and committing to the things that need to happen to make that happen.”

Del Rio took the Raiders job in 2015 asking owner Mark Davis for upgrades to everything, from the roster to the facilities. That’s continuing, even if the team won’t be in these facilities for that much longer. On this year’s to-do list, Del Rio says, are adding a rehab pool to help players with their recovery as well as an on-site kitchen (unlike most teams, all the food at the Raiders’ facility is currently brought in from outside). “Those are a few of the things I’m working on right now,” he says, “to let our guys know we are going to continue to invest in them here and now, and do great things while we are here.”

The goal for Del Rio’s first season in Oakland was to teach the team to compete for a full 60 minutes. In his second season, the Raiders took a big step forward in navigating the late-game situations necessary to win games in the NFL. (Carr led seven game-winning drives in the fourth quarter or overtime in 2016.) The challenge for this season is to build on the success of last year’s 12-4 regular season and a return to the playoffs after a 13-year drought.

But as fun as that ride was for the Raiders, everything stopped the second Carr fell to the turf and mouthed the words, “It’s broken.” Asked at the combine if there is a takeaway from how last season ended—the Raiders didn’t win another game after losing Carr—Del Rio quipped, “Yeah, don’t lose your quarterback.” One-liners aside, the idea of building a team that’s stronger all-around has been the focus this spring.

“It’s easier said than done,” Del Rio says. “But when Tom Brady was out for the first four games last year, New England still won three of those games. So, they did a pretty solid job of carrying on. That’s a great example of a team executing that.”

The addition of Lynch certainly adds an extra dimension on offense to balance out the Raiders’ explosive passing game. But Del Rio, the former NFL linebacker who worked his way up through the coaching ranks on the defensive side, takes most personally the performance of the defense. The Raiders have one of the NFL’s most exciting young defenders in Mack, but they ranked in the bottom half of the league in points allowed and gave up the seventh-most yards per game last season. The breakdowns in the secondary were impossible to miss, as the Raiders gave up 61 pass plays of 20 yards or greater, more than any other team in the league.

Del Rio was blunt about what the biggest change from 2017 needs to be: “We need to get our defensive play up to the level our offense is operating.” To that end, the Raiders added former Chargers defensive coordinator John Pagano as an assistant head coach, and used six of their nine draft picks on defense. Del Rio also said they “tightened up” their system, to guard against some of the simple communication breakdowns that happened last season on the field and help the players better understand the “why” of what they are doing.

Del Rio is making sure his team isn’t looking too far into the future, but he also isn’t looking too far the past. The injury Carr sustained last season was, as far as NFL injuries go, a relatively simple one. The bone is healed, and Carr was ready to be a full participant in the team’s offseason program a few months later. But what about the psychological side? Does the sudden end to the Raiders’ Super Bowl aspirations last season, and the disappointment that followed, still linger?

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“No,” Del Rio said decisively. “I don’t think about it a lot.”

His mind wandered back to Christmas Eve once this spring, when NFL officials visited the Raiders facility as part of their annual rounds to go over rules and calls from the previous season. One of the plays Del Rio disputed was the intentional grounding call against the Colts one series before Carr was injured, a flag Ed Hochuli’s crew threw on a passing play when Seth Roberts ran the wrong route and Carr’s pass hit the turf in the end zone where the young receiver was supposed to have been. The play could have been a TD if completed, but after the penalty the Raiders were pushed out of field-goal range, and Carr returned on the next possession to find himself in a long-yardage situation ... and well, you know how the rest of the story goes.

“That’s the only thing that brought me back to even thinking about it,” Del Rio says of the officials’ meeting. “Last year is behind us, we learn the lessons from last year, and we’re looking forward to being stronger this year.”

In the meantime, he’ll take a seat at Oracle Arena, if there is that Game 5. He’s a lifelong Warriors fan not afraid to, um, mix it up on Twitter as a true loyalist. He’s also a Bay Area kid watching the local team enjoy the kind of success he’d like to deliver with his own team. The clock is ticking, but in the NFL, when is it not?

“The Warriors play with great energy; they come out and they have fun; they express themselves,” Del Rio says. “They share the ball with each other as well as any team in basketball, and we want to share and be a team that’s willing to sacrifice and do whatever it takes as a team. I’d like to think there are some similarities there. But obviously, they are doing it at the highest level in their league.”

Raiders coach Jack Del Rio is a proud football father

By Bill Williamson

August 23, 2017

Like every NFL head coach, when the NFL schedule was released in April, Jack Del Rio scanned the Oakland Raiders’ 16-game slate for the normal things — long road trips, the bye week, divisional games.

Then, unlike other head coaches, Del Rio’s attention abruptly switched. His quest: Get me to Florida as much as possible.

“It was the very first thing I did,” Del Rio told FanRag Sports on Wednesday.

Don’t get Del Rio wrong. He is living his dream as the head coach of the Oakland Raiders, a team he closely followed as a kid growing up in the East Bay Area. Making this fall tricky, however, is Del Rio is also living the dream of many parents – his son his playing high-level college football. Del Rio’s only son, Luke Del Rio, is a junior quarterback at Florida.

Naturally, Jack Del Rio wants to go to every one of his son's games. But with the Gators playing on Saturdays, mostly in the Eastern Time Zone and with the Raiders playing on Sundays, mostly in the Pacific Time Zone, Del Rio doesn't get much of an opportunity to see his son play.

It's tough.

"It's the hardest part, it really is," Del Rio said. "Like every parent, I'd love to be able to see my son every week. But it's just not possible."

Del Rio saw virtually every game his son played in high school in Denver when he was the Broncos' defensive coordinator prior to becoming the Raiders' head coach. Del Rio is thankful to former Denver head coach John Fox for being flexible. If the Broncos traveled on Friday, Fox would allow Del Rio to take a red-eye flight after Luke's games so he wouldn't miss any games.

However, the NFL-college challenge is more difficult. Because of injuries, Luke Del Rio started six games for the Gators last season. The elder Del Rio made three of the games. It helped that the Raiders had back-to-back games in Florida and that they stayed there for one week.

This year, much to Del Rio's chagrin, the Raiders' schedule is not as accommodating. Del Rio will be able to make the Gators' huge opener against Michigan on Sept. 2 in Gainesville, Fla. That is roster cut-down day. Del Rio didn't offer any specifics, but often teams make their final cuts the day before cuts are due. Thus, Del Rio will not be short-changing his duties to see his son play.

He will also be able to see his son play in November when the Raiders have their bye week. Del Rio caught a bad break in October when the Raiders play on a Thursday night, creating an open weekend. As bad luck would have it, that is Florida's bye week.

"It's something I keep close tabs of," Del Rio said. "I'm just grateful that I had a chance to see him play three times last season."

Luke Del Rio is in a three-man competition for the starting job at Florida. Del Rio texted his son about his competition Wednesday morning. They talk often about competition.

Luke Del Rio has preserved through several challenges. He initially walked on at Alabama, then he went to Oregon State before ending up at Florida. He has also already graduated and he is working on his masters.

"I'm just proud of his him for working so hard and becoming such a good, young man," Del Rio said of his son. "That stuff is more important than anything."

Luke Del Rio told his father — who played linebacker in the NFL for 11 seasons — that he wanted to be a quarterback while in the eighth grade, when Del Rio was the head coach of the Jacksonville Jaguars. Del Rio told his son, who was playing outside linebacker then, to follow his dreams, but it may mean sitting for a while and competing.

"But he followed through on it and I couldn't be prouder," Del Rio said. "He's shown great character and has grown and been relentless and persistent, following his dreams. That's all I can ask for."

Just Win, Baby: Jack Del Rio's Quest to Bring a Championship Home to Oakland

By Katie Baker

September 6, 2017

The 1970s were a rad time to be a sports fan in the East Bay. The mustachioed Oakland A's won back-to-back-to-back World Series titles from 1972 to 1974 with Catfish Hunter and Rollie Fingers on the mound. The Golden State Warriors posted winning records for seven straight seasons and, with Rick Barry on the court and a 30-something Brent Musburger on the CBS call, swept the NBA Finals in 1975. Coach John Madden, quarterback Ken Stabler, and the rest of the 1976 Oakland Raiders capped off a 13-1 season with a 32-14 win over the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl XI, the first of three titles they'd capture in a span of eight years. And in the fall of 1977, a near-mythical creature with feathered blond hair and tree-trunk thighs named Jack Del Rio entered his freshman year at Hayward High.

Talk to enough folks who knew Del Rio, now the head coach of the Oakland Raiders, back when he roamed the hillsides and hallways of Hayward, and a sort of teenaged, Pacific coast, tri-varsity version of Paul Bunyan begins to emerge. "He was very identifiable as a physical specimen," says Gary Clark, Del Rio's football coach in those days. "Even at a young age, he was 6-2, had good speed, and was still growing." Don Wakamatsu, a classmate and three-sport teammate of Del Rio's since childhood who was no slouch himself—he went on to play pro baseball, manage the Seattle Mariners, and join the Kansas City Royals as bench coach—remembers Del Rio's high school hoops career with awe: "He was a linebacker playing point guard," Wakamatsu says. "He could dribble, he could shoot—he couldn't really jump." (Even heroes have flaws.)

According to former Hayward basketball coach Charley Kendall, Del Rio and Wakamatsu were part of a standout squad that averaged 93 points per game one season—and that was before the introduction of the 3-point line. And Del Rio's dominance continued into spring sports. "One time in the playoffs," says Jim Bisenius, then the Hayward baseball coach, "I gave him the ball, and he said, 'What's that for?'" Typically, Del Rio played catcher. "I said, 'Pitch today,' and he proceeded to strike out 16 batters."

Del Rio was drafted in the 22nd round by the Toronto Blue Jays out of high school, recruited by Stanford for basketball (according to Kendall), and wound up enrolling at USC, where he played baseball and football. (The basketball coach was interested, too, Kendall says, but juggling three sports in college was too much for even Del Rio to pull off.) In his time on the Trojans baseball team, Del Rio drove in a run off Fernando Valenzuela during an exhibition game against the L.A. Dodgers; he was also hit by a fastball his USC teammate Randy Johnson threw, a pitch that shattered Del Rio's cup and left him rolling around on the ground in torment. (Del Rio not only recovered to finish the game, but went on to father four children.) And in his final football game at USC, a 20-17 Rose Bowl victory over Ohio State, Del Rio helped shut down college football's top rusher, the Buckeyes' Keith Byars, and was named co-MVP for his trouble.

"He was a coach's dream," raves Clark. "He was All-Everything," gushes Bisenius. "I was always ultra-competitive," says Del Rio, speaking by phone in late August before an Oakland Raiders preseason practice, and delivering a self-assessment that could certainly earn him first-team All-Understatement honors. "I really loved playing whatever sport was in season."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

In 2015, after spending 11 years as an NFL linebacker, winning the Super Bowl as a position coach with the Baltimore Ravens, serving as head coach of the Jacksonville Jaguars for the better part of nine seasons, and working in various capacities on the staffs of three other NFL teams, Del Rio took over as head coach of the Raiders—a fitting homecoming for a local athletic legend who grew up just more than 10 miles south of the Coliseum. And in his first couple seasons with the Raiders, Del Rio has pushed his team to embody the old East Bay athletic greatness that he grew up enjoying firsthand.

He asks Oakland rookies to research old Raiders greats and present their findings to the rest of the team during training camp. Many of the tweets on his brash Twitter account are hashtagged #ReturnToGreatness. “I didn’t take this job, second time around as head coach, and return to the area that I was raised in,” says Del Rio, “just to come back and be average. The idea was to come back and bring that old [Raiders] slogan of ‘Commitment to Excellence’—bring that back to life.”

Last season, Del Rio’s second in Oakland, he took a major step toward achieving that goal, coaching the Raiders to a playoff berth thanks to a 12–4 record that was their best showing since the 2000 season. Led by then-25-year-old quarterback Derek Carr, who has emerged as one of the NFL’s most promising young talents, and Carr’s good buddy Khalil Mack, a top pass rusher who has recorded 26 total sacks in his past two seasons and is the reigning Defensive Player of the Year, the 2016 Raiders took the league by high-scoring storm—at least until a broken fibula on Christmas Eve ended Carr’s campaign and torpedoed the team’s chance for postseason success.

Now, the Raiders enter the 2017 season facing a challenge more difficult than any they’ve confronted in years: not only matching last year’s success, but topping it—and this time without the benefit of surprise. The team has supplemented its ranks with walking Rorschach test Marshawn Lynch, fresh off a year-long sabbatical and already back to his unequaled old ways, and a new assistant head coach, John Pagano, whose mandate is to clean up the team’s oddly sloppy defensive unit. At the same time, though, the franchise will be playing a difficult schedule in a stacked AFC West with no clear weakest link. And no matter how much they try to downplay it, the Raiders will be shouldering the baggage of a looming relocation from Oakland to Las Vegas, a situation many messy years in the making and one that gives the next few seasons in Alameda County even greater urgency. Del Rio chooses to have selective vision as he looks ahead. “The bottom line is to embrace the legacy of the great players and teams that have come before us, and create our own,” says Del Rio. “But you can’t fit all those words in a hashtag.”

On the second-to-last day of Raiders training camp, up in the heart (and heat) of California wine country, a security guard chats with a fan about what things will be like in the Raiders’ new Las Vegas home: lots of opposing fans in the stands, probably, making a Sin City vacation out of each game. But all that is in the future, however not-so-distant it may be; a few yards away is where the here and now unfolds. Del Rio paces the sideline of one of the practice fields, looking like a mix between Shooter McGavin, Cap Rooney, and an ox.

At the far end of one field, Raiders punter Marquette King catches tennis balls shot from a machine and sets them down, again and again, as placeholding practice. Carr yells out “that’s my fault!” to wide receiver Amari Cooper after misfiring a pass. A loud argument erupts between linebacker Bruce Irvin and defensive end Mario Edwards Jr. and is coolly diffused by Mack; Irvin will later complain about the beat writers who tweeted about witnessing the skirmish. And on the other side of some hedges, smoke hangs in the air as Guy Fieri presides over a batch of rotisserie chickens for the players—220 dripping birds will be prepared by the end of the day—spinning over a large bed of coals hitched to the back of a truck. Fieri also cooked at Raiders training camp last season, but this time the buzz is different. As Del Rio put it, he and the team are no longer aiming for average.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

In early 2015, when Del Rio left his role as Denver Broncos defensive coordinator to take the Raiders' top job, even average felt like an impossible dream for an Oakland team long defined by futility. When the late, irate Raiders owner Al Davis applied for a trademark on the words "Commitment to Excellence" on January 11, 2002, the Tuck Rule loss to the New England Patriots was eight days away and a blowout defeat to Jon Gruden's Tampa Bay Buccaneers in Super Bowl XXXVII was a year ahead on the horizon. But those painful setbacks were nothing compared to the decade-plus of abject dysfunction that followed. "Commitment to Excellence" eventually seemed like a sick joke; the far more apt descriptor of the Oakland Raiders was another phrase trademarked by Davis, one meant to describe the rowdy section of seats behind the end zone filled with body-painted, skull-and-spike-wearing fans: "The Black Hole."

Standing outside the Raiders' training camp fields, with his own spiky white hair and his black T-shirt featuring a chef's-hat-clad skull surrounded by the words "Knuckle Sandwich," the name of Fieri's corporate entity, the Food Network star looks like he could seamlessly slip into a seat in the Black Hole. "Yeah, you think that's a coincidence?" says Fieri, who grew up in Northern California and has been a Raiders fan for a long, grim while.

From 2003 to 2014, the Raiders put up a 56-136 record, never finished any better than third in the AFC West, played in an increasingly decrepit stadium, and cycled through eight different head coaches. "The dumbest team in America in terms of playing the game," is how one of those coaches, Bill Callahan, described the Raiders in 2003. "I'm pissed off at that football team," ranted another, Hue Jackson, after a loss on New Year's Day 2012. "This is a joke." When Tony Sparano took over the team from Dennis Allen in 2014 after an 0-4 start, he tried out an old Bill Belichick gimmick, burying a football in an effort to cleanse the team from the demons of its past. But this funeral ceremony failed to spark the championship run that it had in New England; instead, the Raiders finished the season 3-13. (To be fair to Sparano, he wasn't the only one who had tried a performative schtick in his first year with a franchise and failed: In Del Rio's first season in Jacksonville, a motivational stunt involving a tree stump and an ax in the locker room ended the season of the team's Pro Bowl punter.)

It may not have felt like it during the Allen-Sparano era, but by then the Raiders were actually beginning, however slowly, to veer back toward being on track. In 2012, former Raiders linebacker and Packers director of football operations Reggie McKenzie left Green Bay for the general manager job in Oakland, and set to work on a medium-term strategic rebuilding plan that involved ruthlessly clearing out old contracts to free up cap space, stockpiling draft picks, and assembling a solid offensive line. It wasn't necessarily a smooth process; McKenzie's initial head coach hire, Allen, compiled an 8-28 record before getting the boot for an interim Sparano, who didn't fare much better. But at least for the first time in a while there appeared to be a method to the sadness surrounding the team.

In the 2014 draft, Oakland took Mack in the first round and Carr in the second. After that 3-13 season, the Raiders hired Del Rio and drafted Cooper fourth overall. In Del Rio's first season, Mack increased his sack total from four to 15, Cooper caught six touchdowns, and Carr's quarterback rating improved from 76.6 to 91.1. Now, as McKenzie poses for a photo with Fieri, two man-tanks grinning over rows of rotating meat, the Oakland Raiders are considered AFC contenders once more. Of course, this being the Raiders, there's a catch: They won't be playing in Oakland for very long. Following years of negotiations, demands, competing proposals, votes, protests, and temporary feints toward San Antonio and Los Angeles (and Sheldon Adelson's wallet), the Raiders' move to Las Vegas all became for-real-for-real earlier this spring.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Mercifully, however, when a report regarding the Raiders came out of Las Vegas during training camp, it had nothing to do with the status of the team's planned Sin City arena. According to ESPN, the lure of 20-1 opening odds on an Oakland Super Bowl win had drawn a higher volume of bets on the Raiders than on any other NFL team, and not by a small margin. And while the frivolities of degenerate gamblers with cash to burn may not mean anything in the grand scheme of things, it was a reminder of just how many extra sets of eyes will be on the Raiders this season.

Practice ends, and Lynch, in a black Beast Mode hoodie and headphones propped up like mouse ears, ambles over to Fieri with a big smile on his face. "Man," Lynch yells, "you out here burning shit up!" The two chat about a restaurant that Lynch, who grew up in Oakland, is taking over in nearby Emeryville; Fieri tells him he'll come visit, and that they ought to at some point shoot an Oakland-based episode of "Triple-D," Fieri-speak for his addictive TV show, Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives. Fieri shows Lynch the rotisserie setup, and concludes proudly: "That's Flavortown all day!" The late Al Davis certainly would have appreciated Fieri's way with trademarked slogans.

If last season was an unexpected coming-out party for Oakland, this year's vibe will probably be more like that rager that all kinds of randos come out of the woodwork looking to crash. No one — not opposing teams, not longtime fans — will be taking the Raiders lightly this time around. And Del Rio knows that in football, the attention often falls primarily on two people: the quarterback and the head coach.

"We've got an outstanding relationship," Del Rio says about Carr and himself. "It's something I take a lot of pride in. I think it's important to be on the same page, because we're the two guys that have the won-loss record attached to our names; we're the two guys that are going to be in front of the media all the time." Carr is no stranger to the camera: Ever since he was a kinda-pudgy little football nerd of a kid who doted upon his older brother David, he was giving interviews on live TV. And while Carr has expressed very public relief that his rowdy early-college years didn't get the exposure of his 2014 draft-mate Johnny Manziel, he's also been more than willing to talk about them. (After Carr told Peter King in December that he'd like to help Manziel, the troubled QB said he'd take Carr up on the offer.) More recently, Carr donned fringed stonewashed denim and teased a music video that turned out to be some sort of viral advertising for a California credit union.

Carr is one of a number of players whose creativity Del Rio and his coaching staff seek to empower. While they stress that it's important to play disciplined football, "you never want to over-coach a guy with great instincts," Pagano, the newly hired assistant head coach, says during training camp. (In this case, he's talking less about Carr's hair-band wardrobe and more about safety Shalom Luani, a raw but intriguing seventh-round pick best known in his home country of American Samoa for his scoring touch on its national soccer team.) "It's my first year here," says linebacker IK Enemkpali, "and I can tell they're real big on being playmakers, making the big plays. They really harp on that, even in meetings. They really don't care about practice film, but they really care about games: 'You gotta make the big plays.'" (No word on whether breaking Geno Smith's jaw counted as such.) "Our coaching staff, obviously, they have to correct some things," says Carr, "but they're always going to let you know what you did well."

Last season, Del Rio also showed that he was serious about being bold. In the final minute of the season opener on the road in New Orleans, after Carr had driven 75 yards for a touchdown score that put the Raiders down one point, Del Rio went not for the extra point to tie but rather for two and the lead. ("A rare kind of decision," wrote The Ringer's Danny Kelly, "one that defied both conventional and statistical wisdom.") Carr found Michael Crabtree in the end zone, the Saints failed to convert a desperation 61-yard field goal in the game's closing seconds, and the Raiders opened the season 1-0 and set the tone immediately for the kind of team they were striving to be. When ESPN's Stats & Info division pointed out that going for two gave the Raiders less of a statistical chance to win than kicking the extra point would have, Del Rio fired back: "Good thing ESPN isn't coaching the Raiders."

"The games are so close in the National Football League," says Del Rio, "and each Sunday you're going to see the majority of the games come down to the last possession. ... Whatever I believe is the best thing to do for us to win, that gives us the best probability to win, the best chance, then I have to have the courage to do that. And to me, it was really clear. I went down before the drive even started, and told Derek: 'This is what we're doing, we're gonna take this ball, we're gonna go down the field, we're gonna score, and when we do, we're gonna go for two and win the game right here, and right now.'"

But if the Saints game was a heady victory for the Raiders, the final score (35–34) also portended one of the significant issues that continues to plague the team: its porous and frequently disheveled defense. Mack's defensive play was a noteworthy bright spot for the team last season, and entering 2017 Carr blew up his good buddy's spot when he half-jokingly reupped a prediction that, if officials called holding as they should, Mack could record 30 sacks. (The current NFL record, held by Michael Strahan, is 22.5.) Still, given the backgrounds of Del Rio, McKenzie, and defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr., all of whom played linebacker—Norton and Del Rio were teammates on the Dallas Cowboys back in the day—it's particularly troubling that the defensive corps remains an area of such concern.

Last year, the Raiders gave up more than 24 points a game to opponents, and were one of seven NFL teams to allow more than 6,000 yards. They were 22nd in defensive DVOA. When it came to 25-plus-yard passing plays, Oakland yielded the most in the league. Were it not for a high-octane offense that averaged 26 points, the already-glaring defensive flaws could have doomed the Raiders. (According to Football Outsiders, the 12–4 Raiders had a point differential typically more indicative of a 9–7 team.) The Raiders did address some defensive issues in the draft, selecting five defensive players with their first six picks, but they were curiously quiet in free agency. Norton kept his job after his defense's performance, but the Raiders fired defensive backs coach Marcus Robertson and added Pagano, the former defensive coordinator for the Chargers, in an oversight role where he will seek to improve the team's communication. "We call it Raider Talk," Pagano said during a training camp press conference. "Don't go out of the realm and start talking some other language that nobody quite understands."

Here's some language that everyone can understand: homemade banana nut bread. It's the evening of a preseason game between the Raiders and the Los Angeles Rams, and on the anti-scenic concrete walkway leading Raiders fans from the BART stop near Oakland Coliseum to the brutalist building itself, a man sells bottled water alongside his baked goods. It's one of many similarly low-budget, unphotogenic, but made-with-love displays to be found all around the long-beleaguered venue. "They won't have that in Vegas," says a guy walking by in a Sebastian Janikowski jersey, with a bitter edge to his voice. (The actual Seabass has, incredibly, been the Raiders kicker for going on 17 seasons; he's seen it all.)

Del Rio may be striving to connect today's Raiders with their historical predecessors, but not all nods to the past are welcome ones. Just as Al Davis moved the team south to Los Angeles for 13 seasons before returning to Oakland, his son Mark, who inherited the Raiders when his father died in 2011, will preside over the Las Vegas move.

Still, when Mark Davis walks through the tunnel and onto the Coliseum field about an hour before game time, his Lloyd Christmas haircut hidden beneath a white hat that matches his white jeans, white Nikes, and white sports coat, Raiders fans nevertheless hang down over the railing hoping to get his autograph. When one of them offers up a Sharpie that isn't silver or black, Davis seems genuinely dismayed. "Blue?!" he asks, but signs anyway.

For a preseason game in which the team's top players aren't expected to see too much playing time, the Raiders-Rams contest has some memorable moments. For the second week in a row, Lynch sits down during the national anthem. Asked after the first preseason game about Lynch's gesture, Del Rio's response was telling. Del Rio has never really hidden his own ideological perspectives; let's just say that a few months back, he sent a tweet sticking up for Sean Hannity's pursuit of the Seth Rich story. But he's also smart enough to know not to antagonize his new player, or to rile up the media wolves with a particularly strong statement either way. Del Rio told reporters that he'd asked Lynch about the decision, and that Lynch had told him not to read too far into it—that it was something he'd done for years, and was "not a form of anything other than me being myself." Del Rio told media that he told Lynch: "So you understand how I feel, I very strongly believe in standing for the national anthem, but I will respect you as a man. You do your thing."

When I ask on the final day of training camp whether Del Rio really does give his players the freedom to be themselves, Lynch says, "Yeah," then elaborates, kind of, by changing the subject to a Raiders offensive scheme: "Because on [the play] doctor-24," Lynch says, "it's a designed way that you're supposed to run it, but I have all freedom to go any way that I choose to run it. I would say yes."

At any rate, Lynch takes only a couple of carries against the Rams before being shut down for the night, but on one of those touches, he nearly breaks free for a long run, and the crowd's delight is so pure that Carr later says he couldn't hear and felt like he was playing on the road. "I didn't want to quiet the crowd," Carr tells reporters, "because they might get mad at me." (On the other hand, if they didn't get mad at him back when his "mentor," Christian metal band lead singer Mattie Montgomery, called the Black Hole a hub of "lost souls" that Carr could redeem, perhaps they never will?) The defense is, once again, "poor," as Del Rio later says in his postgame remarks, but Mack does manage to pick up a big sack on Rams quarterback Jared Goff. In his limited minutes, Carr hits Cooper, Crabtree, and tight ends Lee Smith and Jared Cook with crisp passes, and while he also throws an interception, he leaves the game in a great mood.

Asked in the locker room after the game about his own national anthem gesture—a hand on Mack's back—Carr becomes unabashedly corny, his truest self. His answer includes the following words and phrases: "loving," "love," "we're best friends and we love one another," "I love our country more than anything," "we're free to show each other that we love one another," "I love everybody," and "all I'm trying to do is show these kids that I love everybody, and all Khalil is trying to do is show these kids that he loves everybody."

When a reporter asks him about throwing a touchdown to Smith, Carr says: "I love him like a brother. We'll be 50 years old someday, sitting down together, talking about that." Presumably, Raiders fans hope that by the end of this season they'll have accumulated some better, bigger memories than a preseason touchdown to one day reminisce about.

In a pair of Sports Illustrated interviews this spring, Del Rio explained why he doesn't want to dwell on the Vegas move: For one thing, he told Peter King, a good 30 percent of a football team turns over year after year, and the move could be as many as three years away. And, as he explained to Jenny Vrentas, no one knows better than him the impact that the move will have on the people of Alameda County—which means that no one knows better than him how to best mitigate it: by winning, now. "These are my people," he told Vrentas, relaying his message to the team. "These are my family and friends, and I'm telling you what I need. We are going to give our very best to where we are, and that's where we are here and now.” In January, Del Rio honored some of “his people.” At a San Francisco event called the Coaching Corps Game Changer Awards, in which local sports figures are asked to single out a formative leader to give thanks to, Del Rio couldn’t choose, so he paid tribute to the entire gamut of his Hayward coaches. Bisenius, Del Rio’s old baseball coach, chuckles that, ever the multi-sport enthusiast, Del Rio most conspicuously geeked out over Golden State Warrior Draymond Green’s attendance at the ceremony.

Del Rio’s time in Hayward High may be the stuff of legend, but he’s not the only Del Rio whose reputation sounds borderline fictional. Tony Del Rio, his dad’s late cousin, who Jack called “Uncle,” was “one of the most badass high school football guys ever at Hayward,” says Kendall, the former basketball coach. “The Del Rio family was notorious in our area,” recalls Clark. Tony and his brother Wayne were huge guys who ran an auto body shop, painted and raced some remarkably sweet cars, and took on other employment on the side: Tony was, for a time, the personal bodyguard to the Oakland A’s Reggie Jackson, himself a car enthusiast, and according to an old local newspaper called The Argus, he also supplied occasional protection to Rocky Marciano and Evel Knievel. (“Del Rio carries no weapons and is not a student of the martial arts,” The Argus wrote, quoting Tony: “If I can’t handle them with my fists, I don’t want to handle them at all.”)

“A lot of credit goes to [Jack’s] dad,” says Kendall. “In those days, most of the dads would come up and say, ‘Hey, if my kid screws up in practice, you kick his butt, and when he gets home, I’ll kick it.’” He laughs. “By the end of my career, it was more like, ‘Hey, don’t yell at my kid! He’s a D-I athlete!’ and it’s the 12th man on your team.”

Jack Del Rio Sr. was, and remains, an enormous Oakland Raiders fan, just like so many of the people Del Rio grew up knowing and loving. And while there’s a bittersweetness to the idea that the Raiders might finally make a comeback just as they’re about to go away, Del Rio knows that the best way to honor the team’s local legacy is to live out that “Commitment to Excellence” — to “just win, baby!” as Davis liked to say. “We just want to have that aggressive mentality, that aggressive mind-set,” says Del Rio, even if he knows his team has a whole lot of work ahead to have even an outside shot of such poignant success.

No matter what happens, Del Rio will always be beloved in Alameda County, spoken about in hushed, admiring tones. But if Del Rio and the Raiders can finish the party they started, if they can get anywhere close to a true #ReturnToGreatness, if they can leave the Bay Area on their own terms — well, it’ll make all those Bunyanesque high school tales look like mere child’s play.

Offensive Coordinator Todd Downing

Todd Downing's unique path could help Raiders reach ultimate goal

By Bill Williamson

August 7, 2017

Todd Downing was 19 years old and he was working for the Minnesota Vikings. Sure beats working the cash register at the corner convenience store.

Man, did he have something to brag about while going to night school at the University of Minnesota.

Fresh out of nearby Eden Prairie High school, where he was a quarterback under Mike Grant, the son of Vikings' legendary former coach Bud Grant, Downing's initial duties for the Purple was to drive around the grandchildren of then-team owner Red McCombs on game weekends.

"I was 19 and thrilled to be part of pro football, that's what I always wanted to do," Downing told FanRag Sports from the Oakland Raiders' training camp. "I just wanted to work hard and show my value to the organization any way I could."

It was the beginning of a unique, wild journey that has resulted in a half of a lifetime to a surreal opportunity. At age 37, Downing is beginning his role as the offensive coordinator of the Oakland Raiders. He was promoted from quarterback coach in January to lead one of the most dynamic offenses in the NFL.

The Raiders surprisingly fired Bill Musgrave as offensive coordinator after he led the 12-4 to the No. 6 offense in the NFL. Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio felt he needed to make the move because he was going to lose Downing to another franchise. Downing was getting big interest elsewhere as an offensive coordinator.

So, Del Rio got proactive and kept his rising star to himself. No one would have ever predicted this path 18 years ago for the red-haired kid known for his work ethic and easy way with people.

Downing admits he bristles when he is described as a "young coach." Yes, he may be on the young side for a coach in his position, but he's been through the NFL ringer, even though in an unconventional way.

"I've lived 18 years in dog years, bro," Downing said with a laugh. "I'm 37, but this is my 18th NFL training camp ... My journey has been unique, that's for sure."

In 2000, at the age of 20, Downing saw an expanded role with the Vikings when he became a public relations intern. His duties included getting players for interviews with the media, transcribing interviews and handing out information sheets to Vikings beat reporters. Downing was well liked within the organization and many thought he had a future as a PR man in the league.

"Todd did a great job at the Vikings and always did more than was asked of him," longtime Vikings PR director Bob Hagan recalled. "He was very innovative and came up with many new ideas. We wanted to keep him in the PR department but Mike Tice wanted him to work with the coaches and the rest is history.”

Looking back, Downing said he would have been happy and would have fully embraced whatever path the Vikings wanted him to take. If that meant he would now be a 37-year-old operations executive for his hometown team, he would have been happy. But the reality was that Downing always wanted to coach. He could have continued his playing career at the Division III level after high school, but he knew his playing ceiling was low. What he really wanted do was coach. He helped with the ninth-grade team at his alma mater, Eden Prairie, a traditional Minnesota powerhouse.

“Xs and Os has always been my passion,” Downing said. “While I was fully open to helping the Vikings in any capacity that it gave them value, I always wanted to be a coach. Still, I know the road was not an easy one.”

Downing became close with Mike Tice, who was promoted from offensive line coach to head coach in Minnesota after the late Dennis Green was fired early in 2002. Downing would drive Tice around training camp. Tice asked Downing what he had envisioned for the future and Downing said he wanted to be a coach. So, the next year, Tice moved him to the coaching staff. He was first a football systems analyst and then promoted to offensive quality control coach in 2005 at the age of 25.

Tice and Downing stayed close after Tice was fired in Minnesota after the 2005 season and went back to his roots as an assistant coach. Tice helped bring Downing to Oakland as quarterback coach in 2015 as part of Jack Del Rio’s new staff.

Downing impressed both Tice and former Rams head coach Scott Linehan while in Minnesota. Linehan was the Vikings’ offensive coordinator when Downing was breaking in.

When Linehan was hired in St. Louis, he took Downing with him when Downing was 25. Downing was a defensive and special team’s assistant and then defensive quality control coach with the Rams. When Linehan was fired in 2009, he went to Detroit for four years as passing game coordinator. He took Downing with him again. Downing was an offensive quality control coach and then assistant quarterback coach before getting his first, significant NFL coaching job as the Lions quarterback coach at the age of 30. He kept that job for three seasons and then went to Buffalo after a coaching change in 2014, before finally arriving in Oakland at the age of 34.

He was presented with this golden opportunity to be the Raiders offensive coordinator at 36, 17 years after he entered the league as a basically a chauffeur.

Downing is now Tice’s boss, essentially. And Tice couldn’t be more proud. He has seen amazing growth by Downing and he said he possesses special coaching gifts.

“He has always been extremely efficient and detailed,” Tice said of his protégée. “He has always tried to do things like reports, film cut-ups and presentations better than they have ever been done before.”

As Downing begins this new chapter in his career, he has full support in Oakland. He and Carr instantly became close when he was hired as quarterbacks coach two and a half years ago after Carr’s rookie season. Carr is thrilled to have Downing at the helm of the offense now.

“He cares about every relationship that he has,” Carr said told reporters during the offseason. “So he’s not ever going to be someone that you don’t think has your back out there ... For players to know that when your coordinator has your back no matter what every time you step on that field. If you make a mistake he's got your back. He's going to try to help you get better at it."

Downing, considered by many in the NFL as someone who could get head-coaching offers in the next two years or so, is not taking this opportunity for did not granted, nor is he taking for granted the road he took.

"I've kept my head down and tried to get in position for more and more responsibility, whatever that may be," Downing said. "Now that I'm here in this position, I feel like I've taken the necessary steps in my career to be successful at it."

From driving the owner's kids to driving Carr's offense, indeed, Downing's NFL story has been an unusual one.

Raiders' OC Todd Downing steadily rises up coaching ranks

By Michael Gehlken

August 24, 2017

ALAMEDA, Calif. — A visitor stood outside the Raiders' locker room on Aug. 12, minutes after the team entered it following an exhibition loss to the Arizona Cardinals. The 33-year-old man waited in silence. He did not appear in a rush, patient to see an old friend.

Finally, offensive coordinator Todd Downing emerged.

Cardinals star wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald's face lit up.

"He's going to be a head coach someday," Fitzgerald said afterward. "That's what I hope for him. The guy is an unbelievable human being."

Downing steadily has risen up the NFL ranks, having coached for five franchises since 2001. This year marks his first as a play-caller. A constant throughout his career is a knack for developing strong relationships. It's not all about football to him, an approach that was on display last Saturday.

Jamize Olawale didn't know it was coming.

The fullback was standing on the sideline for the pregame national anthem of the team's second exhibition versus the Los Angeles Rams. That is when Downing placed his right hand on the back of Olawale's jersey.

Downing did so knowing that quarterback Derek Carr and defensive end Khalil Mack were participating in the same display to promote racial solidarity.

Otherwise, it was "not planned at all," he said.

"I kind of chuckled when talking to Jamize about it afterward," Downing said. "I think I surprised him a little bit. I knew other guys were going to show their unity. It certainly wasn't a protest or statement or anything like that. It's just kind of a reaction myself to seeing what we have going on as a team. It's such a great unity and chemistry.

"When you see guys like Derek and Khalil doing it, I look over, and there was 'Maze,' a guy who works his tail off for us, gets no credit from anybody ... and beyond that is a great person. I just walked over and put my hand on him. It wasn't anything more than showing he's a guy I love."

Downing has a close relationship with Carr.

Beginning in 2015, he spent two seasons as his position coach. They keep in touch away from the facility, be it to discuss football or matters unrelated to the sport. Rapport is important between any quarterback and coordinator. Theirs has evolved to the point where they routinely know what the other is thinking, often able to finish each other's sentences, both have said.

Downing, 37, received his NFL start as a Minnesota Vikings assistant from 2001 to 2005.

He developed a friendship there with Fitzgerald, a fellow Minnesota native and a Vikings ballboy in 2001. He also grew close with then-head coach Mike Tice. Tice now oversees the Raiders' offensive line, having joined Oakland's staff shortly before Downing came aboard in 2015. Downing coached with the Detroit Lions from 2009 to 2013. Retired Lions wide receiver Calvin Johnson visited the Raiders for a week during the spring as a guest of his.

The trend is clear.

This month, Fitzgerald spoke with Downing for a couple minutes. They talked golf and caught up on personal matters before wishing each other luck in the 2017 season. Downing never coached him, but Fitzgerald seems confident in what the Raiders have on the sideline.

"The thing about him is his temperament, his football IQ and his love for the players – I know him and Derek's rapport is off the charts," Fitzgerald said. "If you have that kind of connection with your players and that kind of rapport with your players, only good things can happen."

Assistant Head Coach – Defense John Pagano

LAS VEGAS REVIEW-JOURNAL

John Pagano feeling at home among Raiders' football family

By Michael Gehlken

August 17, 2017

NAPA, Calif. – John Pagano was about 7 the day he learned to tackle.

The lesson came at a football camp he attended at Fairview High School, whose campus sits just east of Viele Lake in Boulder, Colorado. An assistant to his father Sam, the school's varsity football coach, instructed him through the basic aspects of tackling that John's older brother Chuck himself received years earlier.

Keep your head up. Grab cloth. Drive your legs.

Such words echoed throughout his youth as a member of a football family.

"I can actually see myself on that field now," Pagano said.

Pagano grew up talking football. That is his specialty now. The Raiders' assistant head coach-defense joined the staff in January with a main objective to improve the communication in the team's secondary. Pagano seems to have acclimated well: By all accounts, the club has made progress in that department, further along today than at this stage last offseason.

Pagano would be the first to deflect credit.

And certainly, one man should not be the recipient of it all. This is a group of defensive backs with many young and new pieces, and they are building off a 2016 season in which they largely began to play beside one another. Still, there have been strides in a process that Pagano is focused on catalyzing.

Take last week.

The final play of a Thursday practice saw quarterback Derek Carr look left and throw a pass he felt had a clear path to his receiver. But veteran cornerback T.J. Carrie anticipated the play, stepping in front for an interception that he returned for a touchdown.

Carr threw similar passes in practice last year with a different ending.

"He wouldn't have jumped that last year," Carr said. "They're recognizing things faster, and that's why I just dropped back and threw it. They wouldn't recognize it that quick. They wouldn't be on top of their stuff. Sometimes we'd catch them slipping, miscommunicating and then we'd go. And that's just them learning how to play together. That's us on offense. When we would start slow, it was because, 'Oh, you said this,' or, 'Oh, I thought you meant this.' Well, now we know each other. We've played games with each other. Same thing with those guys.

"They communicate. They talk. They're always together, always communicating."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Sam Pagano, John's father, coached for 21 years at Fairview.

His student-athletes in that span includes his two sons, both of whom now coach in the NFL. Chuck, 56, is entering his sixth season as coach of the Indianapolis Colts. John, 50, worked his way up the then-San Diego Chargers staff from 2002 to 2016, starting as a quality control coach and ending with a five-season tenure as defensive coordinator.

Pagano's background is a familiar one across the Raiders organization.

Here, football is a family affair.

Owner Mark Davis grew up around the franchise before assuming its reins from his father Al. General Manager Reggie McKenzie and twin brother Raleigh are both on staff; Raleigh is an area scout. Reggie has one son, Kahlil, who is a junior defensive tackle at Tennessee and another, Jalen, who is a four-star commit to Southern California as an offensive lineman. Coach Jack Del Rio's son Luke is a quarterback at the University of Florida. Both McKenzie and Del Rio were NFL linebackers.

There are other examples across the club of those who grew up speaking Pagano's language.

"Being a new guy, you go through the process of learning how things are done," Pagano said. "I'm a football coach coming from a football family. You fit right in. It's about football. It's an atmosphere of that here, and you can see that. I learned a lot from my dad and my brother. I try to take those qualities and those traits and pass them on."

Pagano can talk football.

But his first order of business as a Raiders coach this offseason, he said, was to listen.

He wanted to process how Del Rio and the staff operated. He wanted to understand the team's personnel, evaluating the team's talent with a relatively fresh pair of eyes. And then, he worked to ensure everyone in the organization was communicating the same. Coaches had to be on the same page with other coaches, so they could all communicate the same message to players. Without that, players could not be expected to communicate effectively between each other.

The Raiders were encouraged with their first preseason test.

On Saturday against the Cardinals, aside from the occasional mid-August mental lapse, Del Rio said the communication was "much improved" on the back end. Last year's defense allowed an NFL-high 38 passes of at least 25 yards.

Said cornerback David Amerson of Pagano: "He brings an extra genius mind, someone with a different outlook compared to what we've had the past two or three years. A whole 'nother mindset."

A mindset years in the making.

LB NaVorro Bowman

Addition of NaVorro Bowman Already Paying Big Dividends For Raiders Both On And Off The Field

By Eddie Paskal

October 25, 2017

In addition to adding a little much-needed depth to the team's linebacking corps, the Oakland Raiders signed NaVorro Bowman to add some instant credibility to a group that was admittedly quite green.

With three Pro Bowls, four All-Pro designations, and a Super Bowl appearance to his name, Bowman is a legitimate middle linebacker; a player whose presence on the Raiders roster was felt immediately both on and off the field.

"We have a legit leader now, somebody that can teach us the ropes, and help us young linebackers learn a lot," said rookie linebacker Marquel Lee. "That's what I plan to do. I know other guys are going to learn a lot. He's a good learning tool, and a good guy on game day who can just let it rip. Last game he had a big game for us, and I'm excited."

And to call Bowman's debut as a Raider "big", might just be a tad on the conservative side. The former San Francisco 49er not only played every defensive snap save two, he led the Raiders with 11 tackles, also adding a tackle for loss and a quarterback hit.

Oh, and he did all this just three days after signing with the team.

"Yeah, that's pretty impressive," Lee said about Bowman's performance on such short notice. "I was impressed by that. He's a veteran guy, class act, came in, went to work right away. No excuses, none at all, just got to work."

"I was just being me," Bowman said. "Coming in and just showing the guys I'm a complete football player, I love this game, and that you can count on me, and I let everything else take care of itself. As far as guys looking up to me, or noticing what I do as a leader, I let that take care of itself, but as long as you execute your job, and play well, guys are going to respect you."

Regardless of how you slice it, Bowman's performance was impressive, and a perfect example of why he's been one of the most-productive linebackers in the game since he was drafted in 2010.

Bowman said Tuesday that he loves a good challenge, and coming into a new team, and learning a playbook on incredibly short notice is about as big of a challenge as you can mock up – even for a veteran linebacker like No. 53.

"I love challenges, and I felt like last week was a challenge for me personally, and a risk for the Raiders to take with putting me out there so fast," Bowman explained. "I didn't want to let them down, and I also wanted to step up to the challenge. With me having this full week of preparation, I look to just getting better at the calls, at the defense, and seeing if I can improve my game on Sunday."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

And Bowman and the Raiders defense will have its hands full come Sunday when they travel to Upstate New York to take on a resurgent Buffalo Bills offense led by LeSean McCoy, a player that Head Coach Del Rio believes is one of the best in the game.

“LeSean always challenges you on how hard of a tackle he is,” Bowman said. “I know a lot about him; I know exactly what they can do. We as a defense, we just have to keep that in mind, but not let that get away from who we are and how we play defense.”

While Marquel Lee hasn’t yet been able to take the field with Bowman – he was unable to play against the Chiefs while he recovered from an ankle injury – he was still able to learn a lot from watching the veteran linebacker go to work.

“I took it how I could, in the most positive way,” Lee explained. “Just trying to learn, seeing him, asking him questions coming off the sidelines, trying to see what he sees, and learn what he’s looking at, and deciphering offenses, and things of that nature. I appreciated that time I was on the bench, because I got to sit there and learn, and watch and learn, and take it all in.”

And as good of a teacher as Bowman can be, Lee also thinks that Bowman’s presence alone is a benefit to the Raiders defense, just as the team hoped when they signed him.

“We see him going out there and balling out, and everybody wants to make plays,” Lee said. “Any emotion is contagious, I feel like, so if he’s riled up and ready to go, I feel like all of us get behind him, and everybody will start making plays.”

Raiders push Derek Carr to reach next level, guide breakthrough

By Jerrett Bell

June 13, 2017

ALAMEDA, Calif. — Derek Carr sounds like a man fueled by unfinished business.

This is what tends to happen when a magical season turns into a nightmare, as was the case when the emerging quarterback suffered a broken left fibula in Week 16 and the Oakland Raiders' hopes for a Super Bowl run essentially went up in smoke last December.

"I've completely gotten over it," Carr said Tuesday, on the first day of a three-day mandatory minicamp, speaking specifically about his physical state after surgery and rehab.

"But I have not gotten over the fact that we lost our last game," he added. "I was really looking forward to our guys going on a run and making a chance to play in the Super Bowl. That was tough, but we get another shot at it."

Actually, the Raiders lost their last two games after Carr was injured amid suspect circumstances — exposed on a fourth-quarter pass with Oakland leading 33-14 against the Indianapolis Colts. They lost the regular-season finale at Denver, costing the Raiders the division crown. Then, forced to start rookie quarterback Connor Cook after then-backup Matt McGloin was hurt in Week 17, they were drubbed in their playoff game at Houston.

For all that went right during a 12-4 season — the franchise's first winning campaign in 14 years — the Raiders are still on a learning curve when it comes this new territory of being a legit contender.

That theme applies to Carr, too, who made steady strides in his first three seasons. He had his most efficient campaign in 2016, with a 96.7 passer rating (eighth in the NFL) and a stellar 28-to-6 touchdown-to-interception ratio. Now he's challenged to take another step.

"That's what you push for," Raiders coach Jack Del Rio said.

Del Rio wants Carr, 26, to take more ownership at the line of scrimmage, with coaches (including new coordinator Todd Downing, promoted after two years as Carr's position coach) trusting him with more leeway to change plays.

Yes, the bar is rising for Carr — as it should for a young quarterback who could be on the verge of a new contract that projects to be in the range of, if not exceed, the package that Andrew Luck got last year from the Colts, which averages $23.3 million per season.

In a passing league, the best quarterbacks — see Tom Brady, Aaron Rodgers and Drew Brees — have a knack for consistently putting their team in positions to win cat-and-mouse games against defenses.

How Carr rolls with additional responsibility might be a key marker for the Raiders' prospects of growing into a team that can challenge not only the Super Bowl champion New England Patriots, but also the AFC West champ Kansas City Chiefs, who have won seven of the past eight meetings against Oakland, including the last five.

Carr describes the task as follows: "Get us in the right play, but do it fast."

With offseason tweaks that include new dimensions in running back Marshawn Lynch, tight end Jared Cook and receiver/returner Cordarrelle Patterson, more options loom for a unit that was already potent enough rank sixth in the NFL in total yards and seventh in scoring last season.

Carr certainly seems game for more command at the line. The past two years, he took some occasional liberties with since-departed coordinator Bill Musgrave's system and went off script to switch plays.

"Doing it here and there, on my own, just being silly," he said.

And now?

"Just do it the right way," he said. "That's what we've been working on all offseason."

It sure beats rehabbing from ankle surgery. As demonstrated during Tuesday's practice – when he sometimes scrambled and other times moved to buy time in the pocket before zipping tight throws – all is well with his physical comeback.

It has been several weeks since he regained full confidence in his foot – a process that included being tackled by his wife and kids before hitting the practice field.

"I was just thinking about it the other day," Carr said. "It's been so far in the past, I thought it was (injured) ... like two years ago."

What doesn't seem so long ago, though, was the lost opportunity to make a playoff run.

Waiting for first practice was the hardest part for Raiders' Derek Carr

By Paul Guttierrez

June 21, 2017

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- Derek Carr's broken right fibula, which essentially ended the Oakland Raiders' chances at any type of postseason run last winter, is a non-issue now.

Even if there were some mental hurdles the quarterback had to clear.

"The hardest part was taking the first rep, because the last rep you remember was like, 'Oh snap, I broke this thing,'" Carr said after Tuesday's mandatory minicamp practice. "But as soon as the ball was snapped, it was a blessing. It kind of all went away.

"Now, I'm just playing ball again, but leading up to it, I think that was the worst part ... the lead-up, all the rehab. It was like, 'Man, when am I ever going to be able to do this again.' It felt like it was never going to happen."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Instead, Carr has been a full participant in all of the Raiders' offseason activities, from the conditioning program to OTAs to minicamp.

This after promising that if the Raiders had gone on a magical playoff run with Connor Cook under center, Carr, who suffered the injury on Christmas Eve, would have played in the Super Bowl.

Alas ...

The biggest concern, if you want to call it that, on Carr's plate is if/when he will receive a monster contract extension this offseason. Carr was not asked about it Tuesday, but did say at the start of OTAs he would not entertain talks if an agreement was not reached by the start of training camp in late July.

Rather, Carr is more publicly worried about picking up where he left off last year with the likes of Amari Cooper, and the two hooked up numerous times Tuesday.

The first time, Cooper blew by cornerback Sean Smith down the left sideline for a long catch and run.

Later, Carr high-pointed a ball in the end zone, and Cooper timed his leap perfectly to come down with the ball and a touchdown in double coverage.

"That ... dog in him is coming out, that thing that you saw at Alabama where he'll just take things over, and not to say that he hasn't because he has, but I just think that it's not just becoming a thing of what game it's going to be, it's becoming a thing where that's who he is," Carr said of Cooper. "DBs better know that he's really taking it serious that he's trying to go attack them this year. He's not going to let them come to him anymore.

"The guy has been going off all camp, all offseason. We were kind of just laughing at how impressed we were."

You could say the same of Carr in coming back from his injury and reclaiming the locker room. But coach Jack Del Rio wants more as, many observers would argue, he should.

"Continue to hone your craft, sharpen your skills, build that rapport with your teammates, with him getting on the same page with all the receivers and the tight ends and the backs, the timing of the routes and a real deep understanding of what we're trying to get done," Del Rio said. "We've talked a lot about Derek being able to take ownership at the line and direct things and you have to work to do that. You have to put in the time, really understand the offense inside and out and that's what Derek brings for us."

In fact, Del Rio said he wants to give Carr more freedom to change things up at the line of scrimmage under new offensive coordinator Todd Downing, who had previously been Carr's position coach. Bill Musgrave was the offensive coordinator the previous two seasons.

"Every year except my rookie year, it wasn't that way," Carr said. "It was, 'Hey, let's do it this way. We'll have it built in kind of a deal and just let it roll, let's play fast kind of a thing.'"

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"My rookie year and this upcoming year, they're more, 'Hey, at the line of scrimmage, get us in the good look, get us in the right play, but do it fast kind of a deal.' I think that that's what [Del Rio is] hitting on, just making sure that I can take not doing it for a little while."

Raiders QB Derek Carr looks to maintain upward trajectory

By Josh Dubow

June 30, 2017

NAPA, Calif. — Derek Carr's career has been on an upward trajectory ever since entering the NFL as a second-round pick three years ago.

Ten straight losses to open an up-and-down rookie season in 2014 was followed by a much-improved sophomore campaign that still fell short of the postseason.

Carr then emerged as one of the better passers in the league last season when he led the Raiders to 12 wins and a playoff berth for the first time since 2002 and was talked about as an MVP candidate.

Now Carr enters year four as the player with the richest contract in the league after signing a $125 million, five-year extension this offseason and an expectation that his best football is still ahead of him.

"I hope so," Carr said. "I don't put measurements on it like stats and things, but from a decision-making standpoint, from a poised and comfort standpoint, playing the game with more knowledge, more wisdom, from that standpoint I hope I grow every single year. I really do. I hope I get better every year. ... There's always room to improve and I'm going to work to try to improve that."

If Carr manages to improve on last season that would buck history. He became the 13th quarterback in the past 30 years to start at least 10 games in his first season and have his passer rating improve in each of the next two seasons.

Only Troy Aikman followed that with another year of improvement in year four, leading the Dallas Cowboys to a Super Bowl title. The other 11 quarterbacks saw their passer rating drop by an average of nearly 10 points in year four, a group that includes quarterbacks such as Peyton Manning and Cam Newton.

"The best thing about Derek, and I mean this sincerely, is that he wants to be great," offensive coordinator Todd Downing said. "He understands that to be great, it's always a learning process. It's always a growing process. ... For him, it's just consistency. It's taking those little details and refining them as much as he possibly can, so that when he has the perfect look, when he has the opportunity to attack a one-on-one, he's as accurate as he can be or get us in and out of the right place and the right situations."

Carr did many great things last season, completing a career-best 63.8 percent of his passes with 28 touchdowns and only six interceptions before a broken leg in the second-to-last game of the regular season cost Oakland a possible division title and led to a first-round playoff exit.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Carr also led seven fourth-quarter comebacks as he played at his best in the biggest moments, finishing tied for third in the MVP voting, but knows there's still plenty of room for improvement.

"Our goal is to make sure that we don't take any steps backward," he said. "That is not talking statistically or anything like that. Those things come. It's just the efficiency of how we run our routes, the efficiency of my footwork, the efficiency of how we pick up the blitzes, all of those things. And if we're getting better in those areas, those other things will fall into place."

One area of improvement could come in how often Carr goes downfield. Despite having one of the NFL's top pass blocking lines with three Pro Bowlers that allowed a league-low 18 sacks last season and one of the strongest arms in the game, he was still one of the more cautious quarterbacks.

Carr ranked in the top 10 in the league with more than one-fifth of his passes were thrown behind the line, according to game charting from the Pre-Snap Reads quarterback catalogue. He was near the bottom in deep throws and his average pass traveled just over 8 yards downfield, ranking 22nd in the league.

Only five quarterbacks got rid of the ball faster than Carr, according to SportRadar, so he possibly missed out on opportunities for bigger plays downfield.

But after watching big brother David get sacked an average of 50 times a year his first five seasons, Derek knows it's a fine line to balance.

"You have to take what they give you because you have to take some pressure off the offensive line, because if you're back there holding onto it and getting hit, that's your fault," he said.

"Get the ball out of your hands, but at the same time when the shot is there, then you take it. But, never where I just try to sit back there all day and force a shot.

Raiders push Derek Carr to reach next level, guide breakthrough

By Mike Silver

September 5, 2017

IT WAS A SCENE that made a grown man cry -- and for the record, few sobbing men in the history of Oakland have been quite as grown as Donald Penn.

Penn, the Raiders' 340-pound left tackle, had just trudged off the Oakland Coliseum playing field following a 33-25 victory over the Colts last Dec. 24, and he was feeling pretty far from festive. After going nearly an entire season without surrendering a single sack, Penn had slipped on a play early in the fourth quarter and watched in horror as Indy defensive end Trent Cole landed hard on his quarterback, who clutched his right leg and began writhing in pain. Now, with the Raiders heading for their first playoff appearance in 14 years, the face of the franchise -- Derek Carr, an MVP candidate in only his third NFL season -- had agony written all over it.

"It's broken, man," Carr said, referring to his fibula, as he sat on a training table in an enclave adjacent to the Raiders' locker room. "I'm done."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Penn looked at Carr's wife, Heather. He turned to make eye contact with Khalil Mack, the Raiders' star pass rusher, and Jack Del Rio, who was in his second year as the team's head coach. Penn hugged Carr, and the group began to pray together. And that's when the tears began to flow.

"I'm a big guy, and a tough guy, but I'm a very emotional guy, too," Penn explained. "And when I saw my guy go down, it was hard. That was my first time in 12 years I ever got a quarterback hurt, and it kinda hurt my pride, too. At that point, with our team, I knew we were going as far as Derek goes. So I'm sitting there going, 'Man, I f----- up the whole franchise.'

"Most of all, it hurt to see DC like that, because I love the guy, and he's my brother. I've had a great relationship with all my quarterbacks, but something with DC is special. So yeah, we were in [the training room] and were all getting emotional, and we cried. 'Cause at that point, it wasn't about football anymore."

And oddly enough, it was in that maudlin moment -- leg throbbing, dreams dashed, Christmas Eve marred -- that Carr felt the most secure about his place in the Silver and Black universe, and about his status as Raider Nation's shining star for the foreseeable future.

"On the field, I was like, 'I am not crying out here ... they are not gonna catch me crying ...' " Carr recalled in June while doing a sitdown interview in his hometown of Bakersfield, California, for an NFL Network feature that will air Sept. 10 on "GameDay Morning." "Then I was in the X-ray room with my wife, and instantly, when the game ended, every single teammate ... just came in and hugged me. A few of them were crying, which didn't help me. That let me know, one, I don't want to go anywhere else, and I would do anything for these guys. And two, the fact that they cared that much about me -- because I know how much I care about them -- the fact that they care the same amount about me, that was one of my favorite moments as an athlete."

SIX MONTHS LATER, Carr had another magical moment, signing a five-year, $125-million contract extension that made him (at the time) the NFL's highest-paid player. So yes, he has plenty of paper ... and on paper, Carr has it all: At 26, he's the unquestioned leader of a talented team striving desperately to bring a championship to Oakland before the franchise's impending move to Las Vegas, which is scheduled to occur no later than the 2020 season. He's a clean-living, swearing-averse father of two who nonetheless commands locker room cred from all quarters -- just witness his budding bromance with recently signed hometown hero and celebrated iconoclast Marshawn Lynch. And he's now firmly in command of a prolific offensive scheme that promises to grant him far more freedom than in previous seasons, one of the many reasons so many smart football minds are so high on the Raiders.

"They've got a cool thing going," said the Titans' Marcus Mariota, another promising young passer whose team hosts Oakland in Sunday's regular-season opener. "It's gonna be fun to watch them grow together. He's got a great group of receivers, and he makes it easy on them. He puts a nice touch on his passes, and it allows them to go up and get it and make big plays downfield. I think he's a great quarterback."

Vikings cornerback Terence Newman, now in his 15th season, called Carr and the Raiders "pretty scary." Newman continued, "They've got great weapons all around him, and the offensive line is very, very good, as well. He's super competitive. He can make all the reads and all the throws. And he doesn't seem like he gets rattled at all; if he makes a throw, he completely forgets about it and moves onto the next play. He has a chance to be one of the better quarterbacks for a long, long time."

And perhaps the best thing Carr has going for him is that he's in complete control of his environment, with teammates who regard him with an affection bordering on reverence.

"I don't think I've ever seen a guy command so much respect," said Raiders offensive coordinator Todd Downing, who was elevated by Del Rio from his role as quarterbacks coach following the 2016 season. "He handles people with a certain amount of couth that is beyond his years, and that's an amazing thing to say. He can handle the guy on the far left and the guy on the far right, and everything in between. Since he's been here, he's had to be the constant. And the guys believe in him, completely."

They have their reasons. In 2016, Carr led the Raiders to seven comeback victories in games they trailed in the fourth quarter, one fewer than Lions quarterback Matthew Stafford, who established a new NFL record in the process. (Last week, Stafford signed a five-year, $135 million contract extension, surpassing Carr atop the league's pay scale.) The other Raiders' faith in Carr is so fervent that their hopes couldn't help but sink when he went down in that Week 16 victory over the Colts. Subsequent defeats to the Broncos (in the regular-season finale) and Texans (in a first-round playoff clash) -- games in which Oakland scored a combined 20 points -- did nothing to dispel the belief that Carr is the Raiders' Khaleesi. In 2017, he'll be the driving force behind their efforts to dethrone the Patriots as Super Bowl champions.

ON A SWELTERING late-June afternoon in Bakersfield, the Central Valley city where Carr spends much of his offseason, the Raiders' newly minted quarterback is zipping pinpoint passes across a turf field and putting on a clinic -- literally. The Carr Elite Football Clinic is a family affair: Former No. 1 overall draft pick David Carr, who spent 11 years as an NFL quarterback, is running routes for his little brother as scores of youth football players break off into position groups. Middle brother Darren, the head coach at local powerhouse Bakersfield Christian High School, roams the field where the Eagles play their home games, presiding over drills. Parents Rodger and Sheryl Carr stroll the sidelines, where many of the participants' mothers, fathers and siblings are watching the proceedings underneath pop-up tents. "There's The Man, right there," one father says to his tiny son, gesturing at Derek Carr. "This guy makes it look easy."

That's not exactly the message Derek's going for: Getting to this point, he'll tell you, wasn't easy, and it isn't easy now. And though he obviously worked hard for his success, in retrospect, he does not regard it as the product of a single-minded, maniacal mission. A day earlier, at the nationally televised press conference announcing his contract extension, Carr had made a point of informing young viewers that the huge payday had never been his dream, saying, "It's very important ... for them to know that I never chased the money in this whole process. It was never, ever going to be about the money for me. If one kid can understand what I'm trying to tell them by saying that, I think I've done my job."

The following morning, during our interview, Carr had elaborated: "Too many times I see kids come up to me, especially at the high school age, and say, 'Man, it would be cool to play in the NFL just because of the money.' And I'm like, 'Oh my goodness, you are missing everything, because money is not going to make you happy.' It's a cool deal, obviously, but there was no pursuit of it. My only focus was to be the best version of myself. I believe God gave me talent to play this game, and I'd be sacrificing those gifts if I didn't give my best every single day. And that's all I thought about. It really didn't matter how much work I had to put in ... I was always going to give my best. And I think that if a lot of kids can realize that, and stick with that mindset, they won't get so stressed about certain things, and they can just live and play freely."

As a kid living vicariously through his big brother's achievements, Derek absorbed an indelible lesson that money does not necessarily cure all ills. After the expansion Houston Texans made David the first draft pick in franchise history, selecting him No. 1 overall out of Fresno State in the spring of 2002, the entire Carr family moved from Bakersfield to the Houston area to support him. Soon thereafter, Derek, who was 11 at the time, began to question whether the Texans' powers that be possessed a similar philosophy.

After signing David Carr to a seven-year contract with a value of up to $60 million, the Texans installed the rookie as an immediate starter and watched him take a beating like no other quarterback in NFL history. He absorbed 76 sacks in his first season -- still an NFL record -- including nine in his second career game. He also set a single-season league mark for fumble recoveries, collecting 12 of his own. Coach Dom Capers did not hire a quarterbacks coach for Carr, and offensive coordinator Chris Palmer ran a scheme that favored receiving options over extra pass protectors.

Sundays were a nightmare, for David and Derek.

"He still has scars from childhood," David, who is now 38, said of his younger brother. "I was the one getting hit, but he took it even more personally. He was pretty high maintenance."

Home games were especially harrowing for the embattled quarterback and his ride-or-die kid brother.

"Derek was visibly upset after almost every home game, especially early on, to the point where he was sick to his stomach, and he wouldn't even eat the stuff in the players' lounge," David remembered. "After a game, I'd talk to my wife briefly, and maybe my parents, and they'd all be like, 'Derek's really upset.' I'd have to go over and bring him a cookie, and he wouldn't want to eat it. I'd say, 'It's gonna be all right,' and he'd say, 'No, it's not!' Then he would start naming the guys who weren't good enough -- right there in the family area, where those same guys were hanging out. I'd be like, 'Dude! Stop!' It was funny later, but it definitely wasn't so humorous at the time."

It's still not overly hilarious to Derek, who becomes noticeably agitated when recalling that painful 2002 season.

"I grew up watching the Raiders -- Rich Gannon, Tim Brown and Jerry Rice -- and I remember watching the Cowboys before that," Carr said. "I remember watching those [Texans] games, [thinking], Surely, the quarterback's not supposed to be hit this much. You know, I don't remember that happening to [Gannon]. Now that I know what I know about the game, and I go back and watch [David's] games, and it makes me sick to my stomach -- schematically, the help he didn't get. Obviously, they weren't as talented up front, but there are ways to help the guy out: Get him out of the pocket, chips, keep the running back in, keep the tight end in to help. You know, it's not rocket science."

"It's hard enough [to be a young franchise quarterback], right? Let alone to deal with, 'Ah, we'll get all five guys out; our five can block their four.' Well, obviously, it's not working, so maybe you should try something else."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Three years later, the elder Carr absorbed 68 sacks -- still the third-highest single-season total in league history. He was cut by the Texans following the '06 season and finished out his career as a backup with the Panthers, Giants and 49ers. His little bro still bristles at what might have been.

"It makes me sick, because we're talking about a guy who is the most talented thrower I have been around," Derek said of David. "I've never played catch with someone and been like, 'I don't want to catch this ball anymore ... it hurts.' You ask receivers, he throws a heavy ball. When it hits your hands, it's like, Man ... and he's just whipping it. Still to this day -- don't tell him I said this -- I can't beat him in the accuracy game. We'll stand 30 yards apart and throw the ball -- two points if it hits up here (near the head), one point if it hits here (near the stomach). Every throw he makes, it's two points. Every time. And if I miss one, the game's over.

"There's a reason that he was picked No. 1 ... but for him not to get that help, it makes me sick. Because I know the help that [Raiders general manager Reggie McKenzie] has given me.' "

IN 2008, before Derek's senior year of high school, the Carrs moved back to Bakersfield, and he enrolled early at Fresno State the following spring. Carr became the Bulldogs' starter as a redshirt sophomore in 2011, and he later headed into his senior season as one of the nation's top quarterbacks. Already married to Heather, whom he has credited with helping him embrace his Christian faith, Derek was excited about the impending birth of the couple's first child. Then, on Aug. 6, 2013, their son Dallas arrived, but the elation was short-lived: Within several hours, Dallas began vomiting profusely, and doctors discovered that his intestines were tangled and performed emergency surgery, the first of three operations to remedy the condition.

"His intestines were all tangled up, to say it lightly, and they were cutting off the blood flow to his body," Carr remembered. "And I was like, 'Oh man. Please no. Anything but my son.' And that right there was a sign of, You say you are a faithful person? Well, you have to prove it now. It's easy when everything is OK. It is easy when you are going through a little bit of a hard time. But when your son's life is threatened? Are you still going to be that same person?"

"The doctors told us that if he was born on time, he wouldn't have made it. But [he was early], and he did. We just tell him he has a sweet shark bite. And if you ask him, he will say, 'And you should have seen what Daddy did to the shark.' "

In September of 2013, Carr was on the Bulldogs' team bus, preparing to head to the airport for a nonconference clash at Colorado, when he and his teammates learned the game had been postponed (and later canceled) due to flooding in the Boulder area. That night, he and Heather ended up rushing Dallas back to the hospital for a third surgery.

"They don't cancel games in college, but they canceled this one, and I was able to be there," Carr said. "And so it all worked out perfectly."

After spending the first 23 days of his life in hospitals, Dallas went home to live with his parents. He is now a healthy 4-year-old; younger brother Decker is 18 months.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

FOLLOWING A STELLAR senior season, Carr received a great deal of pre-draft attention. There was even talk that he might be in the mix to go first overall -- but with the Texans owning that selection, that seemed unlikely, given their history with David. On the first night of the draft, Derek and the family gathered at David's Bakersfield home in anticipation. The Jaguars (Blake Bortles, third overall) and Browns (Johnny Manziel, 22nd) took quarterbacks, but no one called Carr's name.

Finally, when the Vikings traded up into the final spot of the round, he figured his wait was over.

"We were like, 'Oh, here it is ...' and they picked Teddy Bridgewater," Carr remembered. "Teddy and I are great friends and we talk all the time, but at that moment, I was so competitive that I saw Blake and Johnny and Teddy go and I was like, 'What the heck, man? What did I do wrong? What did I not show them? What did I not say? What was it about me that wasn't good enough?'"

"And it bugged for me like an hour. And then I was like, 'Who picks first in the second round?' And it was Houston, and they weren't going to do it, obviously. And then I see Oakland [with the 36th pick], and I was like, 'That's where I'm going.' And honestly, that's where I wanted to go the whole time."

Sure enough, the following night, Carr got the call from McKenzie, who'd already landed a defensive linchpin by selecting Khalil Mack with the fifth overall pick. And from that point forward, Carr -- like Tom Brady, Richard Sherman and so many other NFL standouts -- would use the perceived draft snub to fuel himself, long after it became obvious he should have gone higher.

"There is no question he has a chip on his shoulder," Downing said. "He wants to be known as one of the greats of all time, but also as a guy who got drafted lower than he should have."

Another Oakland-based star, Golden State Warriors forward Draymond Green, can name all 34 players taken ahead of him in the 2012 NBA draft. Asked if he can recite the 35 people who got picked before him, Carr said, "No chance, but I know which teams didn't pick me. Indy was the only team that didn't have a first-round pick, and I know they wouldn't have taken me because they have Andrew Luck, so I count them in there, too. So every team -- even my team -- passed on me. And I go out there every day, not to prove them wrong, but to prove Reggie right."

Carr didn't waste much time showing McKenzie he'd made the right call. Before the draft, McKenzie had dealt a sixth-round pick to the Texans for longtime starter Matt Schaub -- whose trade from Atlanta to Houston seven years earlier had, strangely enough, triggered David's release from the Texans -- and Derek went into training camp the clear-cut backup. Schaub played poorly over the summer, however, and then-Raiders coach Dennis Allen made a point of giving his rookie some snaps with the No. 1 offense during the preseason finale against the Seahawks.

"I was mad that I had to play that fourth preseason game," Penn recalled, "but DC had been really good during camp, and they needed to see him with the starters. We had two series against Seattle, the No. 1 defense, and he drove us right down the field both times. I was like, 'OK. He can do this.'"

Carr completed 11 of 13 pass attempts for 143 yards and three touchdown passes against the defending Super Bowl champions and won the starting job. From that point on, he has continually progressed as both a player and a leader. At first, Carr admits, he was somewhat sheepish about calling people out after mistakes. Now, things have evolved to the point where the quarterback welcomes being called out by others.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I don't care if you yell at me," Carr insisted. "I have no ego; I have no pride. Get on me because you expect more from me. Our whole team has that mindset."

Carr's latest verbal sparring partner is also one of his most spirited: Lynch, the former Seahawks star running back who came out of retirement to play for his hometown team.

"I don't know if there could be two more opposite people in the world," David Carr said. "But somehow, it works."

The unlikely bond was cemented by trash talk.

"He calls me out," Derek Carr said of Lynch. "I'll sail one in practice, and he'll be like, 'We are not going to win with that stupid throw.' And I will just turn around and be like, 'Not now, Marshawn.' You know, the thing we didn't realize was how funny that guy is. He's hilarious. He was on me from the beginning."

"I'm still killing him," Lynch said during training camp.

What for?

"Mostly, just for being white," Lynch joked.

Said Penn: "They're like brothers. They're always competing about something, talking trash to each other. Marshawn is always saying DC isn't an athlete, and DC is very prideful about his athletic ability, so that gets him. DC will say to Marshawn, 'Hell, I can rush for 1,000 yards behind this offensive line ... I hope you can still make those cuts.' "

Though Carr is not shy about proclaiming his strong Christian faith -- and, in terms of social habits, is the anti-Manziel -- Raiders teammates say he doesn't come off as preachy.

"He's not throwing it on you like that," veteran receiver Michael Crabtree said. "He's very understanding. He can relate to anybody. It's just his personality."

Center Rodney Hudson agreed, saying of his quarterback: "He can relate to everyone. If I need to talk to him about anything, I feel comfortable doing it. I'll ask him questions, even about personal stuff. If he doesn't have an answer, he'll find it."

Said Del Rio during training camp: "The really cool thing is to watch how he and Khalil interact. They came in the same draft class, and they've become very close, and they support each other."

Before the Raiders' second preseason game in August, Carr placed his arm on Mack's left shoulder during "The Star-Spangled Banner," a gesture he later told reporters was intended "to show the kids that look up to me, look up to him, white kids, black kids, brown kids, blue, green, it doesn't matter -- all be loving to each other. We're best friends and we're loving to one another."

Said Penn: "He's a real cool guy. He doesn't drink, and he doesn't cuss, but he's still gonna be around you. Last year, we did a Thursday night dinner, and DC made sure to pop up. He was only there for an hour, but it meant a lot. He said, 'Guys, you know I get up at 5 a.m.,' and got out of there, but it was so cool that he came. He's funny, too. When we say the N-word too much, he'll go, 'God, guys, come on! I let it slide the first 10 times ...' "

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

LAST DEC. 4 in Oakland, the Raiders were in the midst of one of those any given Sunday nightmares that happen even to the best of NFL teams: The underdog Bills had come to the Coliseum and manhandled the Silver and Black on both sides of the ball. Six minutes into the second half, Buffalo held a 24-9 lead that seemed destined to grow. The 9-2 Raiders, who'd lost their previous 72 games when trailing by 15 points or more, looked dazed and confused.

Then Carr simply took over, directing touchdown drives on four of Oakland's next five possessions to spur a game-closing, jaw-dropping 29-0 run. Already operating exclusively out of the shotgun formation to relieve pressure on the right pinkie he'd dislocated in the previous week's victory over the Panthers, Carr employed a hurry-up attack throughout much of that stretch, during which he ended up calling many of his own plays.

After the 2016 season, in a surprising move, Del Rio jettisoned offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave and promoted Downing, who had been the quarterbacks coach. In the process, Carr, too, saw his responsibilities increase.

"The good thing is, TD, he's giving DC a lot more control, a lot more power," Penn said of Downing. "I love Billy, but TD has a different approach. You're gonna see a lot of times when we're at the line and TD's just calling the formation and DC's making the [play] call and just letting it rip."

Said David Carr: "When you give Derek that freedom, which they're doing now, I think you'll see him take off even more and play even better. He's as good as I've ever been around in diagnosing what's happening at the line, and I've been in the room with [former Giants teammate] Eli Manning. He might not have all the showmanship at the line that some others do, but he knows what the defense is doing long before they're doing it."

That was apparent late in the first half of a late-August preseason game against the Cowboys, when Carr made a quick pump to his right, immediately pivoted and delivered a beautiful sideline pass to star receiver Amari Cooper that resulted in a 48-yard touchdown.

"That was pretty impressive," said Newman, who watched the play on TV. "[The Cowboys] were in two-deep and he pumped into the seam to get one of the safeties to move to the middle, and you could tell he had his mind made up. He reloaded immediately and threw a great pass to Cooper down the [left] sideline. I was like, 'Holy s---.' The fact that he knew he could move the safety -- damn, that was impressive. And scary."

Even scarier to opponents is the fact that Carr will have more weapons than ever before in 2017. Lynch's physicality should bolster a rushing attack fueled by one of the best offensive lines in football, while the free-agent signing of tight end Jared Cook figures to enhance a passing game that features a pair of prolific wideouts in Cooper and Crabtree.

Carr will also have the peace of mind that comes from the contract extension, something that wasn't the case a year ago. Shortly before the 2016 season, when Bridgewater, his friend and fellow 2014 draftee, went down in practice with a horrific knee injury from which he still has not returned, Carr admittedly was shook.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I'm human," he said. "It's going to cross my mind."

Then, on Dec. 24, came the mother of all head trips: Carr took that hit from the Colts' Cole, heard a pop and quickly concluded that he was unable to move his ankle.

"Instantly, when I went down and I was holding my leg, all I could think about was my wife and kids," Carr recalled. "Obviously, every football player that's on a contract year doesn't want to get hurt. The last thing you want to do is break an ankle. I sat there, and all I did was think about them, and I just began to tell myself it doesn't matter what the outcome is -- I'm just going to work my tail off to make sure they're taken care of, whether it's football or something else. Because you don't know at that moment; if I'm done, who knows?"

Carr wasn't done -- within days, he was encouraging teammates by saying he'd be healed in time to play in the Super Bowl -- but in reality, the Raiders were.

"It was the night the Grinch stole Christmas," Del Rio said. "He's having a great season, his family's in town, it's a very festive atmosphere at the Coliseum, and it all came crashing down. What can you do? It was: Suck it up, be a man, do what you can to get past it, and stubbornly go forward."

AS MUCH AS Raiders owner Mark Davis is looking forward to the franchise's impending move to Vegas, which was approved by his fellow owners at the Annual League Meeting in March, Carr is all in when it comes to Oakland, where the Raiders will play for up to three seasons while their new stadium is constructed. The quarterback often attends Warriors games at Oracle Arena, which sits next door to the Coliseum, and hopes that he and his teammates can hold their own championship parade down Broadway.

"My focus is only on the city of Oakland," Carr said. "That's where we are playing. This is home. That is where I had my first opportunity, and we owe it to the city of Oakland to give it everything we can. Hopefully, it ends with a championship or two or three. I can promise one thing: We are going to give everything we have to that city."

If Carr's head coach had his way, the word "championship" would be off limits at this early stage of his quarterback's career.

"He's a good young player that has a chance to accomplish more," Del Rio said. "But we've still got a lot of work in front of us. He does. We all do. It's not like we're talking about Tom Brady. We understand that we have a good player we love at that position. So now we go to work. But the excessive hype about how great he is ... I don't want to be part of that."

The good news: Carr isn't likely to let up; at least, not in this lifetime. He may not be Brady -- who is? -- but he does seem to possess the hyper-competitive gene that so many of the great ones do.

"Just before the start of training camp, we were up at Derek's house [in the East Bay], and we had some intense games of pool basketball," David Carr recalled. "This is a guy who literally had me help him design his pool so that it would be good for pool basketball -- he's totally into it. Anyway, it's his pool, and my team [which included middle brother Darren] beat his, and he wasn't happy about it. He said, 'You want to play again tomorrow?' and we said, 'Sure.'"

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"The next morning, Khalil [Mack] and [Raiders safety Karl] Joseph show up at the house. I look at Derek and he says, 'They're on my team.' Then it was six hours of me wrestling Khalil Mack in the pool, which is no fun. At one point, Khalil jumped out of the water and dunked with me on his back. And yeah, Derek's team won."

Suffice it to say that Carr's chlorine-drenched intensity carries over to the practice field.

"He's a perfectionist," Penn said. "Even sometimes after he completes a pass in practice, he'll repeat the rep so that he can put it exactly where he wants it. He'll ask the coaches, 'Can we run it again?' And he'll say, 'Coop, stay there ...' and then put it right in his hands and go, 'There, that feels better.' He never stops working on his game.

"He's been the leader of the offense since he started on Day 1. Now, he's the leader of the team."

As he attempts to take the Raiders back to the Super Bowl for the first time in 15 years, this franchise quarterback swears he will never take that role for granted.

"It's kind of surreal," Carr said. "It's something that I've dreamed of, being in that seat. And it's cool to know that I get to live out a dream, especially for the team I wanted to be with, you know? Not everybody gets that, either. You know, to wear the Silver and Black, the sweetest jerseys, the meanest look, in front of our great fans ... It is the coolest.

"And to put a guy like me in the middle of that and just say, 'Yeah, that's our guy'; I've got the coolest job in the world. And I believe this: To lead the Oakland Raiders every day, to be the franchise quarterback, you have to be a servant. You have to be someone that cares about everybody else above yourself."

They care about him, too. If Carr ever starts to doubt that, he can always flash back to that emotional scene in Oakland last Christmas Eve, when a bone broke, a dream died and grown men cried.

The Unprecedented Education of Derek Carr

By Kevin Clark

October 24, 2017

No one uses the practice mode on Madden. This is because the vast majority of us are reasonable. It seems antithetical to the point of video games, which are an empty-calorie, harmless bit of time wasting. You don't train in order to enter a bouncy castle. And you don't practice video games; you play.

This, however, is what 10-year-old Derek Carr liked to do with his brother David.

When David was a top NFL prospect at Fresno State in the early 2000s, he would grab one of the controllers and throw as many complicated defenses as he could at young Derek in practice mode.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I would explain to him what routes beat what coverages, what the vulnerabilities are in Cover 2, Cover 3," David explained to me. "And he just ate it up. He'd just be in these practice sessions, dissecting coverages at 10 years old."

This education started to build. When David, who went no. 1 overall to the Houston Texans in 2002, would hang out with his kid brother on Mondays and Tuesdays during the NFL season, Derek just wanted to watch tape.

"We'd eat dinner, watch game film, and he'd be right there next to me, sitting there for hours, figuring out what the Jaguars were doing defensively," said David, now an analyst at the NFL Network. Their father would tell David about Derek sitting in the stands at his brother's games, yelling out the defense's plays. "He'd be calling out what the defense was going to do before the snap because of their alignment. He's 12 years old," David said. "This is the same little guy playing for his junior high flag football team, and he knows everything about the Titans' schemes."

No longer a rookie at that point, David Carr had been around enough NFL football to know the difference between a great quarterback and a roster cut. He'd seen plenty of talented passers fall out of the league because they couldn't retain all of the information coaches would throw at them. So David would slip Derek any information he could. He taught him how to identify coverages using one player as the tell, how to identify player leverages and defensive fronts. "So we'd be watching film and he'd say, 'The nickel is inside here, so it'll be Cover 2,'" David said. Derek's quick diagnoses could even be a minor embarrassment for David, "because there would be times he would pick it up before me."

There are few NFL quarterbacks with a football education quite like Carr's. Everyone who knew him before his NFL days has a story that makes him out to be a kind football Mozart, with an advanced understanding of his craft at an early age. Of course, this is ridiculous. Mozart could never check into a man-beating route if he got a good look.

In a year when there are few great quarterbacks and fewer great teams, Carr and the Raiders have the capability for both—even if they haven't quite shown it yet.

Last season, Carr was an MVP candidate, as the Raiders went 12-4, propelled by his seven fourth-quarter comebacks, the second most ever in a single season. They looked like legitimate Super Bowl contenders until Carr broke his leg in Week 16. The injury was so devastating to the team that coach Jack Del Rio said the only lesson he learned from the season was not to lose your quarterback. The Raiders got a brief refresher on that lesson this season when Carr missed a game two weeks ago with a back injury. Their fears were confirmed in an uninspiring 30-17 loss to the Baltimore Ravens with EJ Manuel at the helm.

This season has been a strange one for the Raiders. In March, they announced they are moving to Las Vegas, but they may stay in Oakland through 2020. The team brought star running back Marshawn Lynch out of retirement: He's averaged 3.7 yards per carry thus far and is currently suspended for making contact with an official. Carr has had 8.4 percent of his passes dropped—the second-highest rate in the NFL. Star wideout Amari Cooper was in a slump so bad that Football Outsiders compared him to former Bucs flameout Michael Clayton—only for Cooper to then break out with 210 yards in last week's dramatic 31-30 win over Kansas City that featured the Raiders running two plays with no time left on the clock.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

That game, like most of this Raiders season, was one giant middle finger to everything we thought we knew about the team. Less than a week ago, the 26-year-old Carr was the guy who wasn't going deep. Then against Kansas City he threw the most deep passes in a single game of anyone in the NFL this season. Before the Chiefs game, he was throwing passes historically quickly after the snap, then he took significantly longer in that particular game. The only constants for Oakland seem to be a below-average defense (ranked 26th in yards allowed this season, same as last season) and a great offensive line. Carr has been under pressure slightly less often this season—on 22 percent of his dropbacks, after being pressured on 23.9 percent last season, which was already an NFL low.

Statistically, Carr has been steady from a year ago—completing virtually the same percentage of his passes, averaging the same yards per attempt, and possessing a quarterback rating one point different from last season. It is hard to define what's been missing from the Raiders this season—except to say it wasn't there for the first five of Carr's starts and was definitely there against Kansas City.

The Raiders stand at 3-4, but with the entire league bunched up tighter than ever before, that puts Oakland within one win of three teams who currently possess playoff spots.

If Oakland's predicament and its promise seems to mirror that of the modern NFL at large, so does its quarterback.

Like most of his generation, coming out of college he was given the label of "spread" quarterback, a term that in NFL circles translates, roughly, to "he doesn't know what he's doing."

The fundamental misunderstanding of the way a spread quarterback translates to the NFL is that it's not about a type of offense; it's about how much responsibility the quarterback has at the line of scrimmage and after the snap. There are plenty of college quarterbacks who simply look to the sideline for a play, have simple reads on a given play, don't have to do much critical thinking on a given play, and still put up gaudy numbers. Carr is not one of those players—neither was Dak Prescott or Deshaun Watson, yet the lack of nuance among NFL decision-makers when evaluating spread quarterbacks continues.

"We gave Derek enough rope to hang himself and he never did," said former Fresno State offensive coordinator Dave Schramm. Carr called 80 percent of his own plays on first and second down. Oakland offensive coordinator Todd Downing told me that is one of the reasons Carr had so much success so early in his NFL career.

Aside from Schramm's guidance, David Carr said there was another reason his brother was able to eschew most spread offense norms while growing up: David wouldn't allow Derek to look to the sideline for plays. "I said, 'I hate it,'" David said. "And I told him, 'If you ever do that, I'm no longer coming to your games.'"

Derek Carr is built for late-game magic. According to Downing, Carr's unprecedented football education allows him to process plays quickly and improvise—both crucial to any two-minute drill. But beyond the know-how comes the attitude. His older brother sees it come out on the basketball court.

"First of all, he'll dunk on my little son. He has absolutely no remorse," David said.

“But what’s really important is that he loves being the point guard. He loves those moments and he always wants to be down and then win it in the last few seconds,” David said. “The difference with him and other quarterbacks is that he feels like the defense is always on their heels. Most guys think the defense is ready to attack you—but he thinks he can dictate the pace of the game.”

Especially in the final few minutes of a game, Carr is so good at spreading the football around like he’s playing basketball. That ability is what won the game against the Chiefs.

The Raiders travel to take on the 4-2 Bills on Sunday in perhaps one of their most pivotal games of the season. It’s a matchup with what looks like a direct competitor for a wild-card spot. Carr, the guy who loves big moments, will have to be the player who carries the team on his back against one of the best defenses in the league.

If all goes well, he’ll be a point guard again this weekend, but only so much translates from the hardwood to the gridiron. “Also,” David said, beginning his brother’s hoops scouting report, “he never passes.”

TE Jared Cook

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE

Jared Cook leads Raiders' improved tight-end corps

By Vic Tafur

August 9, 2017

If you can't beat them, enlist them.

In this case, we're talking about tight ends. The Raiders have not often been able to cover them in Jack Del Rio's two years as head coach, so they grabbed one off the free-agent market.

Presto! They don't have to worry about covering Jared Cook ever again.

In all seriousness, Oakland plans to give opponents a taste of their own medicine. The tight ends have been the stars of training camp, with Derek Carr often throwing to his new 6-foot-5, 254-pound target; Lee Smith, Clive Walford and Gabe Holmes have looked very good as well.

"We haven't really gotten our tight-end position going as much as I'd like," Del Rio said. "I think we've really addressed that. I think you're going to see a team that can utilize the tight-end position more in their offensive plan and attack.

"Jared Cook opens up a lot of possibilities and Clive being in much better shape and healthier than he's been, probably in a while, helps."

Walford, the team's third-round pick in 2015, was involved in an ATV accident last offseason and was not quite right in 2016. Cook was available on the free-agent market longer than the Raiders anticipated, and though he wasn't on the original wish list, they quickly put him on it.

Carr has been ecstatic about his new toy.

"When you add a guy like Jared Cook that runs a 4.3 or a 4.4 and he can outrun DBs on go-routes, (you) can throw him out wide and run different kinds of routes with him," Carr said. "We can do that kind of stuff because he is that talented."

After missing six games with an ankle injury last season, Cook led the Packers in the playoffs with 18 catches and 229 yards (with two touchdowns) in three games. His catch on the sideline to set up the game-winning field goal against Dallas will be remembered for years to come.

It's pretty obvious: Having Cook will change the way the defense covers wide receivers Amari Cooper and Michael Crabtree.

"It should," Carr said, "but if it doesn't, he should catch a lot of footballs."

Cook has compared Carr to Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rodgers when it comes to ball placement and grasp of an offense, but the Raiders' tight-end class might be unique.

"We have the enforcer in Lee, and Clive is very talented, has made a lot of catches at camp," Cook said. "I think the only people that can stop us (are) ourselves."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Which is kind of what Walford did last season.

Last season, Walford said he was fine, but now says the knee injury affected his cut-making ability and in the back of his mind, he knew his knee wasn’t as strong as it had been in the past.

“I am a big bruiser, but I like to watch Jared and learn from him, and so has Clive,” Smith said. “It’s great for all the young guys to watch a pass-catcher like Jared. Clive has absorbed it. One thing I will give Clive credit for is he leans on me a lot and he leans on Jared a lot.

“He is blocking better, he is catching the ball better, he is moving better and he is becoming a dang good ballplayer.”

The Raiders should have no problem topping last year’s 580 yards from the tight-end position. New offensive coordinator Todd Downing has pledged to attack the field with the pass this season.

“You have to be able to do that on the inside part of the field, too,” Downing said, “and a lot of the times that’s where the tight ends line up.”

Smith, a honorary offensive lineman, even caught a deep pass over the middle this week at training camp. It’s contagious.

“Adding Jared was huge,” Smith said. “There is a lot of talent in the tight-end room. Jared is a matchup nightmare. Linebackers can’t cover him and he is too big for safeties. When you are a matchup nightmare, you make a lot of plays, you make a lot of money and you stay in the league a long time.

“This is his ninth year in the league, so there you go.”

LAS VEGAS REVIEW-JOURNAL

Bigger Amari Cooper is better for Raiders

By Michael Gehlken

July 30, 2017

NAPA, Calif. — Amari Cooper reported Friday to training camp about 7 pounds heavier than the weight at which he played last season.

And not a subtle 7, either.

The Raiders wide receiver, now at 217, is a television infomercial with a quarter-written script. His appearance is the “After” version of himself, but he seems disinterested in discussing the development in detail. Such is consistent with his underspoken personality; rather than say the results, he’d prefer to show them.

So far in camp, he has.

Cooper sold a double move Sunday to scorch cornerback Sean Smith on a deep Derek Carr pass. The added lean muscle seems not to have sacrificed his ability to separate. But the real upgrade in Cooper’s game entering his third NFL season is found in the nuanced aspects of his route-running, an upgrade the bulk helped him attain.

Offensive coordinator Todd Downing has noticed.

“I think at route tops, when you’re a little bit more sturdy at route tops and you have that natural hand-fighting with DBs, it helps you stay a little bit more balanced,” Downing said. “Certainly, it helps you come back to the ball and play through the ball stronger. Those are two areas that I can say I’ve seen a big difference with Amari.

“You know, holding his route path as you’re hand-fighting down the field, whether on vertical routes on a ‘go’ or when you’re trying to (execute) a slant, when you have a little bit more girth to you, a little more strength, it’s harder for DBs to throw you off course.”

After each season, coaches hold exit meetings with players.

During them, coaches recap the individual’s season, what they liked, what they didn’t. It is the NFL equivalent to an annual review in a more traditional workplace. Goals are established for what specific areas the team would like to see the player improve upon in the months ahead.

Gaining weight wasn’t explicitly one of them, Downing said, but it appears to have helped.

“That’s just his hard work and working with the strength staff,” Downing said. “For me, I just wanted him to be more consistent with his route-running and staying a little more quarterback-friendly at the top of his routes.”

Cooper expects not to be 217 pounds come Week 1.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Traditionally, he drops a few pounds over the course of camp, a common trend for players around the league. He is unsure if he'll weigh more than 210, he said. As for how he managed to achieve bulk without sacrificing speed, well, he reflected upon his approach with understated simplicity.

"I just train my hardest," Cooper said. "I just go out there to the gym and just work every day. When you do that, you'll gain a lot of muscle."

Maybe the 7-pound difference is that simple: Cooper trained hard.

Or perhaps, it's part of the greater picture to his development.

He is a two-time Pro Bowler who is only 23. For context, safety Obi Melifonwu, the Raiders' rookie second-round pick, is two months older. Cooper is still growing, still evolving. Each year, he learns more about his body, his game and how the two are connected. He then devotes his offseason to prepare his body accordingly. Cooper's physical stature, then, may be the most visible manifestation of his rising maturity level in the league.

Last year, he totaled 83 receptions for 1,115 yards and five touchdowns.

As a rookie, he caught 72 passes for 1,070 yards and six scores.

"It's not really that hard to get a 1,000 yards in a 16-game season," Cooper said. "I've had a lot of games where I didn't produce like I thought I should've. I definitely have a lot to improve on, and I feel like I can make that improvement this year. ... My main focus this season is to take advantage of every opportunity that I have. If I get the ball thrown to me 10 times in practice, I want to catch 10 passes. I just want to maximize my opportunities."

He is larger target for the opportunities that come.

THE UNDEFEATED

Amari Cooper strengthens Raiders' chances to return to prominence

By Jason Reid

September 22, 2017

ALAMEDA, California — The touchdown may wind up being his signature play, something Amari Cooper points to long after his football days are over to illustrate "That's how I rolled!" At the very least, the Oakland Raiders' Pro Bowl wide receiver definitely added to his career highlight tape. He also quickly reminded the rest of the league that he's still on the way up.

On Oakland's first possession in the first quarter of Week 1, Cooper set the tone for a team that has what it takes to play in the NFL season's final game. With the Raiders at the Tennessee Titans' 8-yard line, Cooper was split out wide right against rookie cornerback Adoree' Jackson. On a slant route, Cooper caught a pass from quarterback Derek Carr, and Jackson appeared to tackle Cooper for a short gain. But Cooper landed on Jackson, keeping the play alive. Spinning away from Jackson, Cooper took on many other would-be Titans tacklers at the 4-yard line and bulled his way into the end zone — with some timely help from his teammates — to put the Raiders ahead on the road en route to a 26-16 victory.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Talk about an opening statement.

“Amari ... he’s got a lot of desire,” Oakland head coach Jack Del Rio said. “And he’s got a lot of talent.”

After two Pro Bowl seasons, Cooper enters his third year determined to do everything even bigger. Having added muscle as a result of an intense offseason conditioning program (as if we couldn’t tell from the way he moved the pile in Tennessee), Cooper is focused on helping Oakland return to the Super Bowl for the first time since 2003. He joins Carr and defensive end Khalil Mack in forming the Raiders’ trio of stars who have revived the franchise and inspired fans to believe in championship dreams again.

For the Raiders to get where they want to go, Cooper will have to be out front. Good thing for them that he’s totally down with that.

“The goal is always to get better,” Cooper said after practice at the Raiders’ facility recently. “The goal is always to do more to [contribute to success]. That’s why you work so hard in the offseason. You do it so you can go into the next season and be a better player than you were before. Otherwise, what are you doing?”

There’s no doubt about what Cooper did before this season. You can see the results.

He’s visibly bigger than he was during the 2016 season, say people who follow the Raiders closely, and definitely stronger. Just ask the Titans.

They seemed surprised that Cooper refused to go down. Although Cooper likely wouldn’t have gotten into the end zone without being pushed, the fact that he managed to maintain his balance in the center of the scrum was nonetheless impressive. Cooper enjoyed the moment.

“It was a real fun play,” he said. “I caught the ball, guy tried to tackle me, and I knew that I wasn’t on the ground. I stayed up and just kind of let the guys push me in. ... It was great. Definitely pumped up the team up.”

Cooper has always trained diligently in the offseason. From his high school days in Miami through his standout career at the University of Alabama and in the NFL, he has stayed on the grind. But after the 2016 season, Cooper stepped it up even more than usual. Weights, cardio, flexibility work – the program was draining. It also worked.

“I wasn’t trying to get bigger,” Cooper said, shrugging almost as if to apologize for adding another component to his game to torment opponents. “I was just training so much that I did get bigger.”

While also maintaining the stretch-the-defense speed (at the NFL scouting combine, he covered the 40-yard dash in 4.42 seconds) that largely prompted Oakland to select him with the fourth overall pick in the 2015 draft. In the previous draft, the Raiders hit two home runs: Mack was picked fifth overall and Carr went in the second round (36th overall).

Mack was selected the Associated Press 2016 Defensive Player of the Year. Carr is one of the game’s best young passers. If not for the broken leg that Carr suffered late in the 2016 season, the Raiders’ Super Bowl drought might have ended last season.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

The three ballers did provide the foundation for Oakland's return to the playoffs in 2016. The team hadn't gotten that far in 14 years. Through two games this season, the Raiders are perfect. "We have young players who are really driven, who want to be special," Del Rio said. "They have the work ethic."

Cooper has produced consecutive 1,000-plus-yard seasons. And he's still only 23. "The biggest thing," Del Rio said, "is for him to just continue growing."

That's where Carr comes in. A wideout is only as good as the quarterback tasked with getting him the ball. Besides being top-shelf, Carr also has a great relationship with Cooper. That's a winning combination.

"I just feel comfortable throwing him any route, whether it's him coming in the middle, on the outside, deep, short," Carr said. "He's worked his tail off and proven to me that he can really do it all."

Cooper, though, sees so much more he can do to improve his game. Whenever he watches fellow Alabama alumnus Julio Jones, it's clear to him that there's another level.

The Atlanta Falcons' All-Pro wideout is "regarded as one of the best in the league right now. Some of the things that he does out there are just amazing," Cooper said. "Obviously, if you want to be one of the best, you've got to put in the work. There's no other way."

Yep. There's only the right way. Cooper is following it and making a strong impression.

The NFL's voice in China? He's a linebacker on the Raiders

By Paul Gutierrez

September 29, 2017

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- James Cowser had just finished his rookie season as a defensive end/outside linebacker with the Oakland Raiders last winter when Lamonte Winston approached him.

Winston, the Raiders' director of player engagement, wanted to know which off-the-field program Cowser wanted to participate in during the offseason.

"You've got to better yourself out of football," Winston told Cowser, who had a sack and a fumble recovery in six games last season.

Presented a list of activities, Cowser turned his nose up at each, until being asked what "unique" talent he might have.

"I speak Chinese," said Cowser, who picked up the language while serving a two-year LDS mission in Hong Kong and Macau from December 2009 through December 2011.

Winston went to work and Cowser landed an internship with NFL China, which is headquartered in Shanghai. Those two weeks in China and an ensuing Internet presence landed Cowser an unlikely role as the face of the NFL for that country and its 1.4 billion potential new fans.

Cowser has since done a handful of Internet videos for the Chinese audience explaining the decidedly American game to an eager audience from the most populous country on the globe.

He has described the NFL scouting combine, taken his Chinese audience behind the scenes of the NFL draft fan experience, broken down picks 2 through 5 in the draft and facilitated an interview at the draft in Philadelphia with ESPN's Louis Riddick.

The draft pieces garnered more than 1.1 million views each.

Now, through ESPN International partner Tencent, Cowser is going deeper. The second-year NFL player, who was an undrafted free agent out of Southern Utah, is the host and star of his own webisode series that will air in China every Wednesday -- Oct. 4 through Jan. 21.

"I love it," Cowser said this week. "It's awesome. A lot of us take pride in taking part in something bigger than ourselves, right? I mean, that's why we love football. You're surrounded by brothers. You're surrounded by things that are bigger than yourself. To be able to speak Chinese allows me to be a part of something even greater."

With the blessing of the Raiders, a camera will follow Cowser around during the week to show his Chinese audience how life in the NFL works, while expanding the NFL's brand in the Asian market.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

The entire show will be in Chinese -- with English subtitles domestically -- and Cowser will discuss the team's protest and show of unity during the national anthem prior to last week's loss at Washington in next week's premier webisode.

Cowser, who visited late martial arts star Bruce Lee's Hong Kong home, is already using his "Chinese Connection" to interact with and cultivate his Far East fans via his Chinese Twitter account.

"Basic stuff," Cowser said. "What's this person like? What's that person like? Good luck in the game."

The project's senior editor, Michelle Zhang, said Cowser was recently asked his goal in a game.

Cowser's answer? To one day score a touchdown and jump into the Black Hole. Surely that required further explanation for his overseas audience.

"I have an opportunity to show the Chinese people a sport that I love, people that I love, and just bridge a gap between cultures," Cowser said.

"It's China. What other team has this opportunity? What other player in the NFL speaks Chinese?"

As such, he can introduce new fans to one of the Raiders' best-known slogans: "Just win, baby."

Cowser huddled with Zhang, to make sure he was on point and had the accents just right as she wrote out the characters and Cowser exhaled.

"Jiu yao ying," he said.

Michael Crabtree keeps low profile as others sing his praises

By Vic Tafur

August 23, 2017

Michael Crabtree turns 30 in a few weeks, and the onetime enigmatic 49er has been a model of drama-free consistency since joining the Raiders.

Scratch that. Crabtree has actually gotten better with age.

He had a career-high 89 catches for 1,003 yards and eight touchdowns last season, and just turned in a mistake- and day-off-free training camp. In a preseason game Saturday night, Crabtree caught a short pass, juked Rams cornerback Troy Hill to the ground and skipped in for a 13-yard touchdown.

But he is letting that play do the talking for him. Other than his clothing line, Crabtree keeps a low profile, and he turned down numerous requests to talk about this season or returning home to Dallas for Saturday's preseason game.

"My brother would always tell me stories about him when they were in San Francisco together and just the things that he could do," Derek Carr said. "Now I'm seeing him do those same things. He's not slowing down. Crab is a guy that genetically he's going to play as long as he wants to play. It's not going to slow down for him."

An example came in Saturday's game. During a 31-yard catch by Amari Cooper, if you had looked at the other side of the field you might have seen some smoke.

Crabtree "ran a go-route on that one," Carr said. "You watch Crabtree run on that play and you can (see) he has not slowed down one bit. He knew on that certain play he wasn't even getting the ball. The corner was 20 yards off and he still tried to outrun the guy and it looked impressive."

Crabtree knows, however, the ball is coming his way when the Raiders are in the red zone. His 17 regular-season touchdown receptions during his two years with Carr are tied for sixth most in the NFL since 2015.

"He's been pretty darn good since he's been here for us," Raiders head coach Jack Del Rio said. "He's been a very reliable target for Derek. I think they're comfortable with the rapport they have. He's had a strong camp and is playing well for us. I'm very pleased with the way things are going there."

There's a lot of trust between Carr and Crabtree, as evidenced by the quarterback throwing a fade for the game-winning two-point conversion in last year's season opener in New Orleans. Raiders cornerback TJ Carrie sees it every day in practice.

Especially when he says he has Crabtree blanketed and Carr still fires in a completion.

"He could be covered to the max and DC will slip it in there where only he might be able to get it with one hand," Carrie said. "Or he might be able to get it with just a certain type of body position."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“That just goes to the strength of how much the bond they’ve created together over the last couple of years has grown.”

Many NFL scouts and front-office types think that Crabtree has the best hands in the NFL, and Carrie agrees.

“Some of the grabs he does are pretty remarkable,” Carrie said.

Fifty-six of Crabtree’s 89 receptions went for a first down last season — tied for ninth most in the NFL. If there is an area of the turf where he wants to set up shop at 7-8 yards down the field, he will get there. And put the “open” sign up.

“He has great hands,” Cooper said. “He plays physical at the line of scrimmage; no one can ever jam him. And even when he’s still covered, he can still come down with the catch. So, he has a great skill set.”

Those hands of Crabtree’s are not only great at catching the ball, but also at buying him some space when he takes off from the line of scrimmage

“I usually use my feet to get separation off the line of scrimmage or at the top of my route,” Cooper said. “But, one of the things I’ve learned from him is you can also get the same results using your hands.”

And don’t let the low-key swag fool you. Crabtree does get excited, when it comes to the Raiders offense.

Once called 'mediocre' with 49ers, Michael Crabtree proving clutch for Raiders

By Paul Gutierrez

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- My, how times have changed for Michael Crabtree.

It was not that long ago when he was derided as a -- choose one: (A) mediocre (B) weak (C) sorry (D) all of the above -- receiver by Richard Sherman after the 2013 NFC Championship Game.

Crabtree, then with the San Francisco 49ers, could not haul in a potential game-winning touchdown pass from the 18-yard line that day against Sherman’s Seattle Seahawks. Or, a year earlier, from five yards out on three straight plays in Super Bowl XLVII against the Baltimore Ravens.

But now in his third season with the Oakland Raiders, Crabtree has become quarterback Derek Carr’s go-to guy late in games.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"If there's one thing about Crab," Carr said, "it doesn't matter what happens throughout the rest of the game. He always shows up."

Like at the end of the Raiders' 31-30 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs last Thursday night, a white-knuckle affair that saw Oakland run four pass plays from inside the Chiefs' 10-yard line with less than 8 seconds to play, including two untimed plays.

Crabtree caught a 1-yard touchdown pass on the right side of the end zone with 3 seconds to go, but was called for pushing off.

Then, after a pair of Chiefs defensive holding calls on Carr incompletions gave the Raiders life, Crabtree ran a quick curl in front of the left pylon and hauled in a pass from a rolling-out Carr for the score with no time on the clock. Giorgio Tavecchio's PAT won the game for Oakland.

"D.C. said, 'Catch the ball,'" Crabtree said. "I went out there and made a play."

Much like in Week 4 of the 2016 season at Baltimore, when Crabtree hauled in a 23-yard touchdown pass with 2 minutes, 12 seconds remaining for a 28-27 victory.

Or when he caught Carr's two-point conversion in the 2016 opener at New Orleans on a fade to the left corner with 47 seconds to play for a 35-34 win.

In fact, the Raiders have three one-point victories since the start of last season, and Carr has thrown the game-winning pass to Crabtree in each of those games.

"We didn't have a choice," Crabtree said, speaking specifically about the Kansas City win, though he could have been talking about the victories over the Ravens or Saints, too. "We had to do what we had to do to get this 'W.'"

"It starts at practice. Coach puts us in these situations in practice and we really strive to be great in practice. So, all we're doing is putting it on the game tape."

Crabtree's six TD catches lead the Raiders and his 28 catches and 328 receiving yards rank second on the team. He also missed one game with a chest injury.

Sure, the Raiders in general -- and Crabtree in particular -- are feeling energized after beating the Chiefs to end a four-game losing streak, their longest skid in three years.

But it will matter little if Oakland is not able to maintain momentum at the Buffalo Bills this weekend.

"We always felt like we could win every game," Crabtree said. "We just had to fix what was broken. You lose four in a row, we couldn't find a way. We found a way and won."

With late passes to Crabtree. And there is little mediocre, weak or even sorry about that, right?

Bruce Irvin relishes ‘bad cop’ role in teaching Raiders’ players

By Vic Tafur

August 6, 2017

Countless movies and TV shows featuring the police can’t be wrong.

The “good cop, bad cop” routine works. Raiders defensive leaders Khalil Mack and Bruce Irvin relish playing those roles when it comes to helping and getting the most out of the team’s rookies and second-year players.

“Khalil will pull you to the side, try to talk you through some things,” Irvin said. “I will get on you and I don’t care who’s listening, I don’t care about your feelings. We’re both just trying to motivate these guys and teach them everything we know.”

Linebacker Shilique Calhoun recently said Irvin and Mack were the two toughest coaches on the field. And that’s not by accident.

“I try to be hard on them,” Irvin said. “You can ask anybody here. I talk the most s—, and I don’t let up. That’s how I would want someone to be with me. ... Yeah, I am definitely a little more outspoken than Khalil.”

Irvin has been impressed with two of the rookies on the defensive line at training camp, citing Eddie Vanderdoes and Treyvon Hester.

“They get after it,” Irvin said. “The good thing about that is they’re making plays now, and they don’t even know what they’re doing. They’re out here with their college minds and their college moves and they’re still winning on some plays and having a good camp.

“Once they get our system down, and we’ve hand our hands on them for a little while, I really think they are going to do some good stuff for us.”

Irvin and Mack definitely needed more help last season, as they had 18 of the team’s league-low 25 sacks. Irvin says maybe he and Mack just didn’t do a good enough job of leading and making enough plays.

“It’s definitely on us to get this defense to the next level,” Irvin said. “Two alpha males. Two alpha dogs not going to take anything from anybody in the league. We both really respect each other and are going to do whatever we can to get the rest of the guys ready for battle. ...

“We are a confident group, and we feel like we have everything we need to be a top-five, top-10 defense. I think all the pieces are in place. The guys are working hard, trying to get better. That’s all I ask of guys is to leave it out there for us.”

The defensive players could pick up something even from new running back Marshawn Lynch, who came out of retirement to play for his native city of Oakland and with Irvin, his former Seattle teammate. The “Beast Mode” physical, in-your-face style is contagious, Irvin said.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Oh, yeah, that will affect the whole team,” he said. “That’s not just running backs or offensive line or offense, that’s everybody. When we were in Seattle, and the defense would see him break five or six tackles on a long run, it got us hyped up. That’s our mentality: physical and get after you.”

“That Beast Mode mentality definitely rubs off. ... He is definitely a Raider: rugged, nasty, hair, goatee. That’s the Raider image right there.”

Briefly: Receiver Amari Cooper missed his third straight practice with what looks to be a minor leg injury. Head coach Jack Del Rio wouldn’t address specific injuries, but said none of them is significant. That also would go for three of the team’s first four draft picks – cornerback Gareon Conley (shin), safety Obi Melifonwu (undisclosed) and tackle David Sharpe (ankle) – as they didn’t practice again Sunday. That doesn’t go for backup safety Keith McGill, who broke his foot in Saturday’s practice. ... Del Rio said undrafted cornerback Breon Borders “came in with a serious, no-nonsense approach. He was doing so well with the ‘2s’, we put him with the ‘1s.’” ... Day 9 of left tackle Donald Penn’s holdout came and went, with neither side budging.

Raiders' punter Marquette King gets kicks online

By Vic Tafur

August 5, 2017

Social media is a way for fans to get inside, to see professional athletes behind the scenes. But in Marquette King's case, it's a means to get out, a chance for the Raiders' punter to break free and express himself.

Three years after the pressure had gotten too great, King is now a bona fide celebrity. And it's not because he is one of the better kickers in the league, but because he is its unlikeliest social media star.

King tells his followers on Twitter everything. Except for the times his arms used to tingle and go numb after games.

"I used to have panic attacks because I was so hyped up from the game," King said, sitting in the Napa Marriott courtyard last week, before a training camp practice. "It was tough driving home, and then I wouldn't be able to get to sleep until 3 in the morning.

"And people would say, 'But you just punt the ball.' ... OK, give me a 45-yard punt with hang time and aim it for that corner. All right, then."

Back then he couldn't, or didn't want to, get the words out when reporters tried to interview him after his best games. King, 28, no longer avoids the media, but today he is trying to escape a mob of autograph seekers as he looks for a quiet place for this interview.

The once-shy undrafted punter from Fort Valley State has 282,000 followers on Instagram and 161,000 on Twitter. He flooded both those and his Facebook account with daily posts this offseason. From punting footballs into basketball hoops and pizza floats into pools to traveling around the country and appearing at Comic-Con or other sporting events or concerts, King has been everywhere and done everything the past seven months.

And he's shared it all with the fans.

"The cool part about social media is that people can see you're not a robot," King said. "I remember when I used to watch Mike Vick play, I would think that he would play the game, go into the locker room and plug his back into the wall until the next Sunday.

"Fans get to see that we have a life, too. We're normal, just like them. That's also the fun part, showing them that I do the same stuff that they do."

Most fans, though, don't wear Power Ranger masks in public, or take videos of themselves swiping strangers' 49ers hats at restaurants. King also punted a birthday cake for Derek Carr on social media.

"I do it to make people's days better," King said. "Humiliate myself or do something silly to make somebody laugh."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

King, who spoke at Twitter two weeks ago about building his brand, was scared when he first started posting frequently a little more than a year ago.

“You just have to be smart about your decisions, about what you put out,” King said.

One teammate and some fans didn’t think one of his decisions this offseason was very smart.

In the regular-season finale on Jan. 1, Broncos cornerback Aqib Talib ripped off and broke Raiders receiver Michael Crabtree’s gold chain in what he later said was a premeditated move. Crabtree was upset about it, largely because Talib wasn’t penalized.

Fast forward a month, and King was working the Pro Bowl sideline, doing social media posts for NFL.com. He had Talib, playing in the game for the AFC, tug at a chain from King’s neck, and the two posted the picture on Instagram and Twitter and laughed about it.

King soon deleted his post when Raiders linebacker Bruce Irvin posted a comment, saying “No loyalty SMH.” If Irvin was shaking his head, many Raiders fans were doing a lot more, ripping King for his act of treason for weeks on social media.

“It was nothing against Crabtree at all,” King said. “It came out the wrong way, I guess. People try to create a story out of nothing.

“My intentions were more to make fun of (Talib). He is going around snatching people’s chains and stuff. I was just trying to find a way to make light of the situation. At the end of the day, when this game is over, are you going to hate somebody for what they did in a game? This game doesn’t last long.”

King doesn’t think Crabtree had an issue with the post, but knows better than to tell the 6-foot-3, 250-pound Irvin to calm down.

“He is like one of those ‘Mortal Kombat’ versus DC characters,” King said. “Big as I don’t know what. ... But we do a good job of not letting stuff off the field bother us in the locker room, so it’s all good.”

King just goes about his business, kicking the ball into the clouds and making fans laugh. He, for one, is not surprised he has gained so many followers so fast.

“Not really, because as long as you’re organic and being yourself, people are going to latch on to you,” King said. “That’s the cool part.”

King will often type up posts or tweets and leave them on his screen for 5-10 minutes before publishing – to give himself a chance to change his mind, and sometimes bring in a friend as a filter or for approval.

“Because it’s fun to have edgy stuff and stir things up a little bit, but not to the extreme,” King said. “I do like messing with people, though.”

Let’s face it, trolling for a reaction on Twitter can be fun.

“Yeah, it is fun,” King said. “A lot of people get so caught up in what you’re doing or why. They think that people are what they post on social media, but sometimes it’s not real. It’s fun to mix it up, and then people think they might know what you’re thinking, but they really don’t.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Even teammates who are around him a lot don't know what King is thinking sometimes.

"He's ... he's a tough one ... to dial in and figure out who he is," long snapper Jon Condo said. "He's having a fun time, and the social media stuff gets his mind off football, gets his mind off thinking about always having to perform. There's a stress level that you have to be able to manage."

Condo said King works very hard to be the best punter in the league. (He led the NFL with 38 punts of 50 yards or more last season.)

"And he always has a smile on his face now," Condo said. "He really enjoys the social media stuff. He's out there for everybody. ... It's fun to watch him interact with strangers in public."

King said he and Marshawn Lynch enjoy engaging random people on the street. King and the no-longer retired running back have a mutual friend, and King would have fans going crazy when he had posts with Lynch before he signed with the Raiders this summer.

"Marshawn brings a unique personality," King said. "He brings the edginess. He's definitely what a Raider stands for. He's real, organic and a wrecking ball. He is definitely going to be a huge part of the team."

Lynch famously doesn't have a lot of use for the media, much like King didn't used to.

Media relations senior director "Will Kiss was on me a lot about talking to the media and just being myself," King said. "Before that, I felt like I wasn't going to have control of the situation. You reporters have a lot of power. You could say Mar-cuet did this and everybody believes you. ... "

King was asked why he said his name Mar-cuet when it's been pronounced Mar-ket his entire five-year career.

"Tomato, tomahto," he said. "Depends how I feel. Or if people say it one way, I just roll with that. ... I actually prefer 'Your Highness.'"

King went on to give another reason for his former reticence. He explained that whenever he kicked well early in his career, and felt good about it, he did worse the following week. So he tried to stay even-keeled, and that included turning down interview requests after good games.

King lifted that policy last season, and then got so excited things were going well that he lost his mind a couple of times.

In a Dec. 4 game against the Bills, he picked up the official's flag (the penalty had been against the other team) and started doing a country hoedown dance with it.

"I really didn't know I couldn't pick up the flag," King said, smiling. "I swear. I was surprised when they gave me a penalty."

The following game, after the Chiefs' Tyreek Hill ran a punt back for a touchdown, King chased him down in the end zone and bumped him. Two weeks, two unsportsmanlike conduct penalties against the punter.

"He was so fast," King said. "I got emotional about it and felt I had to chase him down after. I take punting seriously, and he and I were chatting back and forth before he ran the punt back. That sucked. Because he ran that back just like he told me he was going to.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“All I could do was chase him down. It hurt ... because I let the team down when I did that.”

Chiefs tight end Travis Kelce then went viral after the penalty, mocking King after Hill’s touchdown with a horse-riding simulation that King had done in an earlier win over the Denver Broncos.

“I love that guy,” King said. “I love everybody, man.”

Raiders' Karl Joseph enters second season with two legs to stand on

By Jerry McDonald

June 16, 2017

ALAMEDA — There was considerable scrutiny on top draft picks Gareon Conley and Obi Melifonwu throughout the offseason, additions expected to provide immediate help to the Raiders' beleaguered secondary.

Karl Joseph, the second-year player who was taken No. 14 overall in 2016, came away impressed.

"They've been great, man," Joseph said after the Raiders closed shop until reporting for training camp in Napa on July 28. "They're very smart. I think they're probably a step ahead of where I was last year because I couldn't participate in everything, so they picked up everything pretty fast."

As a rookie, Joseph was coming off a torn right ACL that ended his last year at West Virginia after five games. While Joseph's first season wasn't a washout, his reputation as a play-maker and fearless hitter wasn't always in evidence either as it took time to get comfortable.

Joseph started Weeks 3 through 12, missing the last four games with a toe injury before starting the wild card playoff loss to Houston. He was fourth on the team with 74 tackles, had six passes defensed, an interception and a fumble recovery.

A spectator through his first off-season, Joseph hasn't missed a day going in to Year 2, falling short at a bowling center during a team outing but making progress on the field.

"It's a whole different world," Joseph said. "I feel like night and day, really, from now to last year. I came in hurt and I couldn't really do much. This year, just being able to go through the off-season with the guys, more than just the football part of it, but like just being able to bond with the guys and get a feel for some of the guys I think has been very helpful."

Once on the field, Joseph showed flashes of what the Raiders expect — a 5-foot-10, 207-pound pocket missile reminiscent of former Indianapolis Colts safety Bob Sanders. The problem was Joseph was never truly playing without thinking as his knee slowly got better.

"I didn't feel as strong or explosive as I could've been," Joseph said. "Just being able to go through this off-season, working in the weight room and going through OTAs, I feel like a new person. I feel a lot stronger and faster. I was kind of timid at certain times to plant off that knee. Now it's just a thing in the back of my mind. I'm more focused on football than injuries."

With Melifonwu checking in at 6-4, 219, the plan is to have him take over some of the pass defense against tight ends rather than have Joseph in a point guard vs. power forward scenario in the middle of the field.

A big part of the off-season has been mixing in Conley and Melifonwu with corners David Amerson, Sean Smith and T.J. Carrie as well as Joseph and Reggie Nelson at safety. Assistant head coach John

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Pagano was brought in with making defensive communication a priority, and the hope is the Raiders secondary will be better in terms of knowing their assignments as well as changing things up to confuse opposing quarterbacks.

“That’s something that I think we got pretty comfortable with these OTAs and mini-camp,” Joseph said. “I think we got a lot better than we were last year already. We still have a lot of work to do, but I think we’re moving in the right direction right now as far as that.”

Pagano is eager to see what Joseph can do with an entire off-season of learning behind him.

“As a rookie, they don’t understand the game quite as fast as other guys get it,” Pagano said. “A guy like Karl, he’s going to be 50 percent. The mental part is going to be so much better in terms of truly understanding it. He’s done a great job of taking notes. He wants to know everything from every detail of why we’re doing this. When they understand that, they can play faster.”

Raiders safety Karl Joseph feels like ‘new person’

By Michael Gehlken

OAKLAND, Calif. — Karl Joseph was behind.

He has come far enough to appreciate that now.

The Raiders safety and 2016 first-round pick missed the entire spring as a rookie because of a torn ACL he suffered during his senior year at West Virginia. He participated in training camp but was not fully confident in his surgically repaired right knee. Even during the season, it affected him.

He wasn’t himself. Not always.

This year is different.

“I feel like a new person,” Joseph said.

The Raiders veterans will report to training camp on Friday. For Joseph, this marks a chance to further distance himself from an injury that contributed to an uneven debut. The team hopes its hard-hitting defensive back can build off his rookie experience to make a leap in 2017. In some ways, he already has.

Joseph was a full participant in the spring. He looked more confident, moving more effortlessly. He felt himself on a football field for the first time since suffering the non-contact injury during an October practice in 2015.

“Coming off that injury, I didn’t feel as strong or explosive as I know I could’ve been,” said Joseph, who made nine starts in 12 games last year with 44 tackles and an interception. “Just being able to go through this offseason working in the weight room and going through OTAs, I feel like a new person. I feel a lot stronger and faster. I'm not really timid like I was last year. I was kind of timid at certain times to plant off that knee. ...

"Now, it's just a thing in the back of my mind. I don't really feel it, so now I'm just focused on football more than the injuries and stuff like that."

The Raiders knew it'd be a process for Joseph in 2016.

They showed patience in the offseason, shutting him down at various periods to allow his knee time to recover. Joseph did not see any defensive snaps in either of the first two weeks. The Raiders were grilled in both, allowing a combined 819 passing yards to Drew Brees and Matt Ryan.

Joseph joined the mix after that.

While he had a veteran to rely upon in safety Reggie Nelson, he lacked the foundation of a full offseason. Chemistry and communication are required for any functional secondary, and such qualities take time to develop. While they surfaced more as the season progressed, ideally, that development will come in a more low-pressure environment.

The 23-year-old finally experienced that in the spring.

"It's a whole different world," Joseph said. "I feel like night and day, really, from now to last year. I came in hurt and I couldn't really do much. This year, just being able to go through the offseason with the guys, more than just the football part of it, but like just being able to bond with the guys and get a feel for some of the guys I think has been very helpful."

'O.G.' Marshawn Lynch doling out wisdom to young Raiders RBs

By Paul Gutierrez

June 15, 2017

ALAMEDA, Calif. -- Marshawn Lynch's impact on a youthful Oakland Raiders running back room this offseason?

Exactly what the Raiders hoped for and expected. Go ahead and pick up what Oakland's Mighty Mites are putting down.

"He's an O.G. [original gangsta] in this league," said DeAndre Washington, "been around for a long time, got a lot of experience."

Jalen Richard concurred.

"It's been really cool to sit back and learn from him," Richard said. "Obviously, me being as young as I am and him being as seasoned as he is, I've had chances to watch his highlights and stuff as I was trying to perfect my craft. To actually have him here in person and have that physicality there, talk to him after each run and see what his thoughts were, is really helpful."

The skill sets of Washington and Richard, who are both 5-foot-8, are remarkably different from that of the violent-running Lynch, who came into the NFL as a first-round draft pick in 2007.

Washington and Richard, who were rookies last season, are change-of-pace backs compared with a lead back like Lynch. But if all goes according to the Raiders' plan, the two younger backs will play off each other well and improve upon Oakland's No. 6-ranked total offense of last year.

And that's not counting seventh-round draft pick Elijah Hood, whose body type and running style echo Lynch's.

"He's been telling us that, me and all the other guys in the room, like DeAndre and Elijah [Hood], the young guys, giving us his take on what works for him," Richard said. "Everybody's body is different, so keeping your body fresh might be different, but the little tricks and things that he uses on the field as a running back, he explains to us how we could implement it into our running style. He's been very helpful to everyone in the room."

Last year, Latavius Murray -- who was allowed to leave in free agency and signed with the Minnesota Vikings -- had 12 rushing touchdowns while rushing for 4.0 yards per carry and 788 yards in 14 games for the Raiders. He missed two games with turf toe.

Richard, who broke off a 75-yard touchdown run against the New Orleans Saints on his first NFL carry, rushed for 491 yards and the TD on 83 carries as an undrafted rookie.

"I still have that chip on my shoulder," Richard said. "I feel like I still have to go out and perform like I'm trying to make the team, which I am. Nothing is guaranteed every year."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

"I like feeling that need to continue to prove myself and prove my spot here. That's what I've been doing this offseason and I look forward to training camp."

Washington, a fifth-round pick last year, had 467 rushing yards and two TDs on 87 attempts.

"I think I came on a little bit stronger toward the end of the year," Washington said. "That just came with repetition, getting more reps, game play, and just being in this offense and getting used to the terminology and things. So now I have a better feeling with what the guys are going to do, what everybody's [doing] on the field instead of just what I'm doing. So it definitely can help me going into this season."

The last time Lynch, 31, played a full season, in 2014, he led the NFL with 13 rushing TDs while rushing for 1,306 yards on 4.7 yards per carry. Injuries limited him to seven games and 3.8 yards per carry in 2015 for the Seattle Seahawks.

With a few big years in his native Oakland, Lynch could potentially be on his way to the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio. So yeah, he has a lot to give before he exits ... again.

"Just being in the room with him," Washington said, "dissecting film, picking up pointers and different things that can [help] us take our game to the next level has definitely been huge the few weeks that he's been here."

Marshawn Lynch's love for Oakland led to NFL return

By Vic Tafur

June 15, 2017

It was quite a sight to see.

As Raiders' running back Marshawn Lynch took the field at the team's practice facility a couple of weeks ago, he was joined by 2,000 kids. They were from Oakland, just like Lynch, and other parts of the Bay Area.

They were there for his free football camp, but it was symbolic as well. Lynch has said he came out of retirement for the kids and Oakland residents who are losing the team in three years to Las Vegas. They will be on the field with him for all of the Raiders' games this season.

"Look at all my babies," Delisa Lynch, Marshawn's mom, said, as she took it all in at the 11th annual Fam 1st Foundation Football Camp. "This is unbelievable. We love Oakland, and I am very proud of my son. There is definitely a buzz around the city, and we are loving it."

Raiders veteran players report to training camp in Napa on Friday, and there is even more excitement around the team than there might normally be coming off a 12-4 season and a first playoff appearance in 14 years. That's because of Lynch, and what he means to the people of Oakland.

Like Penn, former Seahawks teammate Michael Robinson was at the camp, putting kids through various drills. He said Lynch has been talking about playing for his hometown team since 2010.

“Just look at these kids’ faces,” Robinson said. “Marshawn has always been about making a difference at home.”

Lynch, 31, has long been active in the community, but the former Oakland Tech and Cal star has been even more visible this offseason because his work address is now 15 minutes away in Alameda.

He helped out at defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr.’s football camp, rewarded kids with good report cards with free haircuts, hosted community bike-ride, water-park and bowling parties, produced a movie about Oakland street life, and — to keep it from closing — bought a soul food restaurant in Emeryville.

Lynch has declined interview requests at several of these events — not talking to the media has become part of his brand. But he did talk to reporters once, after a Raiders offseason workout last month, and made no bones about his focus.

“With me being from here, continuing to be here, gives (kids) an opportunity — they get to see someone that actually did it, from where they’re from and for the team they probably idolize,” Lynch said. “I got the whole town riding with me.”

More than just the town, as Lynch has the highest-selling jersey in every state west of Montana, according to NFLShop.com.

The 2,000 kids at the recent camp, meanwhile, proudly wore black T-shirts with the Fam 1st Foundation logo and the names of Lynch and foundation co-founders Marcus Peters (the Chiefs’ Pro Bowl cornerback) and Josh Johnson (the Giants’ backup quarterback).

Johnson is Lynch’s cousin and said walks to and from each other’s houses as kids were adventures.

“You never knew what you would see,” he said. “A lot of stuff you’re not supposed to see as kids. But we’re using sports now and camps and other events to help this next group of Oakland kids out. Hard work pays off. That’s the message.”

Peters grew up in Oakland, and calls Lynch a friend and a role model. And a hero to the kids of Oakland.

“He shows them anything is possible,” Peters said. “A lot of these kids don’t get much growing up in Oakland. We just want them to know they can do anything they want to. ... Marshawn really cares about them. We all do.”

Lynch tweeted out “Town bizzness, breath on me,” when he signed with the Raiders.

Sometimes — most of the time — “Town bizzness” is tough love, as Lynch barks at the kids at the camp for not running the right route, or not running through the tackling dummy, or just being lazy on a hot day. But there is usually a half-smile, or even a head pat or hug that follows.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Many of the kids knew Lynch's style – running through, not around, would-be tacklers – and took that approach to heart, yelling "Beast Mode!" and choosing not to juke out would-be defenders.

Marcus Peters' dad, Michael, is the football coach at McClymonds and smiled as he watched Lynch deal with the kids at Norton's camp.

"I'm a true Raiders fan," he said. "I don't root for them two times a year, since my son plays for the Chiefs. This is great. The kids on my team are so excited, we went on that bike ride with him, and for him, a star, to be touchable – they go down to his Beast Mode store in Oakland, and he's there sometimes – it's so nice for them."

Castlemont football coach Edward Washington also had some of his players at Norton's defensive camp. And he was just as happy as they were that Lynch wanted to play for the Raiders after hearing the team was moving to Las Vegas.

"It means a lot, because, to be honest, I wasn't too happy with the Raiders when they said they were leaving town," Washington said. "I wasn't going to really support them like I have or like I wanted to. But with Marshawn back, that's real Oakland, and everybody is excited and juiced about it."

"Marshawn does a lot for the community. He'll even just stop in at a practice, and that's big."

An interaction with Lynch, the coaches said, could create a spark in a kid – just as they light a fire under Lynch, a big kid at heart. He was so happy the day he signed with the Raiders that he wore his new helmet home when he left the facility.

When his camp was over, Lynch had a few words for the kids.

"I hope you enjoyed the experience, to be out here and practice where the Raiders do," he said. "I appreciate ya'll."

His mom was smiling the whole time.

"We are blessed," she said.

Marshawn Lynch brings beauty and Beast Mode to Oakland

By Jarrett Bell

June 17, 2017

OAKLAND – One of Marshawn Lynch's cousins worked the front door last week at Beast Mode, the downtown apparel and merchandising store that is undoubtedly a nerve center that captures the buzz about the connection between the Oakland Raiders running back and his hometown.

The man, in his 50s, would only identify himself as Avery, although another of Lynch's relatives maintains that he is better known as "Peanut."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“You’d better be glad he didn’t knock you out,” assures Rolanda, who worked the cash register.

Oh. It seems that “Peanut” also handles personal security for Lynch.

In any event, as Lynch handled his business at the Raiders minicamp, there were no security issues on this visit. Just a steady stream of customers, many of whom were greeted at the door by Avery.

He chatted up two more women who popped in after spending the bulk of the day at the Cannabis Business Summit and Expo nearby at the Oakland Convention Center.

Another out-of-town patron stopped after spotting the store while driving down Broadway. Another shopped while in town for the NBA Finals. And several locals mingled in the mix, too. The store, which opened in February (with another store in Seattle) features an array of licensed merchandise from the line that plays off his nickname.

In a back corner, there’s a set-up for a mini-barber shop. A woman is cutting a boy’s hair, while another kid sits and waits his turn. This is one of the perks that Lynch provides for his community: free haircuts for kids who bring in their report cards.

“This is where his heart is,” Avery said. “Marshawn is all about education and uplifting our kids. Especially those in Oakland.”

Even when Lynch, 31, played for the Seattle Seahawks and Buffalo Bills during the first 10 years of his NFL career, he never really left Oakland. As much as Lynch’s reputation includes his distant relationship with the news media, it is also bolstered by his dedicated community service in his hometown. He’d come home on an off-day before Thanksgiving and pass out turkeys. Stage summer camps. Fund educational initiatives.

That’s why Lynch’s decision to come out of his one-year retirement to play for the Raiders – he insists that he made up his mind when the franchise’s pending move to Las Vegas was finalized in March – has some deep substance.

When Avery was asked to identify people who had tremendous influence on Lynch over the years, he gave a one-word response: “Oakland.”

That’s the city, the big-city challenges, like poverty, educational disadvantages, crime, drugs and so many factors that can derail the type of young people that Lynch used to be. He’s a hero in his hometown now, in part, because he won’t turn his back on it.

“It’s almost a cult-like status that he has,” Raiders owner Mark Davis told USA TODAY Sports. “It’s like the Pope.”

Last month, Lynch, who played his college ball at Cal-Berkeley, tweeted an invite for any and all to join him at his annual “ride-along” bike ride. The next day, hundreds showed up at his high school, Oakland Tech, for the ride to and from Berkeley, escorted by five police cars. It was just one of many examples of Lynch’s appeal.

Then again, it’s Lynch being authentic Lynch.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Lynch would not grant an interview last week but told reporters during a rare press conference at the Raiders' headquarters this month: "Yeah, I got the whole town riding with me. The way we feel just about where we're from is so hard because we know what the struggle is."

He added, "It ain't like I'm saying, 'I'm coming to y'all's city and I'm riding with y'all.' This is actually like born and raised and bred ... and running down them alley ways. I really did that right here and now I get a chance to play here."

What a deal for the Raiders, who have drawn heat from some fans for their upcoming move to Las Vegas in 2020. Lynch is the perfect ambassador to combat some of the controversy, a smart PR and football move by Raiders GM Reggie McKenzie.

"He could've done a lot of PR stuff early on to help this team win a couple more games but not build for the long term, but he never did," said Davis, whose team is coming off a 12-4 record, snapping a 13-year streak of losing seasons.

At the minicamp last week, Lynch moved well in non-contact drills. If he stays healthy, he'll add an important layer – power rushing behind one of the NFL's best and most physical offensive lines – for a unit that is built around emerging quarterback Derek Carr and was among the most productive in the league last year. Add Lynch, tight end Jared Cook and receiver Cordarrelle Patterson to the returning players, and the potential versatility of the offense is striking.

Still, when it comes to Lynch, his impact goes beyond football.

"I know his mom better than I know him," Davis said.

It's a Bay Area thing. Davis said he crossed paths with DeLisa Lynch at boxing matches that featured Andre Ward, the world champion who hails from the Bay Area.

Davis added that the hit on season ticket sales since the franchise announced its move to Las Vegas has been marginal, with those giving up their seats quickly replaced by others on a waiting list.

"If we weren't sold out," Davis said, "we would be because of Marshawn's family."

To play off one of Lynch's signature phrases, it's surely about that hometown action, boss.

Raiders Training Camp: 'We Want This Entire Team to Be Beast Mode'

By Peter King

August 1, 2017

NAPA, Calif.—Sometimes you watch a football practice, and there's great mystery about what the offense is trying to do, what sort of trickery the coordinator wants to pull against the defense.

Then there's the first play of training camp with the pads on ... that's a big deal for both the offense and the defense. Each side want to show from the first snap of camp to the last snap of practice in Week 17 that it's the superior entity. Much anticipation, like horses at the starting gate.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Ones versus ones, first team against first team. Tension.

So we come to the first snap of 2017 in pads at Raiders training camp. Monday. High noon. Blazing sun. Cloudless. Perfect camp day, around 83 degrees. “People come here from all over the world for the wine,” Khalil Mack said. “But not us. For us, it’s the grind. Today is the grind.”

A full house of black-clad fans, so many in LYNCH 24 jerseys or BEAST MODE T-shirts. It’s the homecoming of Marshawn Lynch—the first time anyone had seen him in pads in 19 months, since the end of the 2015 season in Seattle, when his career fizzled. Under the Napa sky, Lynch lined up, single back, behind Derek Carr. The quarterback barked the signals. Even the lone child in a stroller—predictably in a silver-and-black T-shirt—knew what was coming.

Carr took the snap under center, swiveled, and handed to Lynch, who jukeed a bit and was stuck in traffic at the line on a play where the defense is supposed to stand the ballcarrier up by not tackle him—and while the traffic stalled, Lynch put his head down and plowed through the defense and sprinted upfield 20 yards.

Play two: replay, only to the left. Lynch, stuck in traffic, legs churning, nosing for a little crease, and then finding one when the defense slackened, and he was gone up the left side.

Now do you have any question what the Raiders have in mind for the 2017 season?

Watching from the sideline, GM Reggie McKenzie, who met with Lynch last spring and answered the prayers of every Raider fan, dealing with Seattle to acquire the Oakland native, looked on, and approved.

“One of the reasons we brought him here was the toughness,” McKenzie said later. “That weighed heavily. The mentality. The presence. That toughness. We didn’t want just him to be Beast Mode; we wanted this entire team to be Beast Mode. You saw on those plays what he’s going to bring to us.”

What’s interesting about the Raiders right now is they’ve got answers in so many areas. At quarterback, with Derek Carr, the highest-paid player in NFL history. (Carr on his $25 million a year contract: “Now that was a shock.”) At linebacker, with the returning NFL Defensive Player of the Year, Khalil Mack. On both sides of the ball, with a talented supporting cast.

Before they climb Mount Belichick, the question is whether the Raiders can conquer their own division first. Mention the Patriots around here and all you get is respect, not the idea that these guys can kick New England’s rear-ends. The reason: The Raiders haven’t even established themselves as the undisputed power in the AFC West. Last year they finished tied with Kansas City at 12–4 and ceded the division to the Chiefs on the tiebreaker. Coach Jack Del Rio was adamant about Oakland’s AFC West status while walking into practice Monday.

“We understand the Chiefs beat us twice last year,” Del Rio said. “We went 3-3 in our division. We’ve got a lot left to accomplish. That is part of our culture here. We’ve only gotten started here. We got a lot to do.”

Lynch will help. Here are the three big points I heard Monday around the complex about the former Seahawks back:

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

- He was tired of Seattle, and he wanted to come home. When you've finished in a place, and you're fed up (whoever's fault it is), it's over, and you've got to move on. That's what Lynch wanted to do, and that's what the Seahawks wanted to do.
- There was no other team he wanted to play for. If he couldn't play for Oakland, he would have stayed retired.
- When the GM of the Raiders, Reggie McKenzie, met with Lynch before signing him, he had to hear that Lynch was into the Raiders to win, not just to come home and finish his career in his hometown. "It took about five minutes," McKenzie said. "Marshawn said, 'This is why I want to come and play in Oakland,' and he listed all the reasons why, and I just thought, 'Okay, I'm good. We don't need to meet anymore.'"
- He's been a tremendous worker.

"Honestly," said Del Rio, "what I wanted to know was, Is he really committed to doing things our way? He is. Is the passion for real? It is. He loves our city. He loves our organization. Having grown up here, I know what that is. I can sense it. And he has it—he has that love. There's a little special spark, playing for your hometown team."

And so the Raiders cut it loose on Monday. The main foreseeable problem on the playoff express is the absence of holdout left tackle Donald Penn, who is top-12 in the NFL at his position. The Raiders will scotch-tape the tackle spot for a while with journeyman Marshall Newhouse, who is, to put it charitably, a stopgap guy to finish a game. He is not a starting left tackle in a division with four of the best pass-rushers in football (Von Miller, Justin Houston, Joey Bosa, Melvin Ingram). So there's a month to figure that out. But McKenzie might have to throw some money at Penn; there is no way Oakland will want to risk another injury to Carr.

But the Raiders won't have it easy. They've basically got a nine-game road slate, with a four-hour trip to Mexico City to play the Patriots in addition to their regular eight regular roadies. "Look at our schedule," Del Rio said. "East coast, NFC opponents. East coast, AFC opponents. Mexico City for a home game. We're playing on Christmas night in Philly. But that's okay. The whole idea is to commit to returning this franchise to what it once was. We were down a while. We're on a mission to bring it back to excellence, and to sustain that. We've got a ways to go, but we'll work."

THE ATHLETIC

Marshawn Lynch coming home is much bigger than just football

By Marcus Thompson II

September 14, 2017

Theater No. 9 at the AMC Bay Street was all but full, and a line of people waiting to get in partially blocked the entrance to the women's bathroom. The free screening of "War for the Planet of the Apes" — part of the Fam 1st Family Foundation's week of activities — wouldn't start until the host said a few words. But Marshawn Lynch wasn't in the theater.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

He was in the building, walking around like a regular customer in a red shirt and red shorts. But he wasn't in the theater because he was busy fellowshipping. In a nook by the bar, he was helping a youngster, who looked to be about 7, count some money. The kid messed up and Lynch, hovering over him, made him start over.

Finally, Lynch came into the theater and stood along the wall, laughing and joking with friends. He gave his good friend Kevin Parker, director of player development with Cal football, a hard time for struggling through the introductions. And then Lynch took the microphone. The crowd of mostly children and parents roared. In his thanks, as he's known to do, he let a curse word slip out.

Everyone laughed. They know Marshawn. He's family. Their hilarious uncle, or protective brother, their cousin who made it, or the friend who is around so much he becomes a cousin.

That's why his signing with the Raiders is so much bigger than getting a quality running back who can help them win. This is a homecoming. Unbeknownst to the Raiders, this is a statement reverberating through the streets.

This might go down as one of the greatest PR moves in the history of modern sports. This epic spin job should end up in collegiate textbooks.

Marlon Monroe, 40, a defense attorney who has Oakland coursing through his veins, is still furious at Mark Davis for moving the Raiders again. The news about the A's planning to build a stadium on the Peralta site – which would free up the Raiders to have the entire Coliseum complex, as Davis demanded – re-stoked Monroe's anger.

He has the right mind to be done with the Raiders, sell his season tickets. He settled on dumping his Week 2 tickets in protest, missing his first home opener since 2008.

Why couldn't he go all the way with his divorce of his beloved Raiders? Because they got Beast Mode.

"It's a dream come true," Monroe said of the Lynch signing. "Everybody in Oakland has always wished Marshawn was a Raider. Everything he does represents The Town."

The Raiders should be hated in these parts. The bitterness of the fanbase should make their remaining stay about as comfortable as sleeping in the basement on a blowup mattress under an itchy blanket. For the second time, they are bailing on Oakland, leaving behind the debt from their 1995 return.

On top of that, they want to be supported for three years before they leave? The audacity.

Yet, the Oakland Coliseum will be busting at the seams, with bodies and energy, when the Raiders play their home opener on Sunday against the New York Jets. Part of that is because they are good. But a major part of it, at least for the East Bay diehards, will be No. 24.

The Raiders signing Lynch, Oakland's most popular son, has made this season an exciting push towards the Super Bowl. But it's also a celebration. It is rare that a superstar gets to ply his craft for his hometown team. The last star from Oakland was Rickey Henderson leading off for the A's a generation ago.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Oakland has produced its fair share of talent, including current stars Damian Lillard of the Portland Trail Blazers and Marcus Peters of the Kansas City Chiefs. But few have come home with the status and resume Lynch has. And in Oakland's current state, Lynch's presence has a special meaning.

Lynch is the anti-gentrification. He embodies the spirit of Oakland that many residents and natives see dying. The rising popularity of Oakland is connected to its influx of non-Oaklanders. The city has become cool with its plethora of restaurants and indie coffee houses and boutique fashion shops.

Even Oakland Tech, the high school where Beast Mode was born, looks like a mini-Portland on weekends with babies and dogs playing in the grass.

Of course, all this newfound favor surrounding Oakland is a back hand to the pre-gentrification era — or Real Oakland, as natives call it. If you're from here, you know about some of the guidelines to being considered Real Oakland.

He is the face of that contingent. He embodies that spirit: grimy, rough-around-the-edges, compassionate even if a little crazy.

Marshawn is gold teeth, locks and gangsta rap. Tricked out cars, trunk-rattling hip-hop and hype clubs. Burrito trucks, liquor store candy and turf pride. These elements of Oakland, it feels, are getting pushed out for the taste of young urban professionals. This sentiment is underscored by the three professional teams leaving — the Warriors and Raiders are leaving the city altogether, and the A's are leaving East Oakland, a maligned part of the city.

That's one of the reasons Lynch has said he put his Beast Mode shop downtown, and can regularly be seen in or near it. He wants to make sure there is representation from the incumbent Oakland in this sweeping city renaissance.

Lynch playing with the Raiders, already a brand centered on rebellion, is the statement that this part of Oakland won't fade without a fight. That this part of Oakland is just as valuable. And that message is critical to people who are responsible for the young people of Real Oakland.

"It's so important because he is visible and accessible," said Karega Hart, head coach of the Oakland Tech boys basketball team. "We spend so much time trying to help these young people understand their worth. And here he is, a superstar who identifies with them and the culture they come from. They can watch him play on television and then see him around the community. The Oakland stars in the '80s and '90s, they did their work behind the scenes, but you couldn't touch them and be with them. Marshawn, and even Damian Lillard, they do a good job of always being around. You can get to them."

Lynch's whole bent is to violate the status quo. He has become a pied piper for the anti-establishment at heart. And he has rampant support because of it.

The Raiders are good again. They are fun to watch, with their explosive offense and defensive monster in Khalil Mack. It's been the better part of two decades since they were among the NFL relevant, since they were the sexy team.

Considering the circumstances, that should feel like such a slight. Just when the Raiders become worthy, they leave? Ouch.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

But having Lynch makes the Raiders worth investing in again. Not for all. The departure for Las Vegas was a final straw for some that not even Lynch can mend. But if anyone gives the city a reason to get behind the Silver & Black, it's Lynch. And many are taking that reprieve. They want to love the Raiders. They want to be part of the resurgence. And pulling for Oakland's own is license.

Can you imagine if and when he scores a touchdown in Oakland? Can you picture the hype when MC Hammer's "Oaktown" is blasting and Lynch is dancing on the field?

In those moments, many Oaklanders can't be upset about the Raiders betraying the city. They will be too juiced that Marshawn is home.

Khalil Mack earns respect, surprise visit from all-time NFL great

By Scott Bair

June 20, 2017

Khalil Mack passed a somewhat familiar face while walking to a Raiders team meeting. A moustache caused him to do a double take.

“Was that...Dick Butkus?”

Questions stormed through Mack’s mind. Why would the legendary Chicago Bears linebacker be in Alameda? Was the feared Hall of Famer, one of the best defenders in NFL history, a guest speaker during the offseason program? Head coach Jack Del Rio often used creative tactics this time of year. Maybe that was it.

Then Mack walked into the auditorium. Fellow players were seated, and team cameras were focused on him. Something was clearly up.

Mack was surprised to be the man of the hour, given the professional Dick Butkus award by its namesake, who flew from Los Angeles for the event. It’s given to the best professional and collegiate linebacker, and Mack was runner up for the amateur honor at the University of Buffalo.

“It was a pleasant surprise man,” Mack said Thursday, a day after the presentation. “In college I wanted to win it, and being like I won it now, it’s a surreal thing.”

Whether Mack plays linebacker anymore is debatable, but there’s no doubt he’s an elite defender. He was named a 2015 All-Pro at linebacker and defensive end, and was the NFL’s defensive player of the year last season.

He’s physical, immensely productive and excellent under pressure. Stats bear that out. So does the eye test.

Turn on last year’s tape and be wowed, from his interception returned for a touchdown to four fourth-quarter sacks including a strip that beat Carolina. Then there’s the never-fail run defense, which would make an old school football man proud watching.

Butkus is one of those. Most professionals receive the Butkus award without fanfare, but the legend wanted to do this one in person.

“It was awesome. Dick Butkus had his people call and ask if he could come and present,” head coach Jack Del Rio said. “I said, ‘If you’re coming, absolutely. Love to have you.’ It was a big honor to have one of the legends in Dick Butkus come himself and acknowledge a great player for us and a guy who was defensive player of the year last year.”

The presentation’s initial focus was on the presenter.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Butkus highlights flashed across a big screen, showing a Monster of the Midway at his ferocious best.

“Dick Butkus highlights are crazy,” Mack said.

They feature intimidation through violence, an acutle aggresssive style that were effective yet wouldn't fly in today's NFL.

A reporter also reminded him it'd be a fine. “I know, right?” Mack said. “That'd be a lot of money.”

Mack hasn't ever been fined. He has found a way to intimidate through proficiency, to excel in this era without the bravado typically accompanying such stature. His rarely wavers, but leadership has become more vocal with seasons gone by. Check out the peer pressure he applied to keep players out of trouble during summer break, telling them not to throw away a lottery ticket.

There's no chance Mack will do so. He doesn't take true breaks, preferring to stay in work mode during offseason lulls. He typically takes a few days after the season. He won't go find some place exotic before training camp begins July 28, even when most others will.

“Everybody's talking about what they might do, but I doubt it,” Mack said, laughing. “I'm going to stay away from the beach. I grew up in Florida, I had 18 years to go out and walk on the sand, the beach and stuff. So, I'm over it. I'm going to be working.”

THE UNDEFEATED

Raiders' Khalil Mack: 'I can get a whole lot better'

By Jason Reid

August 9, 2017

Khalil Mack spoke so matter-of-factly, you could have easily figured he was joking. But the Oakland Raiders superstar wasn't laughing. And just to make sure there was no ambiguity, Mack repeated his comment, punctuating it with stone-faced, steely-eyed emphasis.

“I can get better,” Mack said. “I can get a whole lot better.”

NFL quarterbacks are likely as eager to read that sentence as they would be about a rules change reducing the offensive line from five positions to four. In fact, to some NFL observers, the thought of Mack being even more of a momentum-changing pass rusher is as unfathomable as the Raiders becoming a championship franchise again. However, look at how far they've already climbed during Mack's brief time out front. So doubt him at your own risk.

What's clear is that in today's game, there's no defensive player better than the Oakland end, who's beginning his fourth season. In 2016, Mack played a key role in the Raiders ending their long playoff drought at 14 seasons. He earned a well-deserved reputation as a “closer,” delivering a spate of big plays in the second half of the season as Oakland emerged as one of the AFC's best teams. Awards voters noticed: Mack was selected the Associated Press 2016 Defensive Player of the Year.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

If not for the broken leg that star quarterback Derek Carr suffered late in the 2016 season, the Raiders may have made a deep postseason run. With Carr recovered and Mack second to none among edge rushers, the Raiders have the look of a Super Bowl contender.

Since reporting to camp in Napa, California, Mack has set the tone for a team that figures to be one of the league's best. And be forewarned, Raiders rookies and newcomers: Mack has no interest in merely being good.

"The one thing about this game, this game I love, is that there's always something you can get better at. It's just a question of how bad you want it," Mack said. "I look back at last year like, there's a lot to improve. It's about polishing up my game in every area. Man, there's a lot of work to do."

Based on the first three years of his career, it seems Mack has already put in a lot.

After a solid rookie season as an outside linebacker (he was particularly strong against the run), Mack, whom the Raiders selected fifth overall in the 2014 draft, was switched to defensive end. Coach Jack Del Rio made the move shortly after his hiring in January 2015. His thinking? That Mack, as a hand-down right end who rarely dropped into coverage, could become an elite pass rusher. Del Rio nailed that one.

Last season, Mack finished with 11 sacks. He was one of only four players in the league with at least 10 sacks and five forced fumbles, and he also returned an interception for a touchdown. During Oakland's six-game winning streak from Week 7 through Week 12, Mack sure looked like the league's top defensive player, recording eight sacks, four forced fumbles and the pick-six. The Raiders finished 12-4, their best record since the 2000 season.

Mack, though, prefers to focus on the team's first two games, in which he had no sacks. Although frustrated, he trusted his process. He remained on the grind from the film room to the weight room, maintaining his belief that the overall results would be good. They were better than good – they were lit.

"More than anything, it's about getting prepared each week," said Mack, who's attempting to become the first Raiders player with at least 10 sacks in three consecutive seasons since Anthony Smith accomplished the feat from 1991-93.

"Kind of getting into 'The Zone,' that's really about preparation. You've got to know where you're supposed to be and what you're supposed to be doing. That starts early [in the week]. You can't fake that, man. You either did your homework or you didn't. Knowing the things you're going to see, all season long, helps tremendously."

His commitment to detail was evident in his breakout 2015 season. He sought tips from coaches daily and applied them.

Mack finished second in the league with 15 sacks (the past two seasons, Mack has a league-high 26 sacks). He became the first player named an Associated Press first-team All-Pro at two positions, defensive end and outside linebacker, in the same season. At only 26, Mack is already a two-time first-team All-Pro and a Defensive Player of the Year award winner.

Mack, not surprisingly, has been compared favorably with the league's best pass rushers. One former player took it even further.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

London Fletcher, who played linebacker for 16 seasons in the NFL, said Mack reminded him of New York Giants legend Lawrence Taylor, arguably the greatest defensive player in NFL history. Yep, Fletcher went there.

Although Mack appreciates the high praise, he won’t go there. At least not quite yet.

“Man, it’s like this: I want to be one of the best who ever played,” Mack said. “That’s one of my goals. That’s not something you get after [three seasons].

“That’s something you have to work for your whole career. That’s what I work toward every day of my life.”

Carr works just as hard. Drafted in the same class, Mack and Carr quickly grew close. Together, they’ve formed the foundation of the renaissance that long-suffering Raiders fans had hoped would occur.

That’s why when Carr was lost for the remainder of the season in a Week 16 victory over the Indianapolis Colts, “it was devastating for me,” Mack said. “Not only the football aspect of it, but Derek is my brother. My brother went down. It was hard for me. Looking back, I didn’t deal with it [well].

“And then from a football aspect, we knew what we lost. To reach that point and have a chance to get one of those things [a Super Bowl championship] you want so badly, and then something like that happens, you almost can’t believe it. And with him not being able to be on the field with us after getting to this point it was ... just incredibly hard, man.”

No matter how the Raiders fare this season, their fans will soon endure more suffering.

In March, the NFL approved the franchise’s move to Las Vegas. The team could remain in Oakland through the 2019 season. But as soon as their new state-of-the-art stadium is ready, the Raiders, who played 13 seasons in Los Angeles before returning to Oakland for the 1995 season, will put Oakland in their rearview mirror.

Raiders players appreciate their fans and acknowledge that the situation is difficult, “but it’s also one of those things we can’t really focus on too much,” Mack said. “Just knowing how this game is, the business aspect of it, there’s only so much we can do as players.

“Look around our locker room now. By the time we move to Vegas, a lot of guys here won’t even be with the team. That’s just because of how the game is. I may not be here. So what can you do? Do your job and focus on being the best you can be each day.”

Out of nowhere: The unlikely tale of Raiders rookie Nicholas Morrow

By Jerry McDonald

August 24, 2017

ALAMEDA — As was often the case in college for Nicholas Morrow, it happened in the blink of an eye.

During training camp in Napa, Derek Carr threw a slant pass off a receiver's hands that bounced into the air. Knowing the Raiders' defense was in an alignment with no free safety, Carr was confident the ball would fall harmlessly to the ground as an incomplete pass.

"This man comes out of nowhere," Carr said. "He runs and dives, 15 yards away, and picks it off. I said, 'Who is this guy?'"

Out of nowhere.

If you wrote the book on Morrow, that would be the title.

Morrow himself wasn't buying the storyline until he made a big play as a junior at Division III Greenville College.

"I got off a block, stripped the ball and scored," Morrow said. "One of the refs came up to me and said, 'Keep doing your thing and you'll get to the league.' That's when it hit me."

Morrow came to the Raiders as an undrafted free agent from a Christian school 45 miles southeast of St. Louis that has an annual enrollment of between 1,000 and 1,200 students.

Playing before crowds numbering in the hundreds, Morrow was a four-year varsity starter, first team All-Upper Midwest Athletic Conference as a junior and senior and the league's defensive player of the year in 2016.

"He stuck out like a sore thumb in a lot of ways," said Robbie Schomaker, Morrow's coach at Greenville. "He just looked and played different than anybody else."

Schomaker devised a scheme built around the 6-foot, 216-pound Morrow. His position was a hybrid: part safety, part linebacker. And why not? Morrow was capable of doing anything from guarding smaller receivers in the slot, taking on tight ends and even rushing the passer.

As fate would have it, the Raiders are looking for such a player on their defense. They drafted Obi Melifonwu of Connecticut in the second round to do those very same things and experimented with cornerback Sean Smith.

Melifonwu will make the roster, but is way behind after an ankle injury on the second day of training camp. Smith has been working outside again of late and embroiled in a legal issue, having been arrested for two felony counts of assault and battery.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

In the meantime, Morrow has gotten some work with the first team as a weak side linebacker, narrowly missed a game-clinching interception against the Los Angeles Rams and has participated on special teams.

A long shot? Absolutely.

Morrow is the first Greenville player to actually sign a contract and make a run at the 53-man roster, although four have had tryouts. If he is one of the more than 1,000 players to be set free on Sept. 2, the practice squad is a possibility either with the Raiders or another team.

Coach Jack Del Rio has preached since the day he arrived that he isn't interested in pedigrees or reputations. Running back Jalen Richard made the Raiders last year after arriving on a tryout basis.

"I think Jalen was a great example," Del Rio said. "Once they get here, it's really a great opportunity for them. We put action behind it. It's not just words. I think they understand that. With Morrow, we'll see how he continues. He's done a good job."

The "out of nowhere" practice interception against Carr was something Schomaker saw on a near weekly basis.

"We're playing Millikin, his man gets into the flat, catches it and has all kinds of space. No way we're catching him," Schomaker said. "He's got a 15-yard head start on Nick. Nick is at a standstill. Nick runs him down at the 20-yard line to save a touchdown."

There was also the time as a senior against Minnesota-Morris that Morrow scored a touchdown as a wildcat formation quarterback, caught a pass, intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble. All in the same game.

Raiders assistant director of player personnel Trey Scott was one of the first scouts to visit Greenville, and up to 20 scouts came out to practice in his senior year. Morrow had pre-draft visits with the Raiders and Kansas City Chiefs, and his pro day along with other Division II and III players in the area was a packed house.

It was heady stuff for someone who didn't play football until the ninth grade in Huntsville, Alabama, and was an offensive lineman until his senior year. There was precious little film of Morrow and recruiting interest was nil.

Morrow was born in St. Louis, and his father, a pastor, encouraged his son to attend Greenville. As his football prowess grew, Morrow considered transferring but decided against it because of relationships he had made.

"We had a saying at Greenville, 'Compete against your best self,'" Morrow said. "So even if my competition wasn't at the highest level, I wanted to make sure I played at my highest level every day. I was competing against what I did yesterday or the day before."

Carr, whose locker was near Morrow's during training camp, likes what he sees.

"Mentally he has a good grasp for the kind of football he was playing before he got here," Carr said. "It's obviously a different level. I don't think that the game is too big for him."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. is also impressed.

“You’re watching the games — a lot of speed, a lot of passion,” Norton said. “The guy shows up when the lights come on. (He’s) really good on special teams, so we like where he is, and the evaluation process continues.”

Morrow is too busy learning to stop and consider how far he has come.

Nelson competing with young Raiders safeties: 'Got homework every night'

By Scott Bair

June 7, 2017

ALAMEDA – Reggie Nelson has been around the block more than anyone on the Raiders defense. His 11th trip around the NFL calendar has begun, following Pro Bowl selections in his last two.

Nelson has a tide chart for the ebbs and flows of an offseason that notes exactly what's required and when to excel when games actually count.

That doesn't mean this 33-year old is on autopilot. Nelson is searching for better from his physical traits and mental approach to the game.

"Man, I've got homework every night," Nelson said after Tuesday's OTA session, sporting his trademark 1000-watt smile. "It's a young man's game. They keep drafting safeties, so you have to compete, man. I study every night no matter what it is. There's always something that I can get better at and that's what I keep trying to tell the young guys, 'Don't think you made it because you're here. There's always something that you can get better at and work at.'"

Nelson is the defense's oldest brother and the secondary's sage. He welcomes a role as mentor to younger safeties growing as professionals. General manager Reggie McKenzie has invested heavily in the position, using a 2016 first-round pick on Karl Joseph and this year's second-rounder on Obi Melifonwu. He wants the defensive backs to play better than a year ago, without losing focus on his desire to continue his career renaissance.

Nelson has 13 interceptions and a pair of Pro Bowl selections the past two seasons, proving to be a ballhawk in the back.

"He's always around the ball," defensive coordinator Ken Norton Jr. said. "He's a veteran. He knows how to play this game, he's been playing for a long time. Our team is so young, it's important for a guy like that to continue to set an example for a lot of the younger players. He has a lot of respect in the room, a lot of respect on the field and he's been playing for a long time for a reason. He's a guy whose experience is very important to us."

A career's experience is vital a free safety, as is his last season with the Raiders. Nelson's always around the ball, but increasing comfort with a new system was clear later in the year and allowed him to provide better help to his cornerbacks and linebackers. Getting to know how Sean Smith and David Amerson react to receiver routes helps him be in the right place at the right time.

"It's just me personally just knowing how that player plays," Nelson said. "D.A. and Sean are going to play something different. They might play a different route. D.A. might play a route one way and Sean might play a different way. So it's just knowing how they're going to react to that route and on that defensive call or what not. So, it's just us as a group; (Joseph), Obi, Conley, whoever's out there, just us communicating as a group and coach has been doing a good job of mixing everybody in there and seeing what everybody can do."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Improved defensive communication is a point of emphasis this offseason, as the Raiders try to avoid big plays that plagued them in 2016. Nelson's a major part of that effort, both in getting teammates in playmaking position and disguising plays before the snap.

"He's somebody that understands the game," said assistant head coach – defense John Pagano, who has been working with defensive backs during the offseason program. "It's just good to be around a guy like that. Excellent pro. He's a pro. Comes to work every day with questions. Writes everything down, listens. That's what it's all about. He's a great example for our younger players to be able to watch a guy like that and be able to see how it's supposed to be done."

The Raiders have a crop of young safeties and cornerbacks learning from and pushing established veterans, a dynamic Nelson believes will help the unit play better.

"It's going to do a lot for the group," Nelson said. "Everybody's stepping up their game and it is what it is. You're out here to compete and keep a job. Like I said, the league keeps getting younger and younger each year and you should be concerned. You have to compete if you want to play. Nothing is going to be handed to you."

Raiders OL Osemele inspired by 'life-changing' offseason travels

By Scott Bair

August 3, 2017

NAPA – Kelechi Osemele is a career-oriented fellow. Football was his sole focus the past decade as the offensive lineman worked tirelessly to turn physical gifts into an NFL career.

Everything else took a backseat. The sacrifice, it seems was worth it. Osemele has been named an All-Pro and a Pro Bowler. He won a Super Bowl and signed a record contract for his position group. All that in five whirlwind years.

This offseason, Osemele allowed himself to breathe. The 28-year wanted to get away, to experience something brand new by travelling to seven countries and six American cities this offseason. These escapades were largely spontaneous, a complete break from his decade focused solely on football.

“I travelled a lot as a kid so I knew I liked it, but once I signed my letter of intent at Iowa State, that was it. I had a narrow focus,” Osemele said on NBC Sports California’s Raiders Insider Podcast. “I was more worried about making the pros and paying off my mom’s house. I wasn’t thinking about travelling like most college kids are. I couldn’t take a leap year. Between the summer workouts and the season, I was locked in. I was driven. It was all about my career at that point. Travelling abroad (as an adult) is always something I’ve wanted to do, and signing my new contract gave me the freedom to do something for myself.”

Osemele planned a trip to Australia with then teammates Brynden Trawick and Taiwan Jones. They ended up in New Zealand and Thailand. His mates went home but Osemele continued on his own, finding adventure through the kindness of strangers and connections through social media. He ended up in Italy and England, Hawaii and Iceland and several beautiful spots across the continental United States.

He climbed a bridge, rode an elephant and jumped a rope on fire. He stood on glaciers and bathed in hot springs. He rafted through whitewater (his boat totally flipped), finding adventure at every turn. Bungee jumping off a perfectly good cliff, however, was his highlight. Watching that leap play out on social media made head coach Jack Del Rio’s heart skip a beat, but it got Osemele’s going like few other moments in life.

“Jumping off that cliff was one of the best adrenaline highs I’ve ever had,” Osemele said. “It felt like my first NFL game. Having to hype yourself up to do something you’ve never done before was really cool. I had a two-day high off of that. I had so much energy I could barely sleep the night before.

“There were a lot of exciting things, and I’ve never felt that alive before. You can’t mimic that. The only thing I can liken it to was the Super Bowl. It was that type of high, that type of adrenaline. It was an amazing feeling.”

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Osemele took long trips during dead periods and short ones during the offseason program. Despite his adventures, Osemele never broke his workout routine. Strength coach Joe Gomes stayed in contact, and gave him workout plans and gyms to use abroad four or five times per week.

"I liked being able to find out I could balance my life like that," Osemele said. "I felt like my first four years (in the NFL) was all work, to be honest. I was lifting 5-6 times a week. I would live in the facility. I've found having a work/life balance is a lot healthier for me."

Osemele got addicted to travel this spring, and plans to globe trot again next offseason. The first go-round was transformative, that gave him new perspective on life and renewed passion for his work by leaving comfort zones.

"It was about opening up your world," Osemele said. "I put myself in a completely different country, in settings I've never experienced before and just figure things out. It was a life-changing experience."

'Sky's the limit' for rising Raiders - Kelechi Osemele

By Francis Okupa
September 28, 2017

When Nigerian-American offensive guard Kelechi Osemele left the Baltimore Ravens during free agency in the summer of 2016 few would have predicted the Oakland Raiders would land the rising young lineman.

The Ravens had made the playoffs in six of their last eight seasons, including a Super Bowl win in 2013. The Raiders hadn't reached the postseason since 2002 and were coming off a 7-9 season.

However, Oakland were giving hints of a possible bright future as bold moves were being made by Raiders general manager Reggie McKenzie, who signed a four-year contract extension in July last year.

Osemele was one of a few who saw what the Raiders were becoming. As he reflected on his free agency move, Osemele told *Kwesé*ESPN this month: "I had a conversation with my agent talking about personnel and the guys that are on each team.

"I had the opportunity to be on this team or be on the Vikings and I felt like both teams had quarterbacks that were young and had a lot of potential. But this team had offensive line pieces that I felt I would've fit in with more and been more comfortable with."

Signing a $60 million, five-year contract with the Bay Area side, Osemele instantly became a major building block of one of the NFL's more highly regarded offensive lines. Tasked with protecting quarterback Derek Carr, Osemele and his offensive linemates played their part en route to a 12-4 record for the Raiders, to go along with a wild card playoff spot.

Oakland fans envisioned the team going all the way to the AFC Championship game and possibly the Super Bowl, but all it took was one play in week 16 against the Indianapolis Colts to end those dreams.

Carr suffered a broken fibula after being sacked by then-Colts linebacker Trent Cole, and saw his season end right before the playoffs began. Talking about the injury to his quarterback, Osemele reflected: "When your franchise QB goes down, it's kind of hard not to think about [what could have been]."

"We're just happy that he's healthy. It's a new year. We take pride in protecting him and it's not gonna happen again."

Osemele added: "There's no question that we could've gone further if we had a healthy quarterback. I think that we have the ingredients to take this thing all the way. What we need obviously is to play great defense because defense wins championships. We also need to continue to be a physical offense."

When the NFL season is not underway, Osemele likes to see the world. His parents are from Nigeria and despite being born in Houston, Texas, the former Iowa State University player spent most of his summers going to Nigeria to visit relatives.

He recounts: "I went back every year until my 17th birthday. My grandma lives in Abuja so we'd go back and visit a lot. I haven't been since college started but I used to go back every summer. [To] Benin, Abuja and Lagos.

"We went to Benin because I think my dad had a business there. Abuja is where we visited my grandmother and it might have been my grandfather on my mom's side up in Benin (city) at the time too."

Seeing more of the world is something Osemele would like to do with more regularity but he would particularly like to visit South Africa, he says. Several NFL players have made trips there in recent years and Osemele would like to add the Rainbow Nation to the list of countries he has experienced.

Now though, with a healthy Carr and the addition of former All-Pro running back Marshawn Lynch (back after a one-year hiatus), his focus is on the field, with the Raiders offense stocked with talent and ready to complete what they started last season. They are off to a 2-1 start, despite a disappointing loss in Washington on Sunday night.

Osemele has played his part in opening running lanes for Lynch so far this season and he can see the slight differences between blocking for Lynch as opposed to other running backs he has blocked for.

"Marshawn is just a much bigger, much more physical running back. [He's] going to try to push for those extra yards. I guess it's basically having another offensive lineman where there's a guy that's just that physical," Osemele says.

"You don't really see running backs running over defensive tackles and continuing up the field. I think the difference isn't in the mentality because I think there's a lot of physical backs in the league. It's just the fact that Marshawn is just that type of special player where he's just that overpowering of a back that it's going to be hard to tackle him one on one."

The Raiders have even higher goals now after their playoff appearance last season. Osemele recognizes the last campaign as a stepping stone toward where he believes the team can get to.

He adds: "I think we're just scratching the surface right now. Derek is just continuing to grow. The offense is continuing to grow, the sky is really the limit. I think we're really just getting started right now. We're not where we need to be but I'm confident in the players we do have. We have a lot of talent, we just have to go out there and put it together on a consistent basis."

As the lone member of the Raiders offensive line with a Super Bowl ring, Osemele knows what it takes to get to the big game and leave with the trophy. If the Raiders' offensive line helps clear the path to another playoff appearance, Osemele will see the fruition of his decision to go west.

WR Cordarrelle Patterson

Versatile Cordarrelle Patterson enjoying the rhythm of the Raiders

By Matt Scheidman
September 22, 2017

ALAMEDA — Rapper 21 Savage boomed from a portable speaker inside the Raiders' locker room at team headquarters. Whoever carried the music was hidden around a corner.

With a smile spread across his face while rattling off the lyrics, Cordarrelle Patterson made his entrance. He held the stereo in one arm before resting it at his locker, music still blaring with few players in the area.

The care-free first-year Raider vowed to inject his personality into this locker room upon his arrival, to remain unchanged regardless of a change in scenery. Patterson, Minnesota's first-round pick in 2013, signed with the Raiders in free agency after four years with the Vikings. After totaling a meager seven yards on two touches in Week 1, Patterson — like this mundane afternoon in the locker room — made himself noticed.

He reeled off a 43-yard touchdown run against the Jets on a day when he tallied 63 total yards on four touches. If anything, Patterson's long score provided a glimpse of the intriguing new toy the Oakland offense has at its disposal in 2017.

"That was an example of some of the things we think we can do with him," Raiders' coach Jack Del Rio said. "He's like a Swiss Army knife. You can throw it to him. You can hand it to him. He can do a lot of different things."

It wasn't too long ago that a change in scenery made Patterson uneasy.

Instead of taking the high school to college route, Patterson first went to prep school. With no Division I offers out of Northwestern High School in South Carolina, Patterson followed a close friend to North Carolina Tech Preparatory Christian Academy. He didn't play football there in 2009, and wound up at Hutchinson Community College halfway across the country in Kansas.

"You're away from your family, hours away from your family. You don't know nobody. You gotta meet people for the first time," Patterson said. "You just gotta adjust to a whole new life, man. A lot of guys go to junior college, they drop out after a couple weeks. A lot of guys ain't built for that kind of pressure."

"He came in as a really, really cautious guy. He was not gonna put himself out there with anybody," said Rion Rhoades, Patterson's head coach at Hutchinson. "It's pretty awesome to see kind of how he is today."

Patterson knew there was potential that pressure could unearth. Despite a year away from football, those 944 receiving yards and 18 touchdowns his senior year of high school didn't just vanish. That talent resurfaced at Hutchinson, where Patterson set numerous school career records in 2010 and 2011. They used him as a wildcat quarterback, tailback, receiver and returner. Among those records: touchdowns (24), receptions (113), receiving yards (1,832) and all-purpose yards (3,379).

Versatility is what he's built a career on, both at Tennessee and with the Vikings. One coach at Tennessee circled back to Rhoades, thanking him for the idea to use Patterson in a myriad of ways. One year with the Vols catapulted him to the 29th overall selection in 2013, and in four years in Minnesota he was an explosive kick return specialist if not a breakout receiver. From 2013 to 2016 with the Vikings, Patterson scored 16 touchdowns — seven receiving, four rushing and five on kickoff returns.

Among the teams that courted Patterson was Washington, Oakland's opponent this Sunday night.

"He chose the Raiders, but very explosive guy," Washington coach Jay Gruden said. "You have to know where he is. You have to be ready for the reverses, him at halfback and all that good stuff. Great athlete, great talent."

"Jay Gruden, he's a great guy, man. He's real funny," Patterson said. "I met with him, man. We just had a blast, our little meeting we had. It was fun."

But talks with Derek Carr, offensive coordinator Todd Downing and others trumped any other offer. Patterson was promised the ball in Oakland, and not just the role of a "gadget guy." He wanted his full arsenal unleashed. Patterson was told the sky could be the limit with the Raiders. He entered his visit with criteria of what he wanted, and they exceeded it.

In the days after Patterson's 43-yard dash to the end zone against New York, those within the team have assured they knew this is what they were getting all along. While the receiving component hasn't emerged yet, Patterson has rushed for 62 yards on four carries and averaged almost 28 yards on four kick returns.

He's also willing to sacrifice his body in kickoff coverage as a gunner when requested.

"It's been really impressive to watch him take ownership of everything we've given him," Downing said. "As a coach, that's what you're looking for. It makes you want to invest in that guy and give him more."

It's evident Patterson is comfortable in his new home, which he couldn't say five years ago in Hutchinson, Kansas. Only two games into the season and the Raiders have already reaped the benefits of his versatility. After Sunday's win, before which Marshawn Lynch brought backups Jalen Richard and DeAndre Washington with him during introductions, Carr joked Patterson should join the running backs next time.

So far the Raiders have held true to their promise of giving Patterson the ball. In return, he's already showed he can handle whatever beat is thrown at him.

Training Camp Notebook: Jalen Richard Talks Lessons Learned From Marshawn Lynch

By Eddie Paskal

August 5, 2017

Jalen Richard doesn't want to be a fad.

He doesn't want to be another here today, gone tomorrow running back who ends up being nothing more than a blip on the NFL radar.

To put it in musical terms, he doesn't want to be A-ha, he wants to be the Rolling Stones.

"I want to be consistent, I don't want there to be a sophomore slump, or [to be] a one-hit wonder," said Richard. "I want to prove that I'm here to stay, and that I can do this on daily basis, and be impactful."

The undrafted running back enjoyed a strong start to his NFL career last season, finishing second on the team in rushing, as well as handling a majority of the return work for the Silver and Black, but as solid as he was, the memory of going undrafted, then receiving just one tryout offer is never far from his mind.

2016 was no doubt a fairytale year for the former Southern Miss Golden Eagle, from making the Raiders final roster, to taking his first career handoff 75 yards to the house in a stadium he grew up playing high school football in; it was an unforgettable 12 months for Richard. After such an emotional stretch, it's easy to see how complacency could set in, and for Richard to think that he finally "arrived," but instead, the Louisiana-native channeled that energy into something far more productive.

"The way to beat complacency, was I needed to really attack the offseason, and that's what I did, Richard explained. "I worked really, really hard in the offseason. I feel like harder than I did last year before making the team, and that was my way of beating that, and that the way to keep my edge on coming on. Hey, I've put in the work in the offseason, again like did last year, now I just have to focus on putting in the work while I'm here, bettering myself every day, and again proving myself that I'm worthy to be on this team, because that's the mentality that I have to keep, is I have to make the team every year. I have to make the team every year."

One key difference from Richard's first year to his second is the addition of Marshawn Lynch in the running backs room, and as much as No. 24 means to the community off the field, he's been a huge help for Richard on it.

So what exactly has Lynch imparted onto Richard in their few months together so far?

"I've learned to trust my gut more, as far as runs," Richard said. "Sometimes I question myself coming back after a play a lot, because I like to be perfect. I'm very high on being perfect, and making sure that if it was a three-yard run, I have to get that three, but then maybe get extra. Sometimes it doesn't always go that way, so I've been able to, with him, trust my gut more, and just let go, not even worry about that."

Richard went on, "He's taught me how to be patient. He's taught me some other tricks that I haven't been able to use yet because we haven't been that live, but different things that I'll do when I feel contact, and those things, so I look forward to putting those to the test."

With Lynch, Richard, DeAndré Washington, and fullback Jamize Olawale, the Raiders likely have one of, if not the, most complete group of running backs in the NFL, and as many dynamic receiving options as quarterback Derek Carr has at his disposal, Richard wants to make sure you don't forget about Bernie Parmalee's group.

"There's going to be a lot expected of us, and we understand that, from a protection standpoint, from a running the ball standpoint, and from being leaders," Richard said. "We look in the room, and it's crazy all the talent that we have, and we really can't wait to get out there."

Raiders Tight End Lee Smith's Impact Is Bigger Than Just On The Football Field

By Kyle Martin

August 2, 2017

Judging from his work on the gridiron, you might think you know Lee Smith, but the fact of the matter is there's much more than meets the eye with the 6'6", 265-pound Oakland Raiders tight end.

Originally drafted by the New England Patriots in the fifth-round of the 2011 NFL Draft, Smith was signed by the Silver and Black in 2015 as an unrestricted free agent, and he has had a significant impact on the team ever since.

When it comes to football, the Powell, Tenn., native is a bull you don't want to mess with. Smith has established himself as one of the best blocking tight ends in the game, and has that homegrown country strength that can intimidate you just by looking at him.

The Raiders offensive line was one of the best in the league last season, and as an extension of that group, Smith's relationship with the unit has grown the last couple years, but ask any one of them about him and they'll tell you he's a monster on the field.

"We look at him as the receiving offensive lineman," said guard Gabe Jackson when asked about Smith's game. "He brings great tenacity to the game, and attitude. So we always love playing with him because we always say he's crazy in a way, he's a great guy."

Last season, the team was only able to witness Smith's "craziness" for four games, after he injured his leg in Week 4 against the Baltimore Ravens, which ended up prematurely concluding his 2016 season.

Injuries are tough for any player, but for No. 86 it was especially difficult, given his relationship with his teammates. While he remained at the team's facility in Alameda, Calif., to rehab throughout the season, he felt different.

"The camaraderie is great," said Smith. "It was great being around doing my rehab and seeing the guys, but I wasn't out there battling with them every Sunday, so you kind of get to feeling disconnected."

Even though Smith's 18 career receptions as a member of the Silver and Black aren't astounding, it's what he does aside from his blocking, and work on the field, that makes him a dynamic component on the team.

The coaching staff is more than aware of how much he means to his peers, and the role he plays in helping this team be successful, and they're thrilled to have him back in the fold.

"Anytime a guy that brings so much spirit to the team is back, it's a good thing," said Head Coach Jack Del Rio. "He brings a lot of intangibles to the football team. He's a tough guy, he's a great teammate, he's very, very dependable. Having him back and having him healthy and out here doing his thing is good for us."

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“First of all, he’s a great teammate,” added Offensive Coordinator Todd Downing, who emphasized Smith’s impact on the group. “A wonderful veteran. He’s a great blocker. He works hard at everything that we ask him to do. He actually has really good hands. He’s more than just a blocking tight end.”

While the praise of his coaches means a great deal to him, Smith relishes in making his teammates proud, and above all else earning their respect. The brawny tight end is humble by nature, and is always willing to defer to those around him.

“I’m not a flashy player, I never have been,” said Smith. “[Wide receiver] Amari [Cooper], and [wide receiver Michael] ‘Crab’ [Crabtree], and [quarterback] Derek [Carr], and [defensive end] Khalil [Mack] are more than welcome to get all that glory, I like being behind the scenes. If my teammates have something nice to say about me because of the person I am, or the way I play, there’s no bigger compliment to me in the world than that.”

When you watch the way he interacts with his peers, it’s genuine and sincere. Whether he’s talking football or chopping it up, Smith is invested in not just his teammates, but his family. While football is important, the 29-year-old would rather leave a lasting, and influential, impression on his teammates.

It’s because of this mentality that Smith has stepped up as a mentor for the younger players on the team, and tried to help them along in their maturation process the same way he was.

“I’ve had a lot of great mentors when I was a young player that I kind of tried to stick to,” said Smith as he reflected for a moment. “I try not to beat them up too bad, or get on them, it’s stressful being a young player, but until you get ingrained and kind of find your niche, or your role, and you make the team, and you play a significant amount of time, this time of year is stressful. It’s hard on you mentally, and I just try to be there for those guys.”

While he’s trying to serve as a support system for “his guys,” Smith is continually trying to improve himself, as well as make the team better. After missing a majority of the season last year, he feels robbed and ready to back in the mix, as this team strives for greatness.

As one of the more devoted and dedicated players in the league, Smith is savvy enough to realize there’s no room for complacency in this business, and wants to make sure no one is settling for less.

“One of these days if the Oakland Raiders are number one in all those [offensive] statistics, then maybe we have finally nowhere else to go,” he said. “But until that time comes we’re always trying to get better. We’re coming in here every day trying to creep to that next level, and make this football team better.”

180-pound kicker (tries to) unleash inner defensive lineman

By Vic Tafur

August 7, 2017

Kickers have helmets and spare time at training camp, and that's been a dangerous combination for Giorgio Tavecchio.

At Raiders camp as a backup kicker, to save Sebastian Janikowski some wear and tear, Tavecchio was "inspired by the football spirit" one day. So he hit himself in the helmet and approached defensive line coach Jethro Franklin.

Franklin laughed. Tavecchio persisted.

"My spirit animal is a defensive lineman," he told Franklin. "I am just not built like one."

How could Franklin say no to that?

And that explains why every now and then in Napa, you see a little guy in a red jersey getting knocked around.

"I am a big team guy. I want to be part of the team and contribute," Tavecchio said. "Kickers don't get that many chances. So I was thinking, these poor bastards (nods to defensive players) are running around for the past week and a half with nobody to hit. ... The least I can do is give them a few shots, maybe cheer them up."

The former Cal kicker has taken about 30 to 40 hits so far, a couple in tackling drills that were clean enough that Tavecchio "went to a dark room afterward and contemplated life a little bit," he said joking.

But, hey, that's the life of a football player. That's why guys like Tavecchio put pads on.

"He told me in his next life he is going to be a defensive lineman," Franklin said. "He is a great kid. Great attitude. So we let him get in there every now and then and mix it up. Tough kid."

Tavecchio has eased up a little bit the last few practices, but still wants to help. On Saturday, the 5-foot-10, 180-pound kicker jumped in and squared off against 6-2, 350-pound Justin "Jelly" Ellis in a pass-rushing drill.

"Good luck to me," Tavecchio said, rolling his eyes at the memory. "Jelly told me to put all of my weight on him as much as possible. He wanted to feel even a little bit of resistance ... I tried."

How did it go? Let's just say when the play was over, Ellis flicked his wrist like he was shooing away a fly and Tavecchio ran back to the other field where Janikowski was.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

“Just the one rep that day,” Tavecchio said.

Franklin has gotten more than a few chuckles out of his special project.

“He’s got that defensive-lineman mentality, but that body just can’t bear the load,” Franklin said. “That’s why some days we just have him hold the (tackling) bag for us. He gives it all he has, and then Khalil (Mack) just taps the bag and Giorgio goes flying.”

So, if not as a defensive lineman, how about making the NFL as a kicker? This is Tavecchio’s third training camp with the Raiders, and he feels he is getting closer to making it every year.

“My technique and confidence gets better every year,” he said. “I am very grateful to be here in camp and just hoping for a chance.”

Tavecchio, 27, has also been in training camp with the 49ers, Packers and Lions. During the regular season, he’s worked at restaurants, furniture stores, brokerage firms, tech companies and, last year, helping out with kickers at Cal.

The Raiders’ preseason opener Saturday at Arizona is a chance for Tavecchio to hit a kick on film and make an impression around the league.

“And here, too, hopefully,” he said. “Whatever comes my way, I hope to take advantage of it.”

Tavecchio mostly talks soccer with Janikowski, but he said the kicker has opened up the last couple years with some kicking advice.

Giddy enough to stand in front of guys almost twice his size, square up and take a hit.

Raiders K Giorgio Tavecchio still chasing dream after 6 NFL camps

By Michael Gehlken

August 21, 2017

OAKLAND, Calif. — This foray into football began innocently enough for Giorgio Tavecchio.

It was fun.

A catchy Italian song from the 1950s, “Eh, Cumpari!” by Julius La Rosa, bounced from the stadium speakers at Campolindo High in Moraga, California, whenever the Italian-American took the field for a field goal or extra point. He relished the time spent with friends. The sport unexpectedly morphed into a college opportunity; he was set to play Division I soccer at UC Davis before California extended a late invite to be a freshman walk-on.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Three days after his first college practice, he kicked off Cal's 2008 season opener against Michigan State.

So much fun in such a short span. He since has learned to bide his time.

Tavecchio, the Raiders' backup kicker, is 27 years old and recently finished his sixth NFL training camp. He has yet to appear in an NFL regular-season game. His story is one of patience, perseverance and an ongoing chase for perfection that he hopes, one day, will produce a professional opportunity. It continues this Saturday on the road against the Dallas Cowboys.

This is Tavecchio's third preseason with the Raiders. So far, he's been as steady in games as in practices, converting both extra-point attempts and a lone field-goal try of 43 yards.

"To me, he's grown," coach Jack Del Rio said. "I think he's right on the edge. We're happy to have him back competing. I think he's a good, young kicker. Those guys sometimes will bounce for a while before they finally catch on and get a career going. He has a lot of desire. He has a good leg. I like the way he's worked."

It was difficult to miss Tavecchio in camp.

The Milan, Italy, native stands 5 feet, 10 inches. He weighs 182 pounds and wears a No. 2 red jersey. But there he was, holding a tackle bag for certain drills against defensive linemen, linebackers and defensive backs. He wanted to contribute as a teammate any way he could, he said, without being a detriment. His frame allowed a lower target for defenders practicing their pad height.

One day, he hopes to contribute as a kicker.

That largely is what his journey is about.

"As I look back, there is a waterfall of gratitude for these experiences, these moments, even these difficult moments," Tavecchio said, "because I'm rewarded with a glimpse of myself that I think has made me feel like I'm 75 years old with the amount of life I've lived."

Last prospect

There was much to see at the 2012 Cal pro day.

Scouts from across the NFL convened to evaluate the school's draft-eligible talent. Offensive tackle Mitchell Schwartz and linebacker Mychal Kendricks would be drafted in the second round. Punter Bryan Anger went in the third. Three others were selected on the draft's third day, including wide receiver Marvin Jones by the Cincinnati Bengals as a fifth-round steal.

But zero scouts saw Tavecchio.

As he warmed up to punctuate the afternoon, rain fell on Berkeley. Scouts flipped up their jacket hoods. They lowered their heads to keep their faces dry. Having seen the top prospects, they left the field and retired to the parking lot.

The storm shone light on the last prospect remaining.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Anyone wanting to learn about Tavecchio could have grabbed an umbrella and lingered. They would've seen a kicker who spent months training for his March pro day and was determined to complete the workout as if every scout in the league was observing behind binoculars.

"By the time I was done with my set, maybe 45 minutes later, I had kicked probably 30 field goals, a couple kickoffs," Tavecchio said. "There was just my team chaplain (Kevin Knox) and a couple teammates (kicker Vincenzo D'Amato and punter Jed Barnett). ... I noticed (the scouts), but this is one of those things that kickers can understand. You don't want the circumstances to dictate your behavior or actions.

"I told myself, 'I'm going to kick during my pro day.' So, I went to kick for my pro day. If nobody is watching, nobody is watching."

He went undrafted and signed with the San Francisco 49ers. Their special teams coordinator at the time, Brad Seely, holds the same position with the Raiders now. He was cut before the season. Tavecchio signed with the Green Bay Packers in 2013. He was cut before the season. He signed in 2014 with the Detroit Lions, who cut him before the season. The Raiders added him only to cut him a few days later before the same season.

He has spent the 2015, 2016 and 2017 offseasons with the Raiders.

So far, each has ended the same way.

Still kicking

By many measures, Tavecchio does not need this.

He has a political economy degree, which readily applies to international relations. He has work experience unrelated to cleats, goal posts or holding a bag for 330-pound linemen who knock him on his heels or worse. Last winter, he completed a 12-week training program with MediaMath, an ad technology company, on the 45th floor of the World Trade Center. He had offers to work in the company's New York or London office.

Yet intrinsically, he does need this.

He must finish this.

Tavecchio is a backup to the longest-running kicker show in the NFL. "Sebastian Janikowski the Raider" first debuted in 2000. The 39-year-old veteran may not be cheap against the salary cap, and he is entering a contract year. But his ability and experience are expected to extend the program into an 18th season.

UC Berkeley would do well to consider Tavecchio for an honorary philosophy degree.

His river of experience affords him perspective.

He understands the paradoxes to his NFL journey. No, he has not kicked in a regular-season game. The longer he is denied the chance, the more he wants it. Still, he recognizes the folly if he makes more of it than what it is. He keeps loose and has fun to prevent the effect of time from consuming him.

In training camp, no one played "Eh, Cumpari!" but he enjoyed himself and considers the summer the strongest of his career.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Likewise, he seeks to appreciate the journey.

If he is released despite his best efforts, a failure of result will not equal a failure in process. He must maintain belief in the latter. In the same breath, he recognizes the binary nature to the NFL. Win or lose. Make a kick or miss it. On the roster or off it.

“Reconciling those two worlds has been a beautiful ride,” Tavecchio said. “It’s been a passion. It’s caused me to suffer. It’s caused me to love. It’s what gets me up every morning. That, and my faith in God, is why I’m still here.”

Meet Giorgio Tavecchio, the Raiders’ unconventional new kicker

By Matt Schneidman

September 12, 2017

ALAMEDA — Shortly after his record-setting NFL debut, Giorgio Tavecchio received a text on his flip phone asking if he planned to party upon returning to California Sunday night.

Tavecchio, 27, explained to his two college roommates in the group chat that if the Raiders’ team plane arrived in time, in accordance with his college tradition of going to church on weekend nights, he would attend 10 p.m. Mass instead.

“One hundred percent, he will go to Mass,” Jed Barnett, one of the friends in the chat, said on Sunday afternoon. “He will go to the 10 o’clock candlelight without a question.”

Vincenzo D’Amato, the third member of the group, agreed.

Asked Tuesday in the Raiders’ locker room whether he actually went to church Sunday night, Tavecchio responded, “Yep, 10 p.m. Mass.”

Indeed, Tavecchio attended church the same day he became the first kicker in NFL history to hit two 50-plus-yard field goals in his regular-season debut. Yes, he still owns a flip phone. He also fancies crossword puzzles in coffee shops, obsesses over cappuccinos and volunteers at soup kitchens.

He’s cycled through four teams since 2012, including three preseasons with the Raiders. Tavecchio’s daunting task in his first regular-season game — replace Sebastian Janikowski, the longest-tenured Raider and the team’s all-time leading scorer. Janikowski was placed on injured reserve Friday with a back injury.

Tavecchio, a 5-foot-10, curly-haired Italy native, considered giving up after the Raiders cut him in 2016. The NFL dream tugged him back despite repeated failures, but his story is more than a soccer-player-turned kicker finally having success in the NFL.

The things Tavecchio does, the way he talks and how out of place he looks in the locker room make him different than his NFL peers. Yet that’s what his teammates, current and former coaches and close friends love about him.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

Tavecchio showed up to practice at Cal his first week of school in 2008. He was a walk-on and didn't even attend preseason camp.

After an impressive first practice, then-Cal head coach Jeff Tedford offered Tavecchio the chance to handle kickoffs in the upcoming season-opener. Actually, he offered "Giovanni" the chance, and the freshman who rode his bike to campus from Moraga accepted even though his coach didn't know his name.

Tavecchio's eyes wandered while he pressed his hands against the ball before placing it on the tee for his first kickoff. "He's looking around like Rudy, looking around the stadium. It's packed," Tedford said. "Just kind of taking it all in type of thing."

The only problem? A 25-second kick clock had just been implemented for college football. Tavecchio had no idea. Teammates and coaches had to tell him to hurry up.

Tavecchio wasn't a stereotypical football player in high school. His coach at Campolindo High, Kevin Macy, said Tavecchio put a map of Italy on his play-calling wristband and showed it off before games. Once when Macy wanted an onside kick – a "pooch" kick – Tavecchio spoke in such a rapid Italian accent while asking multiple times if he should kick it left or right that he flustered his own teammates.

Tavecchio didn't fit into the mold of a football player at Cal either, nor does he now.

College roommates made fun of him for doing crossword puzzles in the campus coffee shop. He frequented Cafe Strada with D'Amato, a fellow Italy native, where they'd engage in long personal talks over cups of cappuccino – always cappuccino, and nothing else – while yearning for vacations to their home country. Tavecchio despises frozen and boxed foods, Barnett said, since his tastes are simply in a higher class after years of eating his mom's lasagna.

Tavecchio is dormant on social media, and his Facebook cover photo hasn't been updated in over five years. His profile picture is a stack of cheese next to a loaf of bread, a picture clearly untouched for some time.

"Purposely leads a simple life without distractions," said Jamie Kohl, Tavecchio's former coach at Kohl's Kicking Camps, "and he literally has a passion to kick a football."

That passion has been tested over the past half-decade. Tavecchio's political economy major could've netted him multiple jobs, but he insisted on pursuing an NFL roster spot.

"He's lost a bunch of money. He's lost career opportunities," Kohl said. "A lot of people have reached out to him with great jobs."

After the Raiders cut him last year, Tavecchio confided in close friend Jordan Kay that it might be time to hang up his cleats once and for all.

Kay said that was the first time Tavecchio had expressed doubt to him. Instead, the Campolindo High product will kick for the Raiders in Sunday's home opener against the New York Jets after his spectacular debut against Tennessee. On top of two 52-yarders, he hit field goals from 20 and 43 yards, as well as two extra points.

Until his second act, Tavecchio may be found at a local soup kitchen, volunteering his time as he's often done on Friday and Saturday mornings. He's a little busier late in the week this year as opposed to this time in years past, but don't be surprised if he finds time, just like he did for church late Sunday night after his name became one of the hottest around the NFL.

"When you picture that person that every parent wants their daughter to be associated with, or wants his son to be like, that's Giorgio," Barnett said. "He's a true servant."

Persistence pays off for Raiders kicker Tavecchio

By Ron Kroichick

September 12, 2017

Not even 28 hours after he booted his way into NFL lore, Giorgio Tavecchio knelt on the turf at his old high school. He might have made four field goals Sunday in Nashville, but now he was the holder for teenage kickers in Moraga.

He chatted with these Campolindo High kids like an older brother, trading jokes and offering tips. The journey leading to Tavecchio's extraordinary debut for the Raiders started at Campolindo, in many ways. So that's where he went Monday, as he has done on many Mondays during recent seasons.

Tavecchio's pro football odyssey drips with perseverance — or, as Renato Tavecchio put it in describing his son, the right kind of stubbornness. More than 5½ years elapsed between Giorgio Tavecchio's final game at Cal, the Holiday Bowl on Dec. 28, 2011, and his inaugural NFL regular-season outing.

Every year, he prepared diligently and reported to training camp with high hopes. Every year, he headed home disappointed.

Raiders kicker Giorgio Tavecchio routinely helps out kickers at his alma mater, Campolindo High in Moraga. He was there Monday, one day after kicking four field goals in his long-awaited NFL debut.

This time, Sebastian Janikowski's back injury re-opened the door — and Tavecchio, at age 27, barged through it, becoming the first kicker to make two field goals of 50-plus yards in his NFL debut.

Perseverance rewarded.

"I'd have to say very few people can do what Giorgio did," said former Cal punter Mike Ahr, the volunteer kicking coach at Campolindo and a longtime friend. "They'd probably check out before it went this long, but he stayed at it."

He stayed at it despite getting released by the 49ers in 2012, the Packers in 2013 and the Lions in 2014. Tavecchio hooked up with the Raiders later in '14, then returned for training camp in 2015, '16 and '17. All three times, he was cut.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

His best chance probably came with Detroit. He kicked well in training camp and the exhibition season, but the Lions kept Nate Freese, their seventh-round draft choice. Freese lasted three games, making only 3 of 7 field-goal attempts.

Rather than summon Tavecchio, the Lions picked up Alex Henery (for two games) and ultimately Matt Prater. Tavecchio trudged along, upbeat by nature but disheartened as his chances kept slipping away.

“I was frustrated and disappointed,” he said. “It’s hard, because I kept blaming myself. Obviously, I’m the one kicking the ball, so I take responsibility, but maybe things in life happen for a reason and it’s not always your fault.”

“I believe God always has a plan, so maybe in those situations it just wasn’t the right time. Who’s to say this is the right time? This was just one moment, one game, one experience (with the Raiders). We’ll see what the future has in store.”

Ahr’s message, as he recalled: “I just told him, ‘Giorgio, you have a window. Guys like me are outside the window. Do what you can while you have the opportunity, and have no regrets.’”

That became Tavecchio’s unofficial mantra. He kept one eye on other careers, even completing a 12-week training program this past winter and spring at MediaMath, a tech company in New York. (His younger brother, Marco, works in the company’s London office.)

But he remained committed to his craft. On vacation in his native Italy, he found a gym where he would lift weights. During his time in New York, he made early-morning visits to a vacant field, cleared the snow by hand and kicked.

“That’s dedication,” Renato Tavecchio said. “It’s his passion. There’s no other way to say it.”

The stint at MediaMath prompted Tavecchio to contemplate his next step. He had two job offers with the company and seriously contemplated them — and moving on with his life, as he put it.

Then the Raiders called again, and Tavecchio couldn’t resist.

More than anything, he stuck with football because he wanted to prove to himself he could do it. That propelled him, the confidence he was good enough to make an NFL roster and handle the smothering pressure on a kicker.

He handled it Sunday, converting all his kicks — two extra points (essentially 33-yard kicks) and field-goal attempts from 20, 52, 52 and 43 yards. His dad was so nervous, he bounced from his home to a neighbor’s house and back as he watched on television.

“I love the art of kicking, the science of it,” Giorgio Tavecchio said. “That’s something I’ve become very passionate about. For me, it’s a convergence of mind, body and spirit. It’s such a simple activity, but to me, when it’s done right, it’s a thing of art.”

Tavecchio, as you might surmise, is articulate and creative. He was born in Milan and moved with his family to Connecticut, Rome, Moraga and Washington, D.C., before finally settling back in Moraga in April 2005, near the end of his freshman year in high school.

OAKLAND RAIDERS FEATURE CLIPS

He kicked at Campolindo for three years, spurned a chance to play soccer at UC Davis when Cal offered him preferred walk-on status in football and ultimately earned a scholarship his junior year. Tavecchio was 20 of 23 on field-goal attempts as a senior with the Bears.

His fascination with the art of kicking dates to high school. He often joined his teammates in head coach Kevin Macy's office during lunch, watching video of the Cougars' next opponent.

"My buddies would always fast-forward through all the special teams," Tavecchio recalled, "and I'd say, 'Stop! That's the only reason I'm here!'"

And now, as a 27-year-old NFL rookie fresh off a landmark debut, Tavecchio was back at Campolindo on Monday. He enjoys working with young kickers and lives with his parents two blocks away, so why not?

Cristian Antezana (class of '14) often joins Tavecchio in offering guidance to their successors. Antezana made the game-winning field goal against Marin Catholic in the 2011 North Coast Section title game at the Coliseum, and now Antezana is pondering his next move after stops at City College of San Francisco and Utah.

This much is clear: Antezana doesn't plan to give up kicking, in part because of Tavecchio's remarkable journey.

"He's an inspiration to me," Antezana said. "A big-time inspiration."
